Affidavit of Justin Durel
157A 1883

Mr Justin Durel, being duly sworn depones & says: I was during or about the year 1869, the owner of that Certain tract of land, known as the Durel tract, situated at the mouth of the Pascagoula river, on the East side thereof, in Jackson County, State of Mississippi, a portion of which tract I have since sold to B. W. Taylor, the grantor of Mrs Ada Henry, the actual owner thereof; That at the time of my purchase of said tract, to wit: about 1869, there were gate posts standing on the East side of said property, across the space or open ground now used as a road, on the rear thereof; upon taking possession of said property as purchaser I caused gates to be erected across said space or open ground on the North & East sides of said property. Sometime later, to wit: whilst the M. R. Road was being built, I caused to placed on the gates erected by me as aforesaid, signs reading substantially as follows: "This is No Public Road." and I myself caused many people who attempted to pass through said gates to return the way they had come. Previously to my

REMARKS.

In making the survey for the L. N. Dantzler property I began at NW corner of Sect 13. T. 8. R. 6. and measured East 775 feet the width of the Hotel property and from that point run South to Beach. So as to divide the Hotel property from Dantzler proper. and then established the west boundary of Ruths and ran a dividing line between Dantzler and Ruths properties, and finding between only 647 feet.

Together with all and singular the rights, privileges and appurtenances thereunto belonging,

April 7, 1979

Marie Louise Dupont based her claim to a piece of land (1 league square on the Pascagoula River) on a Spanish permit dated December 1, 1803. This Spanish grant was issued by Cayetano Perez and the land was not surveyed. Dupont claimed that the land had been cultivated and inhabited from 1774 - 1814. According to the information supplied previously by Building Conservation Technology, Inc., this is the plot on which the "Old Spanish Fort" stands.

The claim of Marie Louise Dupont is cited in the 1816 Register of Claims East of the Pearl River in American State Papers, Public Lands Section, Vol. 3, p. 11.

On June 10, 1815, William Crawford, Land Commissioner, provided "A List of Actual Settlers in the District East of Pearl River, Louisiana, Who Have No Claims Derived from Either the French, British or Spanish Governments." William Kirkwood was listed as having settled on the land originally belonging to Madame Dupont on the Pascagoula River. The date of Kirkwood's settlement there was given as November 1810 and the date of the original settlement was given as "1803 and cont. 2 years". Land Commissioner Crawford stated that few maps accompanied these settlers' claims, so the claims were difficult to particularize. This list also appears in Volume 3 of the American State Papers.

An examination of the inventory of colonial documents in the C 13 A series of the Archives Nationales in Paris yields the following information:

1. In March 1726 Merveilleux submitted a memoire to the French government concerning a fort on the Pascagoula River. (This was mentioned in the last report). New information is that this fort was supposed to be used for trade with the Chactas (Choctaw) Indians.

2. Sieurs De La Pointe and De La Vergne, residents of Pascagoula, had contracts with the Superior Council in 1725 to furnish lumber to Mobile.

Joseph Collins was appointed by Spanish Surveyor General Vicente Pintado to be the special surveyor of the Pascagoula post on April 22, 1806. The enclosed plan and legend is for 684 arpents granted to Collins in 1800. The plan shows a house and a mill. This land is in the vicinity of the Fish River. Perhaps with the use of scientific instruments and the old legend, the location of the house and mill could be more accurately determined. The "perch of the city of Paris" was about 100 English inches, but I have also seen it given as 200 English inches. The plan and legend are from the Pintado Papers at the Tulane University Special Collections Division.

In addition, much peripheral information has been located. This includes

Dear Mr Lippian,

It was such an eventful day at the Old Spanish Fort, that I've been telling everyone about it. Now she came to find that my great grandmother was of the Delmas family and married a Krebs. My fathers mother, a Krebs, married Rudolph Reinecke. As well as I remember Aunt Cecile was a Krebs, my fathers aunt, who lived in the Fort while I visited there, at age 5 and we slept there. She married a Schafer, don't know if this is the right spelling. My mother told me about seeing Tante Cecile climb up on a ladder and cut the flowers off the great century plant that grew in the front yard. This was before I was born. My father & his brother lived in the old Reinecke home in adjoining land. They built a sail boat to-gether and entered the regatta on Krebs lake + won. They were young in their teens. I remember Papa taking us 3 kids on a row boat to crab in the lagoons off Krebs lake. An alagator almost turned us over - Papa + my brother beat at it with the oars. Papa also took us about the tunnel - & on the river. He said the music at night throw herself into the river from a over hanging limb of a great tree, because her lover was killed because he was of another tribe + they could not marry. There she moans + sings her love song. He told us he heard it many times while comin home from fishing or duck hunting when a boy. And it was very loud at times and low at others. I can remember running thru the orange trees to the old Fort while playing with the Patty White kids, my cousins, And there was an old cherry tree that we climbed in and ate the cherries. Also we had oranges and pecans from the trees that grew around the two places. My father always received 10 lbs of paper shell pecans on Xmas from there, sent by his brother.

At the age of 12 or 13 years we passed thru Pascagula and stayed at Eugenia Whites home on the river. We spent one day at the Whites and I remember the Old Fort was empty we ran around it + crawled into it and measured the thickness of the walls - just like kids do now. Played on the beach - climbed trees, I do hope some of this can be of use to your program and the history of the Fort. I know it was always a big subject in our family. My father always spoke in beautiful French and his mother wrote all her letters to him in French. Papa sang little French songs to us and played the piano.

Enclosed is the clipping my brother brought back with him from a trip to Nicaragua 1956.

Yours very truly
Susan M. Rose

Remarks.

Though the original Grants upon which the preceding Claims are founded have been lost yet it is conceived that the Claims to such lots, as were inhabited, and cultivated under the Spanish Government, or such as were built upon by permission of the Spanish authorities ought to be confirmed. Wm. Crawford
Commissioner

Land Office St Stephens Ala.
February 8th 1838

Sir,

We have been called upon to issue Patent Certificates in the case of Mary, Etienne [illegible] Krebs for Lots in the town of [illegible]

In Report No 11 of the Commissioner Wm Crawford Claims No 11 & 12 are reported on, and a Register of Certificates of Confirmation, corresponding, on Record. — The case of Claim No 10 in the Report No 11 seems an incomplete record — and it does not appear by the Record of Certificates of Confirmation, that a Certificate was issued for it. —

As we [illegible] to [illegible] any further to obtain some instructions from the Department we have thought it would be proper to give you a full view of the case, and accordingly [illegible] recorded in the Book of Claims laid before Wm Crawford Commissioner & acted on by him. —

We confess Sir, we are at a loss to account for the meagre report presented by the Book of Report in case No 10, as it is evident that the Commissioner was fully disposed to report in its favour, and equally that it stood on as high ground as the accompanying lots Numbered 11 & 12. —

If it should be an accidental omission it equally prevent us from acting on the Record, it stands without any designation of Soil &c. no Certificate of Confirmation on Record to explain it — or make up the defect —

No action appears on those cases by the Board succeeding Mr Crawford further than the Record of Certificates of Confirmation in No 8 — which is without signature, but is presumed from the No 5 just previous, signed by

Wm Barton

DO NOT CIRCULATE

JOHANN KREBS (KRIEBS) of Neumagen on the Moselle, in the Archbishopric of Trier or Treves, then an independent principality whose Archbishop was an Elector of the German Emperor--now a part of the Rhineland-Palatinate in West Germany--but anciently a Roman Imperial seat, home of the Treveri, a Celtic people famed for raising of horses and mechanical inventions--a part of Lorraine after Charlemagne's Empire crumbled--and under French rule frequently from 1688 until Napoleon's fall and from after World War One until shortly before World War II.

(Johann Krebs or Kriebs died in Neumagen October 12,1751.)

The State of Mississipi
Jackson County

Be it known that before me, LEWIS A. FREDERIC notary public for and in the foresaid, etc. personally appeared JACOB BANG, of this aforesaid, etc., and Jn. B. ELLIS, also of this aforesaid county, both known to me to be ancient settlers on the bay of Pascagoula, who made oath that to the best of their knowledge, ANTOINE BLANC was in possession, under the Spanish government of a certain tract of land, sutuated on the west side of Pascagoula bay, bounded on the West by the Bayou aus Prunes and the land of Mrs. V'e Baudreaus; on the East by the bayou "La Motte" and the land of ELIZABETH (a free griffon), on the north by vacant lands, on the south by the Sea; said tract of land being & lying at the mouth of the west branch of the river Pascagoula. Both the deponents, furthermore say that Jn. Bts. Baudreaux Senior had said tract of land in charge (?) For the above named ANTOINE BLANC, and that ..... Jn. B. NICOLET was Syndic at Pascagoula, and under the Spanish government, a man by the name of BERNARD CROZIT, attempting to encroach on said land, he said Bernard Croize' was expelled on order of the loyal authorities of the time, and J.B. BAUDREAUX, Senior, for his ..... Antoine Blanc maintained and protected in the possession of the same. Both the deponents furthermore say that Jn. B. Baudreaux Junior at the death of his father, the above named Jn B. Baudreaux Senior, that the said Jn. B. Budreaux, Junior was appointed to continue to have the above deposited land in charge, and that he did cultivate and inhabit said tract of land for his constituent (?) Antoine Blanc - Both the deponents furthermore sat that to the best of their knowledge VALENTINE DELMAS of Pascagoula purchased said land from the heirs of ANTOINE BLANC, and that the said Jn. B. Delmas did, leave the same in charge to Jn. B. Baudreaux, Jr.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto caused both JACOB BANG and J.B. ELLIS to sign their names on these presents, and I have on the same set my name and affixed my notary seal on this seventeenth day of May A.D. 1834.

Dear Mrs. Rodgers:

Enclosed are the photocopies of documents that you requested from the Ellen Foster Collection. Katrina King of our staff copied these for you and you should know (from the inventory) that the originals were unfortunately laminated in heavy plastic and that may account for some illegibility in the copies.

I apologize for the time delay in getting these to you. The start of classes here always interrupts our work flow with the need to teach classes, give tours, work with the faculty on course assignments and the like.

Please let me know if we can be of further help.

Sincerely yours,

Dean DeBolt

Lanzos to Carondelet

August 1, 1792 [45]

No. 148.

I am placing in the hands of Your Lordship the accompanying memorial from the inhabitants of Pascagoula. They consider it certain that, if the presents which the Indians now go to get at Orleans (which is their reason for passing along those roads) were given to them here or in Pensacola, the injuries from which the inhabitants suffer would cease. I replied to them that the government could do no less than give the presents to the Indians in the place which would be most favorable to the royal interests. This undoubtedly is that of Orleans, and I would petition Your Lordship to charge the interpreter Tornaret to tell the Indians, on behalf of Your Lordship, not to commit those offenses.

God keep Your Lordship many years.

Indian Commissions Issued by Blount

August 10, 1792 [46]

[Seal]

William Blount, governor in and over the Territory of the united states of america south of the river ohio, & superintendent of Indian affairs for the southern District:

To all who shall see these presents, greeting.

Know ye that in consideration of the proofs of fidelity & friendship which we have had of the Indian called Tussunacooboyè of the choctaw nation, maintaining close unity with the united states; of his valour and consequence with the neighbouring nations and of his good disposition & knowledge to command; desiring to recommend such good qualities, I do appoint him Gorget Captain admonishing him of the value he ought to put thereon, the obligation to govern his people well, and the respect he is to bear to the United States; venerating the name of the president.

For these reasons, we require all citizens of the united states to acknowledge him Gorget Captain as aforesaid; the same to the indians of his nation, that they respect and obey him.

Given under my hand and seal in the said Territory this tenth day of Augt—one thousand Seven Hundred & ninety two Olivier having written to me that he was going to go back to Orleans by way of Mobile, and learning from Panton that he has already gone, I despatched the open letter which Your Lordship sent me by a special messenger to Mobile, to try to overtake him.

I am sending to Your Lordship some sheets from Milford and copies of others which he has written to me.

I received the letter Your Lordship sent me for Folch, but up to now there is no news of him.

As yet there has been no opportunity to send the letter to Bloody Fellow, but Panton tells me there soon will be. The sabre and bracelets for Spaniacho I shall also send at the first opportunity.

The storehouse at San Bernardo has been repaired, but unless an entire new roof is put on the treasurer's office, it will be better to leave it, for if you touch it, is likely to fall down. I shall send to Apalache a prisoner who is a mason to repair the hospital and oven.

I have had a conference this morning with the Hallowing King when he gave me the message of which I enclose a copy.

I spoke to Panton about sending Your Lordship the sealing-wax. I am at Your Lordship's orders. Your most respectful, obedient servant, who kisses your hands,

ENRIQUE WHITE (Rubric)

The reply which I gave to the Hallowing King was that Olivier counseled them not to be the aggressors, but that it was natural in every man on seeing himself attacked to defend his life, his women, his children, and his property and that he could count on our protection and assistance.

Since Indians will be coming now every day, the bad rice might be cleaned a little and used for them, for it is necessary to give them provisions while they remain here and for their return.

Marbury tells me that at Orleans he was given a parcel of government papers for me, but meeting contrary winds on the voyage he disembarked at Pascagoula and came by land. He left the papers on board the bark Pescador, on which they were coming. As the bark does not appear, it will be better for Your Lordship to order duplicates of the documents sent to me if they are important.

Within a few days the fort of Santa Rosa will be entirely finished. I have part of the prisoners repairing the road from San Miguel, which the rains have made impassable. I again place myself at the orders of Your Lordship, etc.

Inhabitants of Pascagoula to Carondelet

June 15, 1792 [34]

Governor and Intendant General: Joseph Krebs, resident of Pascagoulas, in the name of all the inhabitants from that river to the Bay Saint Louis: With all due respect to Your Lordship, they state and say that the continued presence of the Indian nations along this coast in their journeys to and from that capital results in considerable damage to them, not only in the crops which they raise for the maintenance of themselves and their poor families, but also in the cattle belonging to them which the Indians kill and wound; for it happens that when there are a number of head of cattle together at the time when they try to kill one to eat, they do not take the slightest precaution to select just one, but injure others with the shots of the guns they use. Consequently the loss is much greater for this reason.

In view of the above fact, the inhabitants humbly beg Your Lordship to take under consideration the dire situation in which they find themselves on account of the large number of their families and the slight recourse they have for their support by raising the animals, and provide the best measures, in accordance with your usual justice. They beg you to keep them from experiencing in the future the injuries

SEÑOR GOVERNOR: It is true that the inhabitants of Pascagoula suffer all the injuries and damage from the Indians which they report in this petition presented to Your Lordship. Upon leaving that town for their villages, the Indians are given three days' provision for the journey which they often use up before they set out on the march. Then, since the route to most of their villages is by way of the Pascagoula River they encounter the cattle there and kill them, as has been reported. This damage cannot be remedied except by depriving the Indians of the use of this route and by presenting them with gifts here or in Pensacola instead of at that capital. Only by these means can the inhabitants be assured that the Indians will not pass. Your Lordship will take such measures as may seem best to you.

furnishing militiamen with less ability than those of French origin.[41]

The descendants of the Germans rapidly became assimilated into French-Louisiana society. They quickly forgot their German dialects, particularly those born to linguistically mixed parentage. As early as the eighteenth century, German family names were becoming Gallicized. For example, "Rommel" became "Romme," "Scheckschneider" became "Cheznaidre," "Shaf" became "Chauffe," "Shantz" became "Chance," "Zweig" was translated "La Branche," and "Schneider" became "La Taille." Later in the nineteenth century many of these same names became Anglicized. Deiler's work presents a long list of Gallicized creole names that were originally German. Today, the descendants of these early emigrants speak English; but often French, or at least the Louisiana dialect, is spoken in the family circle. There is very little to differentiate them from other French Louisianians.

The linguistic assimilation of the Germans on the German Coast proceeded apace a bit slower than that of their brethern isolated in French communities. However, one does not find in Louisiana a Franco-German patois comparable to that of the Pennsylvania Dutch, who speak a patois composed of German, English, and Dutch.[42]

Beyond the German Coast there were some secondary centers of German population in Louisiana. One of these grouped around a certain Hugo Ernestus Krebs, originally from Neumagen in the Moselle Valley, who married Marie de la Pointe and owned a plantation on the Pascagoula River. Still another German proprietor was the Swiss Jean-Daniel Koly, the one-time financial adviser to the elector of Bavaria, who founded the concession of St. Catherine near Natchez. This settlement, however, disappeared during the Indian massacre of 1729.

[41] This is an unlikely statement after one reflects on the part played by the German settlers in the rebellion of 1768, and their participation in Galvez's expedition to the Floridas during the American war for independence.

[42] This patois is spoken by some 300,000 persons in Pennsylvania as indicated in the recent study by Edwin Miller Fogger, Reliefs and Superstitions of the Pennsylvania Germans (Philadelphia, 1915).

Founds new chapter

DAR chapter to be named for baron

A new chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution was organized recently, honoring one of the earliest phases of history in the Singing River country of Pascagoula.

An organizing regent, Mrs. Lester Scheffler of Pascagoula hosted the organizational meeting of the new chapter, named for Baron Hugo Ernestus von Krebs (1714-1778).

The baron emigrated form the Alsace-Lorraine district of Europe to the shores of what came to be known as Krebs Lake in 1730, marrying the younger daughter of Simon Joseph de la Pointe, Marie-Therese, and settling down on the de la Pointe plantation to found the Krebs family.

In time Krebs became the lord of a vast estate on the banks of Krebs Lake, and expanded the de la Pointe plantation to include many outbuildings. One of the most famous of these is the baron's carpentry shop, now known as the Old Spanish Fort and Museum. It was here, in this building of oyster shell mortar, that Krebs first invented and used the cotton gin.

Officers of the newly formed DAR chapter were installed at ceremonies in the Scheffler home, presided over by Mrs. Quin Gautier, immediate past regent of the Duchess de Chaumont Chapter, DAR, of Pascagoula.

Installed as regent was Mrs. Scheffler, a member of the National Society Colonial Dames XVII century; the National Society Magna Carta Dames; The Sovereign Colonial Society Americans of Royal Descent; the Society of Descendants of Knights of the Most Noble Order of the Garter; past president of the Pascagoula-Moss Point Music Club; the Jackson County Genealogical Society and the Pascagoula Woman's Club.

There are 15 charter members in the new chapter, 12 of whom are descendants of the oldest families of Jackson County, including Bragg, Broun, Brown, Carter, Cirlot, Cumbest, Delmas, Flechas, Gause, Goff, Griffin, Krebs, Stewart, Riviere, Scott and Wilson.

"Almost all of these families are related to the baron's family," Mrs. Scheffler said.

Guests for the organizational affair were Mrs. Max Pharr of Jackson, state regent, and Mrs. William Murphy of Lucedale, Mississippi state historian. Mrs. James Estabrook and Mrs. Lester Franklin, members of the Duchess de Chaumont chapter, DAR, assisted as hostesses.

Dear Betty:

Here is a translation of the exchange between François Krebs and James White.

> At Pascagoulas, 9 December 1805, Agreement to buy and contract made today between François Krebs and James White, residents of this district, for the exchange of Round Island, with all its animals, for the Negro Dick and 150 piastres [dollars; Frenchspeakers in Louisiana still use the word piastre for dollar] on a credit arrangement for the period of time as herein set out. To wit: the said White will divest himself of possession and proprietorship of the said Negro Dick which he [White] will properly record in favor of the said Krebs and his heirs, and the said Krebs divests himself of possession of Round Island by this act, and the animals that are there, and he [Krebs] obligates himself to remit the appropriate deeds which are actually in the city [this could have been Mobile, but probably was New Orleans, especially if the island was a Spanish land grant to Krebs]. and the said Krebs will pass a valid bill of sale to the Island in favor of White and his heirs. And for the part of the sale amounting to 150 piastres, as above set out, he [White] will pay two young cows and their calves during the next spring at a value of 10 piastres for each cow and her calf, and after that he shall buy two cows and their calves every six months until the sum of 150 piastres shall be paid, but the full amount will be paid in two years, either in animals or in money. To this contract we obligate ourselves and our heirs. Done and signed by the contracting parties at the time and place above stated and sealed by the contracting parties in the presence of witnesses.

Well, there you have it. White was positioning himself nicely at the mouth of the Pascagoula River and on the offshore islands fully expecting that West Florida would fall like a ripened plum into the hands of the United States. If that happened, his investment in land at such an important location would certainly pay off.

If I can be of furtherr assistance, please contact me.

Sincerely,

Glenn R. Cornad,

NEW ORLEANS PICAYUNE

CAPTAIN JOHN GRANT

At 20 minutes past 5 o'clock on Monday morning, April 4, 1887, after a long and tedious illness, Capt. John Grant fell asleep in death.

He was a man of remarkable power of mind and physical endurance and he was happy in being able to do more than one man's share for the benefit of the age in which he lived.

He was born Nov. 25, 1796, in Chester County, Pa., but removed to Maryland at a very early age and always spoke of himself as a Baltimorean.

He was a born engineer and mechancial genius. When he was a few months over nine years old he started out in the world to make his own living and three years after that he was the chief support of his mother and eight other children.

The indomitable will and energy which he always displayed, as well as the precocity of his mechancial genius, were shown at the early age of fourteen, when being an apprentice in a woolen mill near Baltimore, his master sent him to overhaul the machinery in a neighboring mill which old and experienced mechanics had pronounced worn out and worthless and recommended it to be repleaced by new. And so well did he succeed in his task that he soon had the rejected machinery at work as efficiently as ever and turning out cloth of the finest quality.

He was married before he was 20 and then began to turn his attention to harbor improvement and invented several valuable improvements in scoop dredges. At 25 he had built and was operating in Baltimore harbor a dredging machine which was a prodigy of mechanical ingenuity and was substantially the same machine that is still in general use. This brought him to the attention of the proper department of government, and in 1825 he constructed and operated at Sacketts' Harbor, N.Y., the first government dredging machine ever used on the lakes.

In 1827 he came South to build a dredge for the government at Mobile, and his residence has been divided between the three states of Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana ever since.

The nature of his calling led him to familiarize himself with the science of civil engineering and especially that branch of it relating to the laws of hydraulics, until he became one of the best practical hydraulic engineers in the country.

In 1829 he built the New Orleans and Lake Ponchartrain Railroad, the first steam railroad south of Pennsylvania, and was its first superintendent, and he had built, owned and first opened the throttle valve of its first locomotive, which was the first that ever ran south of the Ohio ?River; so that he has long been the oldest railroad man in the United States, if not the world.

It was while superintendent of the Ponchartrain Railroad that he invented and constructed the first elevated railroad platforms, level with the car floors for the speedy loading and discharging of freight. Previous to that time, the work had been done in a tedious and expensive manner by means of huge cranes which lifted the freight up from the ground and deposited it on the cars and vice versa.

Soon after this he entered into a contract with the municipal authorities of New Orelans, to build wharves on the river front and it was then that he invented the first wharves with inclined apron fronts, so that steamboats could conveniently load and discharge at any stage of water.

In 1827 Congress appropriated money to make a channel to connect the navigable waters of Mobile Bay and Mississipii Sound. This appropriation, together with several others, was expended by the government engineers but they failed to make the channel and in 1832 they abandoned the work and pronounced it impracticable.

Capt. Grant was satisfied that the failure to make the channel resulted from a mistake in its localtion and that he could succeed by selecting another site, but he had not the means of his own and upon his attempting to raise it by the organization of a stock company, he found that the failure of the United States to accomplish the work under their best engineers and the verdict of the latter that it was impracticable of execution, had effectually closed the purses of his best friends, as well as others to whom he applied, so that he was obliged to wait until he could earn the necessary money.

Finding in 1838 that he could set apart $109,000 to make the experiment, he began on the 4th of July of that year and had the work so far completed by the fall of 1839 as to have a passage for boats drawing six feet, From that day to this Grant's Pass has remained a permanent channel substantially unchanged, an enduring monument to the supervior skill and knowledge of its constructor.

On the 2nd of February 1839, there was approved an act of the Legislature of Alabama "to authorize John Grant to cut or excavate achannel,etc...and to "charge all vessels that may go in or out said channel a toll of 15 cents per ton." But following the leading principles of his life, his first thoughts were the public welfare and not his own emolument, and to lighten the burden of commerce as much as possible, he has ever made his charges much below those allowed by law.

In fact, the reduction to the various mail lines and others with whom he made contracts amounted to more than $1,500,000 and the voluntary concessions to transients with whom there was no contract, would bring the amount up to over $2,000,000. If there could be computed and added to this the amount of public benefit that has resulted from the use of his various unpatented inventions, the whole sum would be fabulous and prove him to have been one of the greatest benefactors of his age.

In 1844 he was elected a member of the Mississippi Legislature where he was a colleague of Jefferson Davis, who was just entering public life.

After the construction of Grant's Pass, he naturally became interested in the barge trade between New Orleans and Mobile, which soon sprung up. About 1848 he joined five other gentlement in the organization of the "N.O. and Mobile Steam Mail Line Co.," who owned and ran the magnificent low-pressure steamers — Cuba, Florida, Oregon, California, Alabama and Creole — besides some other high pressure freight steams. For some years he personally commanded the Florida and was superintendent and manager of the whole line during his connection with it.

As another illustration of his guiding principle, it may be here stated that in making his contract with this line for pass fees he bound them, in consideration of the reduction in tolls, to limit their passenger rate to $5, it previously having been $10, and their freight rate to 25 cents per bbl. - it previously having been 40 cents, thus actually cutting down his revenue from two sources at one time, namely from Grant's Pass and from his interest in the mail line, for the public benefit.

In 1858 he sold out his interest in the mail line and devoted his attention to a line of small and elegant low-pressure boats which he had established to run across Lake Ponchartrain between New Orleans and Mandeville, Mandeville and Covington, and he continued to run this line with great success until the boats were seized and taken from him in 1861 by the insurgent state government of Louisiana and afterward turned over to the Confederate government for gunboats.

During the war he resided on his place near Covington, La. but as he was a strong and outspoken Union man, and never swerved from his consistent loyalty to the Federal cause, the Confedercay forces, upon the occupation of that region by the Union Army, arrested him and carried him off with them into the interior of the Confederacy. He was finally, however, in consideration of his age, released and allowed to return home.

On the return of peace he began to gather together the few scattered fragments of his fortune and though an old man, already at the allotted limit of "three score years and ten," he did not flinch from the task.

With his boats seized and taken from him without compensation by the agents of the collapsed Confederacy, his Pass in possession of the United States Army, all his ready money swept away by the seizure of New Orleans banks during Butler's regime, and money due him and upaid from the United States on contracts for carry the mails before the war, many a young man would have lost heart.

But he at once proceeded to Washington and after the usual amount of circumlocution and red tape, succeeded in regaining from the government possession of his Pass, but even his indomitable energy wore itself out in ever since struggling for simple justice on his other claims against the government.

Soon after the surrender, he made his home in Mobile and in the fall of 1865 was elected a member of the Alabama Legislature from that city. It was during the ensuing session that the charter of the New Orleans and Mobile Railroad was introduced and referred to the committee of which he was a member and in which it received his active support.

His astonished fellow-members asked him if he did not know the import of that measure and that the building of the railroad would greatly reduce the revenue from Grant's Pass by causing the discontinuance of the existing steamboat lines. "Certainly I do," was the reply, "but I did not come here to represent my own interest but those of my constituents; they want the railroad, therefore I am working and voting for it."

He has until recently been an active man and up to the last few months of his life would never permit a street car to stop for him to alight or enter. He has had employees by the thousands under him in works of the most urgent and trying character, yet he has never been known to utter an oath, to enter a saloon for a drink, or to use tobacco in any form since he became a man.

He leaves behind him four children, twenty nine grand children and seventy-eight great-grandchildren or 111 living descendants.

While not yet officially announced, the Chronicle-Star has it on what is considered absolutely reliable authority that the vocational board is to take over the International Shipyard houses and several of the shops on Feb. 1st. Men will arrive here about that date to get things in readiness for the first batch of ex-soldiers, about one hundred to one hundred and fifty, who will come about the 15th of February. We are further informed that about twelve instructors have already been employed and that the board has purchased considerable woodworking machinery from the International for use in the mechanical training of the men. The number of ex-soldiers in training here will be increased as rapidly as facilities can be arranged for their care and instruction.

A NOTABLE ANNIVERSARY.

Editor Chronicle-Star:

The year 1921 is notable as the anniversary of an event which is alike memorable to the town of Pascagoula, and to the early settlers of that section. As a direct descendant of those early settlers the history connected therwith is of peculiar and decided intrest to the writer.

In January, 1721, six vessels arrived in Mobile Bay with colonists and slaves, destined for concessions given to Duchess de Chaumont of France, in the French Province in America, Mobile being the then capitol of the Province.

In the same year Chevalier and Marchioness de Bell-Isle, accompanied by several French families of distinction, arrived, including Sierre Joseph de la Pointe, who was commissioned by the French government to build a fort on Lake Catahoula (now Krebs Lake) as a protection against the Indians. This fort known as Fort Pascagoula was built by the Indians under the supervision of Sieur De la Pointe. It was afterwards converted into a residence for De la Pointe. His descendatnts, the Krebs family of Mobile, from whom I descend, resided there for generations. My grandfather, Joseph Krebs, ws born and reared there.

De la Pointe's Fort is shown on Danville's map made in 1732, also the French settlement of the Western Company of France. Prominent mention is also made in Hamilton's Colonial history of Mobile.

Marchioness de Bell-Isle, relict of Le Chevalier, daughter of Duchess de Chaumont, later married Sieur De la Pointe from whom descends Monsieur Joseph Krebs of Mobile.

There is a pretty little legend about the "Musical Water" on the lake, with which you are doubtless familiar.

LYONS CONSOLIDATED SCHOOL.

Last Friday afternoon the girl's second teams of the Lyon Consolidated school and Pascagoula High met on Lyon's court and a very interesting game was played. The first half was much in Lyon's favor, but the last half was much closer. Misses Katheryn Kell and Mallie Pearson refreed the game.

A crowd of friends of both teams were present and enjoyed seeing the young athletes play a fair game. The score was 7 to 26 in favor of Lyon's ...little more attractive a simple and inexpensive treatment may be used with good effect.

Any cracks, either in the floor or adjoining the baseboard should first be filled. If these are too small to be filled with small strips of wod, a crack filler should be used.

Linseed Oil Treatment.

For a kitchen floor, if it is new, a god coat of linseed oil applied hot makes a very satisfactory finish. It is better to repeat the treatment several times.

Treatment With Walnut Stain and Oil.

Another treatment for either a new or old floor is to use a stain first then the linseed oil over that. All paint, stains, and soils should first be removed. This is dove by using a strong alkili of some kind. Turpentine may also be used to dissolve paint. After the floor is cleaned as thoroughly as possible and allowed to dry, stain it with a walnut stain, made by pouring water over half green walnut hulls and alowing them to stand several hours and drain off, or by boiling for a short while old dry walnut hulls, and then straining off. To this add 5c worth of permangante of potash to a gollon of stain.

Application.

This stain should be tested out on a piece of plank and if it is too dark dilute with water until the desired shade is produced. Apply this to the floor with an ordinary paint brush going over several planks at the time allowing your work to join at the crack between planks. To avoid a spotty uneven appearance be sure not to brush over what has been stained. After this has been dried out a day or two apply the hot linseed oil and then rub off well with a dry mop or cloth. The linseed oil will go in better if it is thinned with a little turpentine.

ROOK CLUB.

The Rook Club was delightfully entertained at the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Walker on last Friday evening when their lovely young daughter, Miss Anna Louise, was the attractive hostess. Cut flowers in graceful profusion decorated the reception rooms wherein were placed the five tables for the players, and five interesting games of rook were enjoyed. The club prizes were won by Misses Ivon Walker and Louise Pol, and the guests prizes for the men by Messrs. Leroy Foster and Frank Pierson. Following the games of rook the hostess assisted by her mother served delicious ice cream and cake.

OLD SPANISH TRAIL MEET.

The annual convention of the Old Spanish Trail Association is in session at Gulfport today and tomorrow. Delegates from the entire 5000 miles covered by the Old Spanish Trail are expected to be present. Mayor Lewis appointed the following delegation to represent Pascagoula at the meeting: Fred Taylor, H. B. Everitt, Wm. F. Martin, H. U. Canty, McVeay Young, E. J. Ford, J. Higginbotham, Chas. E. Chidsey, F. L. Lindinger. Judge Chidsey is down on the program as one of the speakers of the occasion.

Some people are never able to see the beam in their own eyes. But that probably is due to the fact that it is so large it obscures the sight.

If we could look ahead and see the trials and tribulations in store for us we might be ble to shunt them off onto the other fellow.

MRS. CHARLEY OLSEN.

Washington, Jan. 26.—The employment situation is growing better as labor passes through a period of readjustment similar to that in other branches of industry, Edmund Platt, vice governor of the federal reserve board, said today.

"The situation is improving," Platt said. "Many estimates of the number of unemployed are exaggerated."

Platt made his statement folowing a report by the department of abor's empoyment service that the number of persons empoye in industryl dat present is nearly 3,500,000 less than a year ago. Other estimates of unemployment have been higher than this, Secretary Frank Morrison of American Feeration of Labor declared his report showed between four and five million out of work.

"There has been a movement of workers but there is no such number unemployed as reports indicate," Platt said. "Workers who went to the city for high factory wages, have returned to the farms. This has happened in thousands of cases."

Coincident with Platt's movement, the department of agriculture made public a report showing the need for farm help. The shortage of farm help during the year just passed has been so great that farm wages had gone up 197 per cent in the last five years, the report said.

These wages, the department said, have in many cases served to cut down production which in turn operated to force up the prices which the consumer must pay for food.

That the movement from farm to city has been checked and in many cases turned back by the process of re-adjustment is shown in reports reaching the federal reserve board. Platt said. This has been particularly true in Cleveland and Detroit, automobile centers, which attracted thous... from the rural districts.

Backing Platt's opinion, the survey of the employment service mentioned factors which are developing to reduce unemployment. Millions of dollars worth of public work for instance, soon will be put under way in Cleveland, Columbus, Cincinnati, Akron and ohter cities.

Along with this and other work, all reports here indicate that private construction will spurt with the coming of spring. Inability to get men and lack of facilities to tarnsport materials have held up building but present indications are these obstacles are being automatically removed in the period of re-adjustment through which the country is now passing.

Another section of the employment service report shows that industrial centers bank deposits are increasing despite unemployment. Chicago and Youngstown were cited as specific examples. The explanation for this in the opinion of officials here is that the dropping of prices has enabled families which have been living up their incomes to save some money.

OLD SPANISH FORT PICNIC TO BE HELD OCTOBER 14

Preparations for the Old Spanish Fort picnic to be held at the fort near Pascagoula on Saturday October 14, have assumed county wide proportions with individuals and organizations giving of their time preparing the grounds and erstoring the fort.

James R. Leavell, chairman of the grounds committee, has reported an offer of a collection of camellia and azaleas for permanent planting.

Some antiques have been received which will be used to furnish the fort for the open house and will be on display. Committee members are asking for anything of historical interest to be placed in the fort. Everything will be carefully taken care of and returned to the owner.

The square dance program is attracting attention throughout the county and already sets are practicing to enter the contest. Miss Bernadine Wulff, caller for the local dances; J. P. Tingle of Bayou Casotte; Ruben Bullock, Wilson Springs; and L. W. Fuller of VanCleave have announced that they will call square dances at the celebration.

Tourists, attracted by the marker on the highway, are already stopping at the fort, with as many as five out-of-state cars on the grounds within an hour.

Regular Meeti of Trustees of Public School

The Board of Trustees of the Ocean Springs Public Schools met in regular session Monday evening at 7:30 p.m. at the High School. All members and Supt. Taconi were present.

Minutes of previous meeting read and accepted.

Supt. Taconi presented the first business of the evening recommending that the board elect Mrs. Albert Auer as a regular member of the High School faculty to replace Mr. McCarthy who was called into active service. Motion was made by Gay, seconded by VanCourt to this effect and was carried unanamously. A second member of the faculty, Mr. Henderson is at present being processed for service, and in his absence, Mrs. James O'Briant is substituting. Mr. Taconi recommended that Mrs. O'Briant be placed on a temporary status pending the outcome of Mr. Henderson's examinations. All members in favor.

Contracts for the teachers at the colored school and the contract for Mrs. Auer were signed.

It was recommended by Supt. Taconi, that $200 of the money given to the school by the Town Council be given to the Athletic Association for the purpose of building a much needed Field House at Freedom Field. Motion made by VanCourt, seconded by Scharr to give this amount of money for said purpose, all members voting Aye.

The lack of adequate and sanitary toilet facilities at the colored school met with much discussion, and it was proposed by Wall that Supt. Taconi, along with Mr. T. H. Naylor, Director of School Buildings, and Mr. Lockyer, local architect to establish the cost, equipment, etc., to provide sanitary toilets, drinking fountains and lavatories in the colored school, also, proper fire escapes for the high school. Motion carried unanamously.

The need for an additional teacher to relieve the crowded situation that now exists at the school was made known by Supt. Taconi. It was decided to add one additional teacher to the present faculty. Mr. Taconi

GOV. STONE'S MESSAGE.

The comprehensive bienial message of Governor John M. Stone to the Legislature is replete with Executive comment and advice upon the different issues, which affect the welfare of the people, and which he reccommends to be considered and dealt with by the law-makers of the State. A patriotic tone of confidence in the ability of the Legislature to faithfully and successfully perform its duty prevades the entire document, and the legislation he reccommends as essential and which is explained in his lucid and democratic way will doubtless be taken up and favorably enacted during the session.

The Governor in terms of proud satisfaction refers to the "fairly" properous condition of Mississippi. He advises the raising of a diversity of crops, adapted to our soil and climate, through a departure from the unprofitable custom which prevails, of increasing the acreage in the cultivation of cotton. The false economy which is made clearly apparent—the low price at which the staple is selling being below the cost of production, while the articles of food which can be produced in the State, but have to be bought under the present system, are bringing advanced prices.

We publish a short synopsis of the message on the first page of the DEMOCRAT STAR to which we refer our readers for a careful perusal.

THE Review of Reviews for January, contains the portraits of some fifty or sixty of the notabilities of the day. General Johnston and Governor Nicholls, of Louisiana, Secretary Foster, Assistant Secretary Wharton, the late Dom Pedro, Fonseca, of Brizil, Mr. Jackson, the new Irish secretary, Mr. Redmond, the Parnellite leader, Mr. Flavin, of Cork, Archbishop Walsh, of Dublin, Prince George, of Wales, five Governors of Australian States, the late Lord Lytton, the late Rev. MISSISSIPPI LEGISLATURE.

JACKSON, MISS., Jan. 11, 1892.

When the House of Representatives opened this morning it was with a lonely aspect. There was more than a quorum present, there being an unusually large number of absentees on account of leaves of absence having been granted to members on Saturday who have not yet returned, and to others who in the meantime succumbed to a bad spell of weather and numerous others to the grip.

The calamitous death of Hon. E. H. Stiles having been duly sent over the wires advised many absentees that business would be slack on Monday.

When Speaker Street took the chair the House responded, and the following business was transacted: Mr. O'Niel of Noxubee, who has been unavoidably detained from appearing heretofore on account of sickness, was announced as present, and qualified.

The House committee on rules, through its chairman, reported rules to govern the House. The report was received and adopted.

Mr. Hicks offered a resolution that, as news had been received of the death of Messrs. Pennington and Stiles that their chairs should be draped in mourning and thus remain until their successors were elected.

The clerk was instructed to issue pay certificates to Hon. Mr. Laughlin in favor of Mr. Stiles, and a resolution adopted that when the House adjourned it be until 10 o'clock to-morrow morning.

Mr. Johnston introduced the following resolution which was referred to the joint committee on code: That a joint committee should be appointed, to be called by the name appropriate to the class of legislation assigned to it for consideration; that when said committee shall have been appointed, the several parts of the new code shall be referred to its separate committee and that each of said committee shall report the result of their labors to the two Houses as rapidly as possible.

THE SENATE.

Lieut. Gov. Evans occupied the speakers chair in the Senate this morning for the first time during the session. After reading the journal the regular order of business was suspended and the committee on joint rules made their report. Both houses adjourned until 10 o'clock to-morrow morning out of respect to the memory of the late Hon. E. H. Stiles.

The election for United States Senators contrary to published reports, will not be held till Tuesday, the 19th inst. This is the earliest time it could take place under the United States Constitution, which prescribes it shall be held the second Tuesday after the Legislature is organized. Little interest attaches to the election as it is known in advance what will be the result.

Members have been furnished with printed copies of the new code and it has become thus early apparent that there will be very hard work to get some of its provisions adopted. One feature that is criticised is the return the codifiers make to the deposit system from insurance companies, which was the law until the last Legislature repealed it. They propose to restore the old law of $25,000 deposit before any fire company can do business in the State. The details of the law are somewhat different from the old one in the character of deposits required. The codifiers made various radical changes in many features of the present laws.

About all the Legislature in either branch did to-day was to meet and adjourn. After the committees are announced it is expected it will buckle down to hard work. The personnel of the present body will compare favorably with that of any in the past few years. Unlike many of its predecessors, it finds a plethoric treasury there being several $100,000 more in the vaults than is needed in the expenses of the State. Many fear this may lead to a spirit of extravagance.

One of the exciting questions will be over making the State dry throughout by statutory prohibition. The prohibitionists are determined to get every thing out of the Legislature possible towards advancing their theory and will most probably ask for more at the beginning than they expect to receive.

A strong committee consisting of Bishop Galloway, Dr. J. B. Gambrell and C. H. Alexander have been appointed to feel the Legislature's pulse and use all their ability to get statutory prohibition. Whisky is now sold in 30 counties, the remainder, 41, being "dry."

AMONG the bills introduced last week in Congress were several to put wool on the free list. Chair-

THE KREBS MINE HORROR.

The risks attending the methods of earning a livelihood by struggling humanity in several of the branches of industry, which are essential and constitute the battlefields of commerce, are dreadful to contemplate.

The disaster in the mining district at Krebs, Indian Territory, which occurred on the 7th inst., was one of the most appalling horrors which so frequently shock the sensibilities of the people and expose to public view the hard, desperate lot of the wage-workers of the coal mines.

An explosion took place in the mine a 5 o'clock in the evening, when the day shift of operatives were just preparing to ascend in the cage of the shaft. Six men had been hoisted and stood on the platform at the side of the shaft, when the cage was blown through the roof of the tower and fifty feet in the air. A tongue of flame shot up the shaft and above the ground fully 100 feet, followed by a terrific report.

There were about 400 men in the mine, 58 of whom were killed, and 17 will die; but their places will be filled by others already in waiting to eagerly run the precarious chances of their occupation.

THE Scientific American, of the 19th ult, contains the illustration of a horse which is attracting much attention in the North, on account of his long hair. He is 8 years old and 16 hands high and weighs 1,435 pounds. The hair of his foretop is 9 feet, his mane 14 and his tail 12 feet long.

THE Mobile Register says.

"The hardest people on earth for an editor to please are those who borrow the paper from some of his regular subscribers."

SPEAKER Crisp has the grip and the Republican members in the House will have to be very meek for awhile.

THE Clarion says the grippe has taken charge of an alarming number of Senators and Representatives.

Wilder old store.

—Thanks to Mr. W. M. Morrison, of Pascagoula, for some of the nicest cream cheese we ever tasted. Such favors are always appreciated by the editor.

—Col. A. C. Steede, Assessor, is in our midst on duty. Tax-payers will confer a favor by handing Col. Steede their assessment. Delays are dangerous.

—Rev. F. P. Scarcliff immersed three more converts to his branch of the church last Sunday in Bayou Casotte. Latter Day Saints are increasing in that locality.

—Rev. G. T. Chute, of Garland, Alabama, a Latter Day Saint preacher, who has opened the Scarcliff store, was here Tuesday. He will probably locate here after awhile.

—Mrs. Ellen Mansfield, of Pascagoula, sold Mr. Charles Johnson two lots in that town, one for $360 and the other at $200 cash. So Pascagoula real estate is on the move.

—Mr. James H. Burroughs, the cleverest hackman on the road, has splendid teams and comfortable vehicles. He is always at the depot when not otherwise engaged. He is reliable.

—Sheep killing dogs are numerous in this vicinity. Mr. M. C. Allman lost $22.50 worth of mutton sheep lately. The owners of these worthless curs should be made to pay for the sheep killed.

—We have an oyster shell that come out of the walls of the French Fort at the Point. The Fort was built over two hundred years ago. The oyster shell looks as natural as it did the day it was put in the wall.

—Dreaper & Burns, the leading clothing house of Mobile, are still selling their spring and summer goods through Frank Casper, Jr. Suits from $10 up. Call opposite this office and see his samples, quality of goods and fit guaranteed.

—Our clever Sheriff, Frank H. Lewis, has bought a lot adjoining Mr. Walter M. Denny, on the Pascagoula river, and is building a residence 32x42, which, when completed, will be neat, but not gaudy. It will be of the modern style of architecture, of first-class material and workmanship.

—Mr. Walter M. Denny, our Clerk of the Courts, who lately purchased the Hebrard Place, on the Pascagoula river has almost rebuilt the house, and is putting the heretofore dilapidated place in splendid repair. When completed it will be one of the most desirable residences on the river front.

suicide, was landed in jail Monday to await the action of the grand jury. Perhaps it would have been well if Allen had made sure work of himself when he was about it.

—Mr. Duncan Minor, of Ocean Springs, brought down to jail Monday evening two tramps charged with stealing a boat and tackle, oyster tongs, etc., belonging to Capt. Silas Weeks. They will be fed at the tax-payers' expense until Circuit Court.

—Bob Reese (col.) has withdrawn his application for the postoffice at this place, and now Charley Cruzat steps to the front as an applicant. It seems that Charley could not get anything better, and has concluded to accept this office if Master John R. Lynch will secure it for him. Evidently the white Republicans are badly left. The bottom rail is surely on top now.

—The Mayor and Board of Aldermen of Scranton had a meeting Monday night, but very little business was disposed of. It seems that the City Fathers do not dwell together in unity. There is some investigations going on which may not have a pleasant termination. It is thought that the coming grand jury may have to assist the Board in getting the town affairs in proper shape.

—Thos J. Keys, colored, the Republican appointee for postmaster at Ocean Springs, was here this week making his bond. He succeeded in getting the following names on his bond: Mr. F. Lindinger, of Scranton; H. C. Andrews, (col.) and Sol. Gregorry, (col.) of Moss Point; J. W. Fairley, (col.) of Black Creek, Harrison county; Lundon Fairley, (col.) of Scranton. The amount of the bond is $6.000. We have some doubt as to the solvency of the bond, but if the powers that be at Washington are satisfied, well we are.

—Rev. Ben Jones, Pastor of the Scranton Methodist Church, aided by his zealous wife, is working heroically to raise money for building a parsonage here for the Methodist pastor to occupy. We never knew two more earnest, zealous and energetic workers. They realize that a parsonage is sadly needed, and if they can get the hearty co-operation of their little flock of members they will do great good in building up and strengthening their church. Mr. Jones is also an excellent preacher, as he is a zealous worker, and his congregations are gradually improving.

Newsman Krebs challenged status quo

By GARY HOLLAND
THE SUN HERALD

PASCAGOULA — University of Mississippi leaders and family members paid tribute to award-winning newsman Albin J. Krebs on Wednesday night as an editor with passion, principles and vision, and announced that a gift of more than $180,000 he left to the university will establish a journalism scholarship fund in his memory.

"Albin maintained his principles throughout his life," said his nephew and confidant, Circuit Judge Robert Krebs of Pascagoula. "He never lost sight of his family and his friends. He never lost sight of who he was, where he was from, or his vision."

The judge joined University Chancellor Robert Khayat and Journalism Department Chairman Stuart Bullion in remembering the newsman's accomplishments and generosity in a ceremony at Longfellow House, which is owned by Ole Miss.

Special guests were Albin Krebs' sisters, Marjorie Holley and Anne Mansfield of Pascagoula.

Krebs

"Albin Krebs was an extraordinary person, who courageously challenged the status quo," said Khayat, who is from Moss Point. "In his work as a journalist, he fully understood the significant role played by writers in our society. His gift will enable future journalists to continue his remarkable legacy."

As 1950-51 editor of the Ole Miss campus newspaper, Krebs wrote editorials for admission of black students.

"When given the full educational opportunities he deserves as a citizen of the state and nation, the Negro will raise his own standards," Krebs wrote. Opponents burned a cross in front of his dormitory.

"Albin Krebs was everything we hope Ole Miss journalism students and graduates will be," Bullion said. He praised Krebs for "his vibrant personality, his bold character, his unshakable integrity, his acute sense of justice, and his deep, sometimes unrequited love for his native state and the University of Mississippi."

"We are here to honor his legacy, which he generously elected to share with future generations of Ole Miss journalists through the Albin J. Krebs Journalism Scholarship Endowment," Bullion said.

He explained that the scholarships would be available first to journalism students from Jackson County, as directed by Krebs' gift. "After that, it will spread everywhere," Bullion said. "We will just seek good journalism students."

Krebs, a Pascagoula native and Ole Miss graduate, earned a master's degree from Columbia University and won a Pulitzer traveling fellowship. He served as an editor at The New York Times after working at The New Orleans Times-Picayune, Newsweek and United Press. He died at age 73 in Key West, Fla., on May 31, 2002.

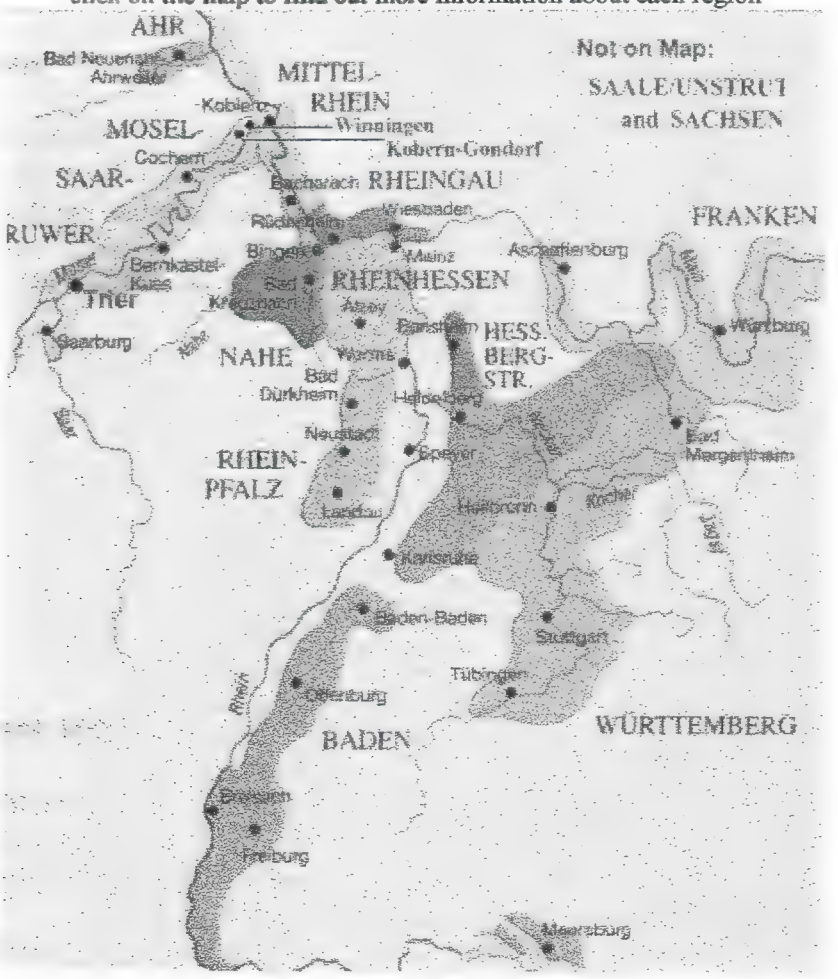
German Wine Regions

click on the map to find out more information about each region



Ahr region

Take a short journey along the Ahr river as it flows into the Rhine just south of Bonn and you will encounter the little known region of Ahr. The smallest of Germany's wine-growing regions, Ahr is known primarily for its Spätburgunder (Pinot Noir), and Portugieser. Both of these are red grape varieties producing wines with light charm and racy fruitiness.

Although at present most of the wine grown here is consumed locally, there are some types which have commanded hefty price tags outside of the region. Overall the Pinot Noir wines grown here are much lighter than what one has come to expect from Burgundy or the New World.

Mittelrhein region

Inside this beautiful landscape of steep terraced vineyards crowned with medieval castles and ruins you will find the quaint region of Mittelrhein.
Beginning just below Bonn and extending 60 miles south on both banks of the Rhine this area is well known for varieties that grow well on inhospitable slopes. The clayish soil yields lively wines with a pronounced acidity. The Riesling does best here, and is produced mostly for local consumption.

Mosel-Saar-Ruwer region

From just south of the ancient Roman city of Trier, north to Koblenz, where it empties into the Rhine, the Mosel river snakes its way past dramatically steep, slaty slopes, some of which are Germany's most famous vineyards known for top quality Riesling wines in the world.

The wines of the Mosel and its tributaries, the Saar and the Ruwer, are richly fragrant, pale to golden in color, and light bodied with a lively, fruity, acidity. The slaty soil imparts a distinctive taste to these remarkable wines ranging from fine-fruity to earthy or "flinty", often with a hint of effervescence.

While some of the wines from the famous vineyards of the middle Mosel district can come with very high price tags, the best values are often from the upper and lower regions which lay claim to some excellent wines at fairly low prices. Lesser known vineyards other than Bernkasteler Doctor and the Wehlener Sonnenuhr offer exceptional bottles while still remaining surprisingly inexpensive.

Rheingau region

Take a trip back in time and visit Germany's most central wine growing region and home of some of the world's oldest wine-growing families. The region of Rheingau is one long hillside topped by the thick forests of the Taunus Hills to the north and bordered by the Rhine river to the south.

The southern-facing exposure, condensation from the river, large amount of clay in the soil, and the Mediterranean-type climate combine to produce densely rich flavors and heavy masculine wines. This is where the famous cloisters and estates cultivated and refined the noble Riesling.

The popularity of this region's wines have served to drive prices skyward, however good values are still to be found if one seeks out the smaller producers who still offer excellent wines at great values. Full bodied red wine is also made here from the Spätburgunder (Pinot Noir), particularly from the steep vineyards around Assmannshausen.

Vineyard Classification

Since 1994 the Rheingau is the first German region to have a semi official vineyard classification, drawn up by the Charta organization and the VdP Rheingau. The best sites will be allowed to carry the designation ``Erstes Gewächs" (first growth). The use of this designation is optional, and the wine has to be in dry style or at least an Auslese.

Nahe region

Germany's best kept secret both for the breathtaking landscape and for the handful of Germany's finest Riesling producers, this region offers some of the least known and therefore the country's most excellent wine values.

The varied soil ranging from sandy loam which produces wines that resemble the neighboring Rheinhessen, to the more slaty soil which brings forth the flowery bouquets reminiscent of Mosel wines, combines to create racy fruitiness with an almost spicy mineral complexity that is not to be found elsewhere in the country.

The excellent wines of this tiny region can certainly hold their own with the best of the larger and more famous vineyards.

Pfalz region

The Pfalz region long known for its simple inexpensive wines produced in large quantities, has recently begun a trend back towards low yielding, high quality vines.

A new generation of young, highly-educated wine growers has noticed the world's desire to experience intensely flavorful, robust wines, and therefore has reversed the trends of this region.

The Pfalz is the largest wine producing region in Germany and boasts many small producers whose commitment to quality is beginning to renew the region's reputation for producing excellent wines.

Rheinhessen region

Deep within a valley of gently rolling hills, bordered by the Nahe River and the Rhine rivers, lies the region of Rheinhessen. The largest of Germany's wine growing regions, its production is second only to that of the Pfalz.

Here in this land of varying climates and geography, many different types of grapes, both red and white varieties, are planted, producing wine that is delicately fragrant, and medium bodied. The Rheinfront or Rheinterrasse are names given to the vineyards on gentle slopes directly facing the Rhein near the town of Nierstein. Here some of the finest wines in Germany are produced, especially from the Riesling grape.

Franken region (Franconia)

The most masculine and earthy of all German wines will be found in the little known region of Franken. Home of Würzburg its principal city, and the famed vineyard, Stein, which gave rise to the generic term Steinwein, formerly used to denote all Franken wines.

The wines are traditionally bottled in a squat green flagon called a Bocksbeutel, thereby adding to its reputation as a strong masculine wine.

The prices here are traditionally quite high in comparison to other regions so one should seek out the smaller producers if one is looking for a bargain. Overall the wine produced here is unmatched in its exotic spiciness, and one would be well served to explore this region.

Hessische Bergstrasse region

Plan an expedition in late June or early September to the small town of Heppenheim and attend the local wine festival. Here you will experience the rich fragrant wines of the Hessische Bergstrasse region.

An exceptionally small area which nonetheless produces extraordinary wines with less acidity and maybe more finesse than those of the Rheingau. The main grape varieties here are the Riesling and the Müller-Thurgau, followed closely by the delicate Silvaner. The wines from this region are scarce, and almost without exception are consumed locally. Hence the need to travel to the wine festival. Then you will discover the refreshing, hearty, wines that the people of this region have managed to enjoy in secrecy for centuries.

Württemberg region

The indigenous population of the region of Württemberg have long kept their wines a closely held secret. They rarely share their wines with outsiders, and prefer to consume most, if not all, of it themselves.

Still if you can manage to find yourself at one of the local wine bars you will experience strikingly fruity, distinctively earthy red wines and hearty, powerful whites. Württemberg is the largest red wine region in Germany with nearly half of the landscape planted with red wine grape varieties.

Baden region

The famed "Black Forest" region of Baden is Germany's third largest wine region and home to the Spätburgunder Weissherbst, a popular rosé wine.

The varied soil ranging from gravel, limestone, and clay, to volcanic stone and shell lime, gives rise to a multitude of flavors. Combined with the warm climate of Baden, the soil provides the wines made here with more of an international flavor than is found anywhere else in German wine producing regions. The volcanic stone in particular gives the Spätburgunder (Pinot Noir), more of a full-bodied, fiery taste than can be experienced elsewhere.

An interesting note: Germany's per capita consumption of wine is 32 bottles per year whereas each citizen of Baden consumes an average of 53 bottles per year. A definite tribute to their winemakers.

Saale-Unstrut region

In the Saale/Unstrut region producers concentrate on dry, medium-bodied wines. In the warm river valleys of this region Müller-Thurgau, Silvaner, and Weissburgunder (Pinot Blanc) varieties grow very well and are made into a soft, dry, white wine. On occasion one may encounter a Spätlese or Auslese wine, but due to climatic conditions, these are very rare indeed.

Sachsen region (Saxonia)

The cultural and historical centers of Dresden and Meissen attract many visitors to the small wine growing region of Sachsen each year. The tourists, combined with the special regional character of the wines produced here, such as the Elbtal-Sekt, serve to make the wine prices here rather high.

Most of the wine is consumed locally by the residents and visitors alike. The Sachsen specialties are wines made from the Rivaner (Müller-Thurgau), Pinot Blanc (Weissburgunder), and Traminer grapes which are made into dry wines, full of character with a fruity acidity.

who, as an investigation proved, had not kept any books during the whole tenure of his office, did not even know that there was a shipload of provisions in the hull of a vessel stranded near Ocean Springs and left there for eleven months. Yet Hubert was not punished.

Even this description, perhaps, does not give the whole truth, as contemporary writers did not dare to say what they knew. Dupratz says (I. 166):

"So delicate a matter is it to give utterance to the truth that the pen often falls from the hands of those who are most disposed to be accurate."

Germans in Pascagoula.

In January, 1721, 300 engagés came to the concession of Madame Chaumont in Pascagoula. There were no Germans among them, as the census of 1725 shows, but Pensacola must be mentioned here, as there was a German colony at that place very early, arising, perhaps, on the ruins of this concession or of some other enterprise. The date of the founding of that German settlement is not known; but, in 1772, the English captain Ross found there, on the farm of "Krebs," cotton growing and a roller cotton gin, the invention of Krebs, and, perhaps, the first successful cotton gin in America.[8]

In the same year (1772) we hear of a great storm which raged most furiously "on the farm of Krebs and among the Germans of Pascagoula."

His last will and testament, written in New Orleans in the Spanish language in 1776, gives his full name as "Hugo.Ernestus Krebs." He was from Neumagen on the Moselle, Germany, and left fourteen grown children, whose descendants still own the old Krebs farm, which the author visited in August, 1906. It is situated on a slight elevation on the border of "Krebs' Lake," near the mouth of the Pascagoula River, and a mile and a half north of the railroad station of Scranton (now incorporated with East Pascagoula), Mississippi.

[8] Cotton was planted in Louisiana much earlier. Charlevoix saw some in a garden in Natchez in 1721; and Dupratz constructed a machine for extracting the seed; but his machine was a failure.

Americana Germanica
The Settlement of the German Coast of Louisiana and the Creoles of German Descent by J. Hanno Deiler
Phila. 1909

The Creoles there call the Krebs home "the old fort," and the three front rooms forming the center of the house, the rest consisting of more recent additions, were evidently built with a view of affording protection against the Indians. The walls of this part of the house are eighteen inches thick, the masonry consists of a very hard concrete of lime, unbroken large oyster shells, and clay. The post and sills are of heavy cypress, which, after serving at least 175 years, do not show any signs of decay. The floor is made of concrete similar to that of the walls, but a wooden floor has been laid upon it, taking away about eighteen inches from the original height of the rooms. All the wood work was hewn with the broad axe.

In front of the house lies an old mill stone which once upon a time served to crush the corn.

Near the house is the "Krebs Cemetery," with the tombs of the members of the Krebs family, of whom a great number are buried there. The accompanying pictures were taken on the spot.

According to the family traditions the old fort was built by "Commodore de la Pointe," who is said to have been ~~a brother~~ [illegible] Madame Chaumont. Hamilton, in his "Colonial Mobile," page 140, says that Joseph Simon de la Pointe received, on the 12th of November, 1715, from Governor Cadillac, a land concession on Dauphine Island for the purpose of enabling him to raise cattle. As Dauphine Island was practically abandoned, after the great storm of 1717, de la Pointe probably also gave up his concession, and a map, drawn about 1732 ("Colonial Mobile," page 86) shows "Habitation du Sieur Lapointe" [9] on the very spot where the Krebs homestead now stands, near the mouth of the Pascagoula River.

La Pointe's daughter, Marie Simon de la Pointe, became the first wife of Hugo Ernestus Krebs. Thus the old fort came into possession of the Krebs family, where it still remains, the present owner and occupant being Mrs. J. T. Johnson, née Cécile Krebs, an amiable and highly intelligent lady to whom

[9] Every concessioner was given the title of "Sieur".

A NOTABLE ANNIVERSARY.

Editor Chronicle-Star:

The year 1921 is notable as the anniversary of an event which is alike memorable to the town of Pascagoula, and to the early settlers of that section. As a direct descendant of those early settlers the history connected therwith is of peculiar and decided intrest to the writer.

In January, 1721, six vessels arrived in Mobile Bay with colonists and slaves, destined for concessions given to Duchess de Chaumont of France, in the French Province in America, Mobile being the then capitol of the Province.

In the same year Chevalier and Marchioness de Bell-Isle, accompanied by several French families of distinction, arrived, including Sierre Joseph de la Pointe, who was commissioned by the French government to build a fort on Lake Catahoula (now Krebs Lake) as a protection against the Indians. This fort known as Fort Pascagoula was built by the Indians under the supervision of Sieur De la Pointe. It was afterwards converted into a residence for De la Pointe. His descendatnts, the Krebs family of Mobile, from whom I descend, resided there for generations. My grandfather, Joseph Krebs, ws born and reared there.

De la Pointe's Fort is shown on Danville's map made in 1732, also the French settlement of the Western Company of France. Prominent mention is also made in Hamilton's Colonial history of Mobile.

Marchioness de Bell-Isle, relict of Le Chevalier, daughter of Duchess de Chaumont, later married Sieur De la Pointe from whom descends Monsieur Joseph Krebs of Mobile.

There is a pretty little legend about the "Musical Water" on the lake, with which you are doubtless familiar.

LYONS CONSOLIDATED SCHOOL.

Last Friday afternoon the girl's good effect.

Any cracks, either in the floor or adjoining the baseboard should first be filled. If these are too small to be filled with small strips of wod, a crack filler should be used.

Linseed Oil Treatment.

For a kitchen floor, if it is new, a god coat of linseed oil applied hot makes a very satisfactory finish. It is better to repeat the treatment several times.

Treatment With Walnut Stain and Oil.

Another treatment for either a new or old floor is to use a stain first then the linseed oil over that. All paint, stains, and soils should first be removed. This is dove by using a strong alkili of some kind. Turpentine may also be used to dissolve paint. After the floor is cleaned as thoroughly as possible and allowed to dry, stain it with a walnut stain, made by pouring water over half green walnut hulls and alowing them to stand several hours and drain off, or by boiling for a short while old dry walnut hulls, and then straining off. To this add 5c worth of permangante of potash to a gollon of stain.

Application.

This stain should be tested out on a piece of plank and if it is too dark dilute with water until the desired shade is produced. Apply this to the floor with an ordinary paint brush going over several planks at the time allowing your work to join at the crack between planks. To avoid a spotty uneven appearance be sure not to brush over what has been stained. After this has been dried out a day or two apply the hot linseed oil and then rub off well with a dry mop or cloth. The linseed oil will go in better if it is thinned with a little turpentine.

ROOK CLUB.

The Rook Club was delightfully entertained at the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Walker on last Friday evening when their lovely young daughter, Miss Anna Louise, was the attractive hostess. Cut flowers in graceful profusion decorated the reception rooms wherein were placed the five tables for the players, and five interesting games of rook were enjoyed. The club prizes were won by Misses Ivon Walker and Louise Pol, and the guests prizes for the men by Messrs. Leroy Foster and Frank Pierson. Following the games of rook the hostess assisted by her mother served delicious ice cream and cake.

St. Lucia, with its Southern branch, the river Ratones, and the Lagoon, known by the name of Aisa Hatcha, Rio d'ais, or Indian river, some others can scarcely be ranked among rivers, but will likewise be more particularly mentioned hereafter.

After this general division of the country, I think it is not improper to begin with an account of the air, which this province enjoys very pure and clear fogs are seldom known any where except upon St. John's river, but the dews are very heavy, the spring and summer are in general dry, the autumn very changeable; the beginning of winter wet and stormy, but the latter part very dry and serene; from the end of September to the end of June, there is perhaps not any where a more delightful climate to be found, but all July, August, and most of September are excessively hot, yet the changes from hot to cold are not so sudden, as in Carolina, and frost is not frequently known, the noon day's sun is always warm, the severest cold ever known there affects not the tender china orange trees, which grow here to a very great perfection, I scruple not to say, that this fruit here exceeds in goodness every other of the kind I have yet seen, however the change from the middle of this climate, to the Northern part of it is much more perceptible from heat to cold, than it is to the southward from cold to heat, in the year 1770 and 1771, I felt. Very severe weather about the river Nassau. To the southward of the town of St. Augustine, the climate changes so gradually, that it is not perceivable to the above named lat. of 27: 40: where there is no frost at all, and which I have always set down as the line of no frost. From this line to the southern extent is a most charming climate, the air almost always serene; on the east side the common trade wind, and on the west side the Apalachian sea breeze from the west to the north-west, refresh this delightful Peninsula during the summer; here we find all the produce of more northern climes mixed with the inhabitants of the Tropics, and this as well in the water as on the land, nor is there ever so great a cold as to destroy the fruits of the south, nor so great a heat as to parch the produce of the north; in all this Peninsula it is remarkable, that rain is always prognosticated one or two days before it falls, and this by either an immoderate dew or no dew at all, so that if a very heavy dew falls, it is a certain sign of rain, and the same if on a calm fine night, there be no dew, but I cannot account for this phenomenon.

The winds are not so very changeable here as they are further to the northward, but are during the greatest part of spring, the whole summer, and beginning of autumn, generally between the east and south east, and during the last of autumn, and first part of winter, they are commonly in the north east quarter; the latter part of the winter, and first of spring they are more generally west and north west, the autumnal equinox is to be dreaded here, as well two or three weeks before, as two or three months after it, great storms will then happen, and many vessels are drove on shore, or otherwise disabled: I have never heard of much mischief in the vernal equinox, and if a hurricane was ever known in this Peninsula, it was on the 29th of October 1769, when there was a terrible gust between the lat. 25: 10, and 25: 50, which blew many trees down, and drove the Snow Ledbury a shore, where she remained dry on a key, now distinguished by her name, but heretofore considered as a part of what was improperly called by the name of Key Largo.

The fatal hurricane of August 30, 31, September 1, 2, 3, anno 1772, was severely felt in West Florida, it destroyed the woods for about 30 miles from the sea coast in a terrible manner, what were its effects in the unsettled countries to the eastward, we cannot learn; in Pensacola it did little or no mischief except the breaking down of all the wharfs but one; but farther westward, it was terrible; at Mobile every thing was in confusion, vessels, boats, and loggs were drove up into the streets a great distance, the gullies and hollows as well as all the lower grounds of this town were so filled with loggs, that many of the inhabitants got the greatest part of their yearly provision of firewood there; all the vegetables were burned up by the salt water, which was by the violence of the wind, carried over the town, so as at the distance of half a mile, it was seen to fall like rain; all the lower floors of the houses were covered with water, but no houses were hurt except one, which stood at the water side, in which lived a joiner, a schooner drove upon it, and they alternately destroyed each other; but the greatest fury of it was spent on the neighbourhood of the Pasca Oocolo river; the plantation of Mr. Krebs there was almost totally destroyed, of a fine crop of rice, and a large one of corn were scarcely left any remains, the houses were left uncovered, his smith's shop was almost all washed away, all his works and out houses blown down; and for thirty miles up a branch of this river which (on account of the abundance of that species of cypress* vul-

garly called white cedar) is called cedar river, there was scarce a tree left standing, the pines were blown down or broke, and those which had not intirely yielded to this violence, were so twisted, that they might be compared to ropes; at Botereaux's cow pen, the people were above six weeks consulting on a method of finding and bringing home their cattle; twelve miles up the river, live some Germans who, seeing the water rise with so incredible a rapidity, were almost embarked, fearing an universal flood, but the water not rising over their land, they did not proceed on their intended journey to the Chactaw nation. At Yoani, in this nation, I am told the effects were perceivable; in all this tract of coast and country the wind had ranged between the south south east and east, but farther west its fury was between the north north east and east, a schooner belonging to the government having a detachment of the sixteenth regiment on board, was drove by accident to the westward as far as Cat Island, where she lay at an anchor under the west point, the water rose so high, that when she parted her cables, she floated over the island, the wind north by east, or thereabout she was forced upon the Free masons islands, and lay about 6 weeks before she was got off, and if they had not accidentally been discovered by a hunting boat, the people might have remained there and died for want, particularly as water failed them already when discovered; the effect of this different direction of the current of air or wind was here surprising, the south easterly wind having drove the water in immense quantities up all the rivers, bays, and sounds to the westward, being here counteracted by the northerly wind, this body of water was violently forced into the bay of Spirito Santo at the back of the Chandeleurs, Grand Gozier, and Breton Isles, and not finding sufficient vent up the rigolets, nor down the outlets of the bay, it forced a number of very deep channels through these islands, cutting them into a great number of small islands. The high island of the Chandeleur had all the surface of its ground washed off, and I really think, had not the clay been held fast by the roots of the black mangrove, and in some places the myrtle (Myrica) there would have been scarce a vestige of the island left; at the mouth of Mississippi all the shipping was drove into the marshes; a Spanish brig foundered and parted, and a large crew was lost, some of the people were taken from a piece of her at sea, by a sloop from Pensacola a few days after; in the lakes at Chef Menteur, and in the passes of the rigolets, the water rose prodigiously and covered the low islands there two feet; at St. John's Creek, and New Orleans, the tide was thought extraordinary high, but at all these [illegible] being a fine serene day with a small air from the east and

The most extraordinary effect of this hurricane was the production of a second crop of leaves and fruit on all the mulberry trees in this country, a circumstance into which I very carefully enquired, but could not learn from the oldest and most curious observers that this had ever happened before: this tardy tree budded, foliated, blossomed, and bore ripe fruit with the amazing rapidity of only four weeks time immediately after the gust, and no other trees were thus affected.

The south and south west winds make a thick heavy air, and are in my opinion hurtful to the lungs; they also occasion the sultry weather, so much complained of in July and August. The winds from the eastern quarter every where between the south east and the north east, are cool and moist, and they cause the frequent showers, by which the very sand of this climate is endued with so prodigious a vegetative power that it amazes every one. The winds from the east to the north are agreeably cool, and from the north to the north west, occasion what is here called cold weather; I have frequently kept thermometrical journals, but have none left now for inspection.

I remember the general height of the mercury on Fahrenheit's scale, to have been, in the shade where the air was not prevented circulating freely about it, between 84° and 88° and on some sultry hot days in July and August, I have known it to rise up to 94°, when at the same time by carrying it out and exposing it to the sun, it will rise in a very short time up to 114°, nor can I remember ever to have seen it above one or two degrees below the freezing point; it is impossible for one to imagine how inexpressibly temperate the weather is here from the latter end of September to the latter end of June; the western part of this northern division is not so very hot in summer, as the whole eastern shore of the Peninsula is, but its sea shore is much more exposed to the bleak winter winds.

In the southern division I have never seen the mercury in Fahrenheit's thermometer below the temperate point, and I cannot remember ever to have seen it higher than in the northern division.

This southern part of the Peninsula is in the months of May, June, July, and August very subject, on its west side, to dreadful squalls, and there is a certainty of one or more of these tornadoes every day, when during that season, the wind comes any where between the south south east, and south west, but they are of very short duration; then also thunder and lightning is frequent, but nothing near so violent as in Carolina and Georgia, nor do I remember any more than one instance of damage occasioned by it, when it made a large hole in a stone wall of a house at St. Augustine; yet very few electrical conductors are made use of there.

Before I quit this subject of the air, I cannot help taking notice of a remark, which I have read some where, made by Dr. James McKenzie, which is that dampness or discoloring of plaister, and wainscoat, the soon moulding of bread, moistness of spunge, dissolution of loaf sugar, rusting of metals, and rotting of furniture, are certain marks of a bad air; now every one of those marks except the last, are more to be seen at St. Augustine, than in any place I ever was at, and yet I do not think, that on all the continent, there is a more healthy spot; burials have been less frequent here, than any where else, where an equal number of inhabitants is to be found, and it was remarked during my stay there, that when a detachment of the royal regiment of artillery once arrived there in a sickly state, none of the inhabitants caught the contagion, and the troops themselves soon recruited; I also know of several asthmatic and consumptive subjects, who have been greatly relieved there; the Spanish inhabitants lived here to a great age, and certain it is, that the people of the Havannah looked on it as their Montpelier, frequenting it for the sake of health; I therefore ascribe the above circumstances to the nature of the stone, wherewith the houses are built.

Haloes, or as they are vulgarly called circles round the sun and moon, are very often seen, and are sure forerunners of rain if not wind storms; those of the sun are less frequent, but they are always followed by very violent gales of winds; it is remarkable, that if in those haloes a break is observed, that break is always towards the quarter, from whence the wind begins; water spouts are often seen along this coast, but I cannot learn that they ever occasioned any mischief, nor could I learn, that earthquakes have been experienced in this part of the world.

Of West Florida, there needs scarce any thing more to be said, with regard to the article of climate, or air, than what I have said of my northern division of East Florida, it agreeing in every respect therewith, except that the winter is something more severe, it often killing tender fruit trees;* however, as the sickness of 1765 at Mobile, has been a subject of much discourse, and as it has been set up (by people who would if possible prevent the population of so fine a country) as a scarecrow to such, as are easily deceived by appearances, and never enquire deeper than external shews; this fatal disorder has been followed by the entire ruin of Mobile, and had nearly spoiled the reputation of Pensacola, which though situate in as fine, airy, dry and healthy a site as any on the continent, and at least at a distance of sixty miles from Mobile, had yet the misfortune to be confounded with it, and to be thought liable to the same misfortunes; I will give as faithful an account of that illness, as has come within the verge of my knowledge.

*In 1771-2, it killed apple and pear trees.

Mobile was originally built by the French, after they had left their old Fort Condè, thirty miles higher up the Tombecbé, having found that situation very inconvenient; they now made at least as injudicious a choice in another respect, by placing themselves at a distance from good water, on low ground, and directly opposite to some marshy islands, at the division between the salt and fresh water, a situation well known in America not to be eligible for the sake of health, but the convenience of the navigation up to it being the best in their possession at that time, its being a barrier against the Spaniards, and the easy communication with the Chactaw and Upper Creek nations, as well as with the Mississippi, made people forget the evils attending it, and it soon became, from a fort, a pretty town, with some very good houses built in no inelegant taste, yet the French inhabitants duly observing the inconveniences of this unhealthy spot, adapted their constitutions to it, by a regular sober life, being uncommonly careful to get their drinking water from a rivulet at the distance of three miles, where it is very good, neither did they give into excess of drinking spirituous liquors and wine, and at the season, when the continued heat caused a putrefaction of the water in pools, and exhaled the moisture of this low ground, thereby filling the air with noxious vapours, and thus occasioning the acute epidemical disorders (that proved so fatal in the year 1765) those prudent inhabitants retired to their plantations up or down the river, some even at a small distance, there to enjoy a freer circulation of a less putrified air, thus also by the depopulation of the town, the remaining inhabitants suffered less by being less crowded together, and there was such instances of longevity here as are not to be outdone in any part of America. Let me beg and moderate winds, allowing Gauld to set out in the cutter with a crew of sixteen men to resume his work. Taking up where he had left off, near the eastern end of Mississippi Sound, he surveyed and drafted on his field sheets the coastline as far as the west arm of the river known then as now by the name Pascagoula. Gauld's working drawings indicate that he ascended the east branch of the river some eight miles to "Pt. de l'auvergue" and the west branch about an equal distance. The coastal examination took him into the "Bay de Baros" (Portersville Bay, into which Bayou Le Batre flows), past "Pt. aux Herbes," along the shoreline of a large bay unnamed by him but now known as Grand Bay, around and over "Grande Batture or The Great Bank," and into "L'ance de Grande Bature," now known as Pointe aux Chênes Bay. From this bay Gauld rounded the Pointe aux Chênes, briefly examined part of the "Bay de Coussot" (Bayou Casotte), passed Pascagoula Bluff, and finally made his way into the west arm of the river and proceeded through a navigable cutoff to the east branch and thence to Hugo Krebs's plantation. Here the cutter anchored while Gauld enjoyed the hospitality of the most prominent planter on the coast. Krebs's plantation is now part of the city of Pascagoula, but his name is perpetuated in the nearby cove known as Krebs Lake.[16]

In describing the Pascagoula River, Gauld remarked that it emptied "through several mouths" and between the easternmost and westernmost, a distance of about four miles, was a continuous bed of oyster shells showing only sufficient depths for a boat. The sole navigable channel was in the westernmost branch, which had a depth of four feet. About twenty miles above its mouth this large river divided into two branches which descended southward about five or six miles apart with "nothing but low marshes, lagoons and intersections from one to the other" for several miles before they reached the sea. Inside the entrances, both branches deepened to three to six fathoms and were reported "to be navigable for upwards of 50 leagues to the heart of the Choctaw Nation." The soil along the river improved as one ascended; there were good plantations on the east side of the river, but a private convoy or in a single bateau, D'Abbadie would indeed do everything possible to help him on his way.[29]

Distrustful of this offer of D'Abbadie, who seemed to him intent only on delaying the taking possession of the Illinois Country, Pittman now proposed to Farmar a lone, secret attempt to reach the Illinois overland.

"The Strong Inclination I have to execute your orders relative to the Illinois has determined me on another Method to arrive at that place in a much Shorter time & with a probability of much more safety than by the R. Mississippi. I purpose quitting this place in four or five days under pretence of returning to Mobille instead of which I shall go to the Bay of Pascagoula to one Monsr Creps a Dutch Inhabitant there whom I will engage to lend me a Pirogue and 3 or 4 Negroes to carry me up, to the Chickasaw from thence I will proceed to the Cherokees with three or four Chactaws who I will satisfy for their trouble. When I arrive at the Cherokees I will endeavour to engage 12 or 14 of them to proceed with me to the Illinois falling down the Cherokee River. The Cherokees I shall engage with will carry with them white Colours in order to talk with the Illinois, by which sanction my person will be sacred to those Indians. If I find they can be brought to terms I will remain at the Illinois the winter if not will drive down the Mississipi with the Current, should I not succeed so far to to get the Assistance I want from the Cherokees, I will return to Mobille by way of Tombeckbé. I shall not take any one with me from hence but my Servant and the Interpreter who has engaged to go with me and to whom alone I have entrusted this secret which he has promised faithfully to keep. . . . I leave my little boy [a slave?] and my effects at Maxant's who will give me an order for any goods in his Magazine above and a Letter of Credit for any money I shall want."[30]

While Pittman awaited Major Farmar's approval of his new plan, D'Abbadie, in accordance with his promises, "talked" with more delegations of Indians to smooth the way for English occupation. On 14 July he received a deputation of twelve Choctaws "in the presence of M. Pittman. . . . I did everything to tranquillize them and assured them that the English would provide for their needs and would also give them marks of their friendship," he noted in his journal.

On the same day he received three Tunica chiefs and thirty warriors whom he had ordered down to New Orleans for censure and explanation of their conduct in March. In the presence of Pittman the governor declared that his heart had bled because they had rejected his talk sent in advance of the Loftus expedition. "Why," he asked, "have you struck at our friends, the English, who have done nothing to you, and are going to the Illinois to take possession of the territory which the great emperor has given them?" After a further exchange, the chiefs agreed that, since he ordered it, "we shall be peaceful and the English can come. Let them not be ingrates and let them give us

But as he never has acted as a Judge or Lawyer and is a native of England, it may be proper to suggest that about eleven years ago he came to this State with letters of recommendation from M[r] Jefferson yourself and several other respectable characters; on which he was for some time employed as the Principal teacher in the Transylvania Seminary. For the last seven or eight years he has with great propriety officiated as Secretary of State here, and made such proficiency in the Study of Law that a year or two ago he was appointed by our Executive with the Attorney General to make a Compilation of the Criminal Common Law. And with pleasure I subjoin that he is a Gentleman of liberal Education, good Genius, agreeable manners, and remarkeable attention to any businss he engages in. He is also a very inteligent Republican, and I believe his political principles induced him to adventure to America, where, in every sense of the word, he has become naturalized. CALEB WALLACE

[Addressed] The Hon'ble James Madison Secretary of State For the General Government

EPHRAIM KIRBY TO THE PRESIDENT

FORT STODDERT May 1st 1804.

SIR In your letter of the 15th of July last,[47] you was pleased to say, that "the number, nature, and extent of our settlements east of Pearl River was yet but imperfectly known," and to request, that during my continuance in this part of the country, I would endeavour to obtain full and faithful answers to certain queries, which were at the same time proposed. My attention has been turned to this subject, since my first arrival in the Territory, but have delayed to make any communication until this time, that my information might be as full and correct as possible.—The following is the result of my inquiries.

"Quer: 1. What are the settlements on the east of Pearl River, their geographical position, extent, and numbers?"

On the Chickasawhay, a principal water of the Pascagoula, are about seven families recently settled; all the other american citizens are settled upon the Mobile and Tombigbie Rivers, from the 31st degree of north latitude to the mouth of Sinttee-bogue or Snake Creek (a northern boundary between the United States and the Chactaw nation) a distance of about ninety two miles by water, and about sixty by land. This settlement may be computed at about two hundred families; fifty or sixty of which are on the east side of the Mobile, called the Tensaw settlement, and extends upwards to a place called the cut off about eight miles above the confluence of the Alabama with the Tombigbie.—This is much the most opulent and respectable settlement in the country.—The remaining inhabitants are very equally distributed within the limits abovementioned, on the west side of the Mobile and Tombigbie, and on the Creeks which flow into them.

"2. Are there good lands adjoining the settlements to render them capable of enlargement

It is said there is good land on the Chickasawhay, sufficient to admit a considerable settlement.—The country on the west side of the Mobile and Tombigbie is generally a Pine-baren of great extent, and will not for a considerable length of time become otherwise useful, than as range for cattle and healthy positions for habitations.—The principal cultivations of the inhabitants has always been on the east side.—As we ascend the River, the land on the west side becomes better, and when we arrive at the hilly country, it is said to be universally good on both sides, and from the superior quality of its water, and the salubrity of its air, will, when the Indian title is extinguished, admit a vast population.

"3. Have they encroached on the Indians?"

The Inhabitants have taken their residence without the Indian lines, but for want of good land, have effected most of their cultivation upon ground where the native right remains unextinguished.—To this practice there has been no objection by the Indians until lately.

"4. Are the settlements in a course of enlargement by persons settleing down on lands without title?"

At this time the settlements do not appear to be in a course of enlargement by people of any description. The embarrassments experienced from the Spanish Government at the mouth of the River, will discourage the regular population of the country, as well as the industry of its inhabitants.—

"5. The general character of the inhabitants and from whence they are?"

This section of the United States has long afforded an assylum to those who prefer voluntary exile to the punishments ordained by law for heinous offences.—The present inhabitants (with few exceptions) are illiterate, wild and savage, of depraved morals, unworthy of public confidence or private esteem; litigious, disunited, and knowing each other, universally distrustful of each other. The magistrates without dignity, respect, probity, influence or authority.—The administration of justice, imbecile and corrupt. The militia, without discipline or competent officers.

The most antient inhabitants of the country, are French people who resided in it previous to the peace of 1763, and have continued under the several successions of government since that period.—These with their descendents are few in number, and generally peaceable honest, well disposed citizens.—The next most antient class is composed of emigrants from the Carolina's and Georgia, who were attainted and proscribed for treasonable practices during the revolution.—These not only hate the american government, but having long lived without any restraint, committing many enormities against society are now hostile to all law and to every government.—Another class who emigrated generally from the States last mentioned, at a later period, are almost universally fugitives from justice, and many of them felons of the first magnitude.—The last and most meretorious class are also generally emigrants from the States already named, since the organization of government here, and are mostly poor people who have come hither to avoid the demands of creditors, or to gain a precarious subsistence in a wilderness.

"6. A special list by name of all such individuals worthy of appointment to such offices as may be necessary among them, and characters so particularized, as that we may know for what each is fit?"

From the foregoing observations, it follows that the list of individuals worthy of appointment to office must necessarily be small.—These people have no confidence in each other—they prefer strangers for office to any one among themselves; and very few selections from among themselves can with any appearance of propriety be made.—Indeed I forbear to say any thing respecting individuals, lest I should be the cause of misleading, rather than of assisting the judgment of the executive on this subject.

"7. A general account of the Spanish settlments in the adjacent country, stating all material circumstances relative to them, particularly their geographical position and numbers. Those on the Chatahouchy, Escambia, Mobile, and Pascagoula Rivers especially."

No certain information respecting the Spanish settlements on the Chatahouchy has been obtained On the Escambia there is no other settlement but the Post of Pensacola, which needs no description. From thence to Fish River on the Bay of Mobile there are none except a few scattering cabins of fishermen and fowlers.—From Fish-River following the southeastern shore of the Bay and River Mobile to the 31st degree of north latitude there may be twenty families scattered along the coast.

The River Mobile, (which name it takes below the junction of the Alabama and the Tombigbie) flowing through a level country, discharges into the Bay (like the Mississippi) by several channels. At the head of the Bay, on the northwestern channel, in Lat. 30°—40 N. stands the Town of Mobile.—It is a compact village on a handsome site, containing about sixty families, and a greater number of dwellings.—It was once much larger and more flourishing.—It now presents the gloomy appearance of a depressed colonial establishment.—The government having authorized a monopoly of the whole trade of the place in one favourite house, all commercial enterprize is annihilated, and the natural efforts of industry in the various branches of business connected with commerce, effectually paralysed.—Nature has however designed this position for a great City.—It is at the mouth of one of the finest navigable waters in the United States, which, at some future time, will float down the produce of an extensive and fertile interior country

From the Town of Mobile to the Pascagoula, there are about eighteen families settled along the shores of the Bay and at the mouth of the River; and from thence to Pearl River, and upon the same are about thirty families. These settlements compose the dependencies of Mobile, within the limits of which are two organised Companies of Militia, but they are said to be rather nominal than effective.

"8. Their military posts, the position and strength of each, and especially on the Mobile."

There are no military Posts in this vicinity, except at Pensacola and Mobille—Of the first nothing need be said—its position and strength is generally known.

The Fort at Mobile is an antient work, constructed on correct military principles, sufficiently large to contain five hundred men, but is in a decayed condition.—It has been commanded by a Captain until, within a few weeks past, a Col[l] was sent to the command from Pensacola, with a reinforcement of men, and additional supplies of ordnance and military stores.—The works are now undergoing considerable repairs, but cannot easily be sufficiently strengthened to resist the assault of a brave and determined force.

It has been reported that the Gov[r] of West Florida, when on a late visit at Mobile, ascended the River for the purpose of selecting a position for a new Fort, on the Tensaw-branch, a little below the present American line. Whether it was determined that this place should be fortified is not yet ascertained. The Spaniards are daily becomeing more troublesom at the mouth of this River.—The inhabitants above, although sorely oppressed, have been hitherto prevailed upon to wait patiently for a redress of grievances by the General Government.—How long a rude people, who have been in the habit of redressing themselves on all occasions, will, under such circumstances continue quiet and peaceable, is uncertain.—

I have received no communication direct or indirect from the seat of government, since my arrival in this Territory.—About four weeks

SIR. Your letter of the 19th Ult.[51] addressed to the Secretary of State has been received; and I am directed to inform you that you can draw on the Secretary of State, for the amount of the salary due the Clerk you were authorized to employ to aid you in the discharge of your duties during the absence of Governor Claiborne.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT May 31st 1804.

EDWARD TURNER, Esq[r] Register &c. Washington, M.T.

SIR, Your letters of 6th & 27th ult[o] [51] have been duly received.

It appears to me, that the Commissioners must make a report upon all unconfirmed British grants, whether there be adverse claims to them or not.

I do not understand on what ground the Board issues Certificates, before all the claims are filed. There may be conflicting claims of the same species, such as several confirmed Spanish titles for the same land &c. Will not there be some danger, that the Certificate may not issue to the right person? and would any inconvenience have arisen from a delay in the decisions until December next? This hint, however, is merely thrown out for their consideration.[52]

ter Marie-Felicité was married in Opelousas in April of 1793, the first notice of Belestre in that community.[44]

His wife, Joachime Coulon de Villiers, died in Opelousas in September of 1817. The estate of the couple consisted of eight Negro slaves, a few oxen and carts, furniture, and other materials to the value of $5,022.75. Louis Picoté de Belestre died at Opelousas and his succession is dated December, 1821. His will provided that the modest estate be divided among his surviving children.[45]

His son Francisco (baptized, of course, François) became a Spanish cadet in 1778. In a letter of 1780 to Governor de Gálvez, the senior Belestre had expressed thanks for the cadetship and:

> I wish that his conduct in the expeditions of Baton Rouge and of Pensacola might answer to the valor of the august chief who has directed them.[46]

Francisco's service sheet of 1815 lists his promotions as sub-lieutenant (1785), lieutenant (1791), and captain (1800). In addition to the campaigns mentioned above, he had been at Mobile (1780), San Marcos de Apalache (1800), and on September 4, 1805, as commandant of the Pascagoula Post "as successfully prevented the landing of an English corsair by attacking the landing party . . . despite heavy fire from the corsair."[47]

In December of 1816, Francisco Belestre played a role in the American filibuster attempt to capture Pensacola. He commanded fortifications at Barrancas when the American ship arrived. Some of his men were deceived and captured, but Belestre received reinforcements and held at Barrancas.[48] In his father's will, Francisco is referred to as now in Havana in the service of Spain.[49]

As the Spanish departed New Orleans, Pensacola became the administrative center of the West Florida colony. The United States, however, disputed Spain's authority. A revolt in the Florida parishes, situated between Lake Pontchartrain and the Pearl River, led to annexation of the territory by the United States. Spanish control became increasingly tenuous in the face of American filibusters. Finally in 1819 Spain, by the Adams-Onís Treaty, surrendered her remaining claims to West Florida, and at the same time ceded East Florida to the United States.

Pascagoula: The Place and Its People

After the establishment of Biloxi, the French undertook a thorough exploration of the area around the outpost.[3] Their travels led them to a river, which they named after the small tribe of Indians that they found living in a village about two days' journey by canoe upstream from the mouth.[3] Several accounts of the initial encounters between the Indians and the French exist, all written by participant observers. The French transcribed the name of the tribe in different ways. Iberville and Sauvole spelled it "Pascoboulas";[4] Le Page du Pratz, "Paska-Ogoulas" and "Pacha Ogoulas";[5] Du Mont de Montigny, "Paskagoulas";[6] and Pénicaut, "Pascagoulas",[7] which became the standard rendering. Cartographic reference to the "Pascoboulas" village first appeared in the de Fer map of 1705 (Ill. 1). The name of the tribe, according to Le Page du Pratz, meant "Nation of Bread", for in the Indians' language "Pacha" meant "bread" and "Ogula" meant "nation."[8]

The explorers' accounts provide valuable information about the aboriginal inhabitants of the Pascagoula area. In 1699 Sauvole, commandant at Biloxi after Iberville's departure, noted that there were "not twenty cabins in all" at the village. The following year Iberville recorded in his journal the following account of his visit:

> On the 29th [April 1700] I presented myself at the village at 7 AM. This nation, like the others, is decimated by illness. Those who remain are handsome, especially the women, who are the best looking that I have seen in this country. Having known that I was to come to their village, they had built me a new cabin.[9]

The Pascagoulas were a friendly people. They came to visit the French at Biloxi with quantities of deerskins and dried meat. At the post they smoked the calumet and received presents and a firearm from the French.[10]

André Pénicaut, who had been in Sauvole's party in 1699, left an account of great ethnographic interest. The time of year was August and, in the heat of summer, the men and boys of the village walked about completely nude. The women wore only a "hank of moss, which passed between their legs." The chief greeted the French warmly and provided a generous meal of buffalo, bear, and deer meat, local fruits (peaches, watermelons, pumpkins), and breads, one made of maize and another of a native grain. The men of the village performed a ceremonial dance that Pénicaut described in elaborate detail. The French spent the night sleeping on native cots of woven cane covered by buffalo skins. The following day they observed the agricultural methods of the Pascagoulas, who used no plows, but worked the soil with a hooked stick.[11]

In addition to Pénicaut's favorable record, we have a ghoulish one one from Dumont de Montigny, who developed a morbid fascination for the unusual funeral practices of the Pascagoulas, who did not bury their chiefs, but dried the cadaver with smoke and fire and then placed it in their temple of worship.

Le Page du Pratz, though admittedly not an entirely unbiased source, wrote that the French who settled in the area near the Pascagoulas lived in peace and harmony, "like brothers", with their Indian neighbors. "Because," he explains, "the [French], being naturally peaceful, and knowing furthermore the character of the natives, know how to live with the Nations of America."[13] The traditional hunting grounds of the Pascagoulas had been the area to the west, north of Biloxi. (Ill. 2) While The Indians found the French tolerant, after the Treaty of Paris and the British takeover of West Florida in 1763, the Pascagoulas, along with other coastal tribes, began to leave their traditional lands and to migrate west to Louisiana.[14]

Documentary evidence shows that the first European to settle permanently in the Pascagoula area was probably Jean-Baptiste Baudreau, called Graveline, a merchant who came down from Canada and settled in Mobile. A map of the fort and town of Mobile (Appx. A1) shows a lot belonging to Graveline and his name also appears in the parish register of 1708. When visiting France to negotiate the sale of several lots of skins, Graveline approached ministers of the Crown to promote a scheme to populate the nascent colony on the Gulf coast. He returned to Mississippi about 1706 or 1707 armed with a royal patent that permitted him to outfit the brigantine la Marguertie and to despatch it to La Rochelle in the hope that it would return with people and tools.

At his own expense he also sought to bring Canadians down to the area to establish farming communities.[15] In league with other Canadians he outfitted a vessel with general merchandise to conduct trade in the Spanish territories in contravention of Spain's monopoly.[16] For various reasons he efforts met no success.

About 1716 Graveline received a grant of a tract of land on the Pascagoula River, at Bayou Belle Fontaine, opposite the present-day site of "Old Spanish Fort." He had petitioned the land for the purpose of establishing a plantation for raising cattle.[17] Eighty years later his son, also named Jean-Baptiste Baudreau, when seeking reconfirmation of title by the Spanish government, made mention of his vacherie, pasture land for cattle.[18] Moreover, a communication to the Company of the Indies from the elder Graveline in 1726 mentioned the existence of a sawmill on his property.[19] In addition to the close proximity of Graveline's property to "Old Spanish Fort", he himself has a distant relationship to the owners of the latter: The mother of his son's wife, Catherine Donkin (or, Doucin?), in her second marriage became the second wife of Joseph Simon, called La Pointe.[20]

With the creation of the Company of the Indies in 1719, the French were seized with colonization fever. Many speculative schemes for the settlement of the vast Louisiana territory were presented to the Company, which granted exclusive concessions of land to various individuals or groups, who were to establish French settlers on the sites. Among the recipients was Mme Chaumont, born Marie-Catherine Barre in Flanders, and wife of a wealthy Parisian bureaucrat, Antoine Chaumont,[21] who received rights to a tract on the Pascagoula River, at a site about six leagues northeast of Biloxi. Over the years a number of "myths" have developed about Mme Chaumont, and it is necessary to note here that neither she nor her husband were of the titled nobility and that she herself never came to her concession in America.

Agents for Mme Chaumont recruited colonists and purchased necessary supplies and equipment to outfit an expedition. In August, 1720, two vessels set sail from l'Orient, la Gironde and la Volange, carrying three hundred persons, who were destined for the concession of Mme Chaumont and that of the Marquis de Mézières. The boats reached Ship Island on the 3rd of January 1721,[22] and there the new arrivals were stranded for some time with short supplies and inadequate housing. Two members of the Mézières party wrote pleadingly to the director of their concession, "While awaiting the pleasure of receiving news from you, we beg you to remember us and not to allow us to be left for long in this Mississippi inferno."[23] One may imagine that the Chaumont group was equally as unhappy.

The manager of the Chaumont undertaking, Eustache Révillon, Sieur des Rondelettes, in time moved his charges to the Pascagoula site to establish a plantation, around the location of present-day Moss Point. (Ill. 2) From the beginning it was obvious that there was an overabundance of artisans and insufficient laborers to clear and cultivate the land. Révillon recognized the problem and purchased a number of slaves to alleviate the labor shortage. Within a short time the land was producing wheat, but success was brief. Owing to the indifference of the Chaumonts, essential supplies for the continued support of the colony were not forthcoming. Révillon left the place in 1722 to return to France, and many of the settlers deserted as well. Successive administrators, later charged with mismanagement, perhaps carried on as well as they could under the circunstances, as years passed without any communications or orders whatsoever from Mme Chaumont.[24] By 1733 the settlement was completely abandoned and officials in New Orleans were trying to liquidate the holdings and settle accounts.[25]

Several families permanently settled in the Pascagoula area simultaneously with, but perhaps not as a part of, the Chaumont undertaking. A 1726 census shows twenty-seven white persons, two servants, fifty-six black slaves, and twelve Indian slaves were living at Pascagoula. One of the white men was Joseph Simon de La Pointe.[26]

La Pointe, a carpenter from Longueil, Canada,[27] had probably come with the Iberville group in 1699. His name appeared in the census of Biloxi for 1700 and in that of Mobile for 1711.[28] In 1715 he petitioned the Governor of Louisiana for a grant of land in the vicinity of the Pascagoula River, which request was approved and acted upon. The concession was to > land which fronts the Sea Shore, containing one league [approximately three miles] in width, be it more or less, by one league in depth, running its course due north. Bounded on the south by the Fish River, and on the west by the Sea Shore fronting the Grand Bay and on the east by its depth, for the purpose of placing a stock of cattle and to establish a plantation thereon.[29]

By substituting the word "north" for "south" relative to the Fish River boundary, the tract would include the site occupied by "Old Spanish Fort," which makes La Pointe the original owner of the property.

The land remained in the hands of La Pointe's descendants for some two centuries. Although each step in the chain of title cannot be documented, often later transactions verify preceding changes of ownership. Upon La Pointe's death, the property passed to his daughter, Marie Simon de La Pointe, who was the first wife of Hugo Ernestus Krebs. Krebs was not a baron, as later generations claimed him to be. He was a native of Neumagen, Germany, and was born in 1714. The dates of his arrival on the Gulf coast and his marriage to Marie Simon are unknown, but some family members claim he came in 1730, at the age of sixteen. After his wife's death in 1751, he inherited the La Pointe property and lived for another twenty-five years. Upon transfer of West Florida to England in 1763, Hugo Krebs elected to remain at Pascagoula and obtained recognition of his title from the new government. (Appx. A2)

Krebs died in 1776. Although his will makes no mention of any immovable property that he left his heirs (Appx. A3), the next owner was his son Joseph Simon Krebs (1742-1796). The latter had married Marie Louise Du Pont, and in December 1803, several years after his death, his widow petitioned the Spanish government for and received a grant of 800 arpents of land on the east side of the Pascagoula River. In 1817, after the Gulf coast region had passed out of Spanish control, the widow Krebs secured confirmation of ownership from the United States government of a tract of land, one league square, on the Pascagoula River (Appx. A4, A5), and upon her death the land passed to Joseph Krebs, Jr.

A "quit claim" statement made by Florida Krebs in 1891 (Appx. A6) explains the convoluted changes in ownership that followed. Joseph Krebs had possession of the land from about 1834 to 1853, when he sold it to Abram Gindrat. As the buyer was unable to pay the purchase price, the property reverted to Krebs after a year. In 1854 Krebs gave an undivided half portion to W. G. Humphries, his son-in-law. Krebs died that year and left the remaining half interest to his children, to share equally, but Humphries, the executor, put Krebs's remaining interest up for sale at public auction, where it was acquired by L. D. Krebs. Sedoine Krebs, another of Joseph's children, bought out interests held by L. D. Krebs and Humphries. Sedoine and his heirs held "actual adverse possession" for about thirty years, and in 1880 Sedoine's heirs subdivided the estate among themselves, drawing lots to select individual parcels. To Cecile Krebs, Mrs. Joseph Johnson, went Number 3, on which "Old Spanish Fort" is situated. (Appx. A7, A8) The property subsequently came into the possession of the Board of Supervisors of Jackson County, Mississippi, in 1942, as a result of a sale effected by E. J. and J. I. Ford. (Appx. A9)

History of the Site and the Building Known as the "Old Spanish Fort"

The extensive documentary research that the investigators conducted turned up no original material with a specific reference to "Old Spanish Fort." It is possible, nonetheless, to reconstruct a partial history of the building by careful interpretation of previously known data and interpolation of some new facts. Also it is possible to shed light on the lives of some of the residents from fragmentary references that exist both in documents and in travelers' accounts.

The most tantalizing pieces of evidence are the well-known 1726 map and drawings by Dumont de Montigny, which show the area around the Pascagoula River, the Chaumont concession with its buildings and plantings, and the "Habitation du Sr. de la Pointe au Pascagoula." (Ills. 3, 4) Although the map is roughly sketched and imprecise, the drawing of the La Pointe settlement clearly shows an extensive palisaded compound situated on the Pascagoula River ("C" on the map, on a diagonal line down from the lower left-hand corner of the drawing), with an imposing main house, a chapel, and several ancillary buildings of different sizes, all within the confines of the stockade. Outside, on the riverbank, are two small structures that are designated "L" and are noted as carpenter shops (scierie à bras).

Aside from the drawing, there is no documentary evidence to prove that the whole or any part of the compound was ever built. Perhaps Dumont de Montigny was presenting a projected settlement. Historians recognize that the French eighteenth-century cartographers and travelers in Louisiana were notorious propagandists for France and for the colonial projects they were describing. Dumont de Montigny's drawings, while primitive in artistic quality, nevertheless strike one with their almost idealized pastoral symmetry that seems at odds with the asperous realities of frontier life. (See Ill. 5, Dumont de Montigny's drawing of a settlement on the Yazoo.) The carpenter shops at the La Pointe site, however, show with precision a building style then in current use in the 1720s, which consisted of a framework of heavy, roughhewn timbers covered with planks, but the building that stands today, while of more or less the same shape as those in the drawing, is of a different type of construction. Numerous repairs and alterations that have been made over a period of two centuries have no doubt brought about drastic changes in the structure. The side planks must have rotted in time and an oyster shell mortar, such as exists today, deemed more durable, perhaps.

There are bits of evidence that give weight to the assumption that at least one carpenter shop was built, that is, the present-day building. La Pointe, according to the 1711 census, was after all a carpenter,[30] but more importantly a sawmill or woodworking shop was necessary to prepare materials for other buildings to be erected. The location by the riverbank facilitated the transport of newly felled timber or perhaps even wood from the nearby Graveline sawmill. Finally, the shop may have predated the Dumont de Montigny drawing by at least a year, because in 1725 La Pointe and his nephew, named La Vergne, received a contract from colonial officials at Mobile to deliver to the town boards and planks, for which the two received an advance of 500 livres.[31]

That other buildings were erected on the site one can easily conjecture. The small size of "Old Spanish Fort" would, one may assume, preclude the raising of a family of thirteen children, as Hugo Ernestus Krebs did. (Appx. A3) Furthermore, Romans's firsthand account of the effects of the devastating hurricane of 1772 mentions other structures on the site. He wrote,

> The greatest fury of it [the hurricane] was spent on > the neighbourhood of the Pasca Oocola river; the plantation of Mr. Krebs there was almost totally destroyed, . . . the houses were left uncovered, his smith's shop was almost all washed away, all his works and out houses blown down.[32]

In searching through French documents, the investigators came across an interesting item, dated 1726, the same year as the aforementioned drawing, in which a Sieur de Merveilleux petitioned officials of the Company of the Indies in New Orleans for permission and backing to establish a fort and trading post on the Pascagoula River for commerce with the Choctaw Nation. (See Appx.A10) for translation of this document.) There is no evidence that the project was ever undertaken or funded, but it is important to note that the outpost would have benefitted residents of the area, as well as the Company. The fort was to house a garrison of thirty men, which would have offered protection from the incursions of hostile Indian tribes. Merveilleux requested that the post be stocked with a wide assortment of carpentry tools and supplies, which were of use locally, in addition to other merchandise for the Indian trade.

Had the proposed fort and trading post been established, the Pascagoula settlement would no doubt have been an area of greater strategic importance, economic activity, and social change. Instead, in the official correspondence throughout the colonial period, references to the site almost disappear after about 1730. "Official correspondence" from various archival repositories consists of letters between government and military officials concerning administrative and military matters. During the French period the letters were to or from officials in Mobile, the civil and administrative center on the Gulf coast.

Under the British, Pensacola and Natchez served these dual functions, and during the Spanish period, Mobile and Pensacola.

It was not until 1810 that there was any reference to a military unit at Pascagoula. That year, in the face of threatened seizure by American filibusters, Spain appears to have stationed soldiers there, for a letter to the King asks approval of an expenditure of ten pesos per month for the rental of a house for the commandant of the Pascagoula post.[33] There is no mention of the number of troops, whether they were barracked or bivouaced, or if a defensive structure of any sort was erected. In March 1811 West Florida officials reported to Spain that Americans had descended upon Pass Christian and Pascagoula.[34] Given the absence of letters to or from Pascagoula, the conclusion is incontrovertible that no colonial officer was stationed here, that no fort or garrison existed until perhaps near the end of the Spanish period.

As additional proof of the latter statement, the Ottens map of 1755 (Ill. 6), which shows by a color code the fortified settlements of North America, notes no fort at the "Pascagoulas." Under the English dozens of land grants and title confirmations were made around Mobile Bay and Pensacola, but only Krebs is mentioned at Pascagoula.[35] (Appx. A2) A census taken by the Spanish in 1788 has no separate listing for Pascagoula, but designates it under the "District of Mobile." (Ill. 7) After the transfer of West Florida to the United States, the residents petitioned the government for title to the land they occupied. example) living in the Pascagoula area that one may conclude that during the first century population increases occurred as a result of the natural growth of the families and descendants of the original settlers.

The documents studied revealed a few details about the Pascagoula site and its people. Given the legends that have grown surrounding the origins of "Old Spanish Fort," this report will not repeat information from secondary accounts, but confine the narrative to data from primary sources.

Devastation by hurricanes is a recurrent theme in Gulf coast history. Mention had been made of the 1772 storm that caused great damage to the Krebs property. In 1740 the hapless residents of Pascagoula were hit by two storms in quick succession on the 11th and the 18th of September. During the first the winds blew for twelve hours and for eighteen during the second. Half of nearby Dauphine Island was washed away, according to a contemporary report. At Pascagoula, supplies and buildings were destroyed, and cattle herds decimated, as a tidal wave swept drowning animals into the woods and then carried many head out to sea.[36] In 1772, when a similar storm hit, "at Botereaux's [Baudreau's?, i.e., Graveline's?] cow pen, the people were about six weeks consulting on a method of finding and bringing home their cattle."[37]

In 1763 the Superior Council of Louisiana heard the case of the succession of Sieur Pierre Laporte, who had died at the home of "surgeon" Krebs at Pascagoula. Death had occurred under mysterious circumstances on October 5th (just before formal transfer of the province to Great Britain). Krebs testified before the Council that Laporte had been brought to his house with a large wound in his right shoulder, which he refused to explain. As Laporte had left no will, the Superior Council disposed of his effects. The same documents also mention that a Captain Donresta [sic], a Spanish officer, was rooming at the Krebs house for a month and a half, while awaiting an opportunity to go to Pensacola.[38]

Captain Bernard Romans, the English naturalist, in writing about his visit to the Krebs place in the 1770s, noted that Krebs had lost his crop of rice and corn as a result of the hurricane of 1772.[39] Romans was interested in promoting the cultivation of cotton, and his account mentioned machines that he had seen to separate the seed from the fiber --early forms of cotton gins. "One of the machines," he reported,

> I saw at Mr. Krebs at Pasca Oocooloo, but as it was partly taken down, he claiming the invention was very cautious in answering my questions, I cannot describe it accurately; I am informed that one of these improving mills will deliver seventy or eighty pounds of clean cotton per diem.[40]

References to two later Krebs family members were also found. A 1793 document mentions Joseph Krebs as a syndic of Pascagoula,[41] which indicates that the settlement had some type of representative local government, probably along the lines of the Spanish cabildo. During the Civil War a Joseph H. Krebs joined Twiggs' Rifles, Company L of the 27th Mississippi Regiment, on August 29, 1861, and appeared on the last muster roll of his regiment dated February 29, 1864.[42]

Conclusions

The documentary investigation had revealed that the Pascagoula River was the site of a small Indian village before the arrival of the Europeans. The first French settlers eatablished farms and engaged in the Indian trade and timber business and raised cattle as well. During the 1720s visionary entrepreneurs proposed schemes to transform the region into a flourishing center of commerce and agriculture. Concessionaires of the Company of the Indies sent colonists, but lack of sufficient support and, no doubt, the primitive state of European technology at the beginning of the eighteenth century condemned large-scale colonization enterprises to failure. The colonization impresarios left, but some of the early settlers, Baudreau-Greveline and La Pointe, remained on their land, to clear it and eventually to achieve a prosperous condition through hard work and perseverance.

During the French, English, and Spanish periods, Pascagoula remained a small settlement of people. Not an administrative or military center, it was governed and defended from Mobile or Pensacola. It escaped periods of explosive population growth and economic expansion. Instead, it enjoyed what can only be afforded to smaller towns: stability, measured progress, and family continuity.

Regarding the building called "Old Spanish Fort," it is clearly not a fort. It may have been one of La Pointe's carpenter shops, or it may have served some other function. Possibly it was used as a residence at some time by his descendants. The core of the structure appears to have been built in the same manner as other buildings of the early French period, and archaeological studies have dated it back to the early eighteenth century. Over the years many repairs, alterations, and additions have been carried out. In a larger center of population, say in New Orleans, significant alterations might have required architectural plans or building contracts. In Pascagoula these were probably not necessary, and none exist to document what changes took place and when they occurred.

It is important that this building, parts of which date back to the early eighteenth century, has survived more than two hundred years, while virtually every other contemporary structure in the lower Mississippi valley has disappeared. The survival may be attributed, in part, to the continuous ownership by one family of the site and the land around it. Moreover, in more densely populated areas there would have been greater population and economic pressure to subdivide the land for development at an earlier date than it occurred, or even worse to raze the building to make room for new construction. It is to our benefit that such a demolition did not take place, for the building is now a unique relic, one of the few remaining examples of the architecture of the first European settlers on the Gulf coast.

Finally, it may be of interest to speculate how the building came to be called "Old Spanish Fort." The origins of popular sobriquets such as this are difficult to pinpoint. Perhaps the appellation developed as a result of the presence of a Spanish detachment for a few months in 1810. Maybe the source was the early nineteenth century maps, many of which note the existence of an "old fort" on the west bank of Pascagoula Bay (Ill. 8). The reference was undoubtedly to the fort of Old Biloxi, but perhaps Pascagoulans interpreted it to be the old building on the Krebs property.

E. J. & J. I. FORD To BOARD OF Supervisors - 193[illegible]

COUNTY OF JACKSON...

FOR AND IN CONSIDERATION of the sum of One Thousand and Fifty Dollars ($1,050.00) cash in hand paid, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, We, the undersigned, E. J. FORD and J. I. FORD, do hereby sell, transfer and convey unto the BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF JACKSON COUNTY, MISSISSIPPI, AND their successors in office, for the use and benefit of Jackson County, Mississippi,

All right, title and interest in and to the lands hereinafter described, which was vested in the undersigned by virtue of a certain deed of conveyance executed by Fred Taylor, Commissioner of the Chancery Court of Jackson County, Mississippi, dated the day of March, 1939, to-wit:

The following described Real Estate in the City of Pascagoula, Jackson County, Mississippi, and in the private Claim of Mary L. Dupont, Claim Section 1, Township 8 South, Range 6 West, to-wit:

Lot 1 of the Cecil Johnson Subdivision of Lot No. 3 of the Gideina Krebs Tract, as per map of said Subdivision made a part of a deed executed by Cecile A. Johnson et. al. recorded in Deed Book 40, pages 128-129 of the record of deeds of Jackson County, Mississippi, together with the improvements thereon situated, the same being a tract of land approximately 505 feet East and West by approximately 583 feet North and South, there is specifically excepted from this conveyance, however, a tract of land approximately 250 feet North and South and 200 feet East and West in Northeast corner of the above land, the said excepted portion being bounded by aline running as follows:

Commencing at the present northeast corner of the Krebs Cemetery as now established by the fence lines and which point is on the West margin of Pine Street approximately 50 feet South of the shore of Krebs Lake, thence running South along the West margin of Pine Street 200 feet, thence West 200 feet, thence North 200 feet more or less to the shore of Krebs Lake, thence following the meanderings of the Lake shore to the west margin of Pine Street, thence South 50 feet more or less along said Street to the point of beginning. There is also granted to Grantee herein the right and privilege of utilizing for road and street purposes only the land lying North of the present Cemetery fence and along the North 50 feet of the lands reserved herein.

It is expressly understood that this conveyance is made subject to the following covenants and conditions, viz: The building situated on the property hereinabove described and known as the Old Spanish Fort is to be preserved by the Grantee herein and their successors in office, in a habitable condition as long as it is reasonably possible; any repairs made to the said building shall be performed in a manner that will not impair or destroy its appearance of antiquity or historical value; no additions or laterations shall be made to the said building which will result in the impairment or destruction of the historical appearance of the building; as long as the said building remains standing the public shall have the right of view and inspect the same, under such reasonable regulations as may be established by the Board of Supervisors of Jackson County, Mississippi, or any agents or custodians designated by the; the said building is not and shall not be permitted to be used for private commercial purposes.

In the event the Grantees herein, or their successors in office, shall fail to comply with any of the conditions hereinabove specified, then thereupon the the said building, together with all of the land herein conveyed lying West of the Graveyard or Krebs Cemetery, now situated on the said land, shall be and become the property of the Jackson County Post No. 160 of the American Legion, or any patriotic organization or society which may be the successors of same, the said American Legion, or its successors, shall take title to said land and building subject to the same conditions hereinabove set forth as to the Board of Supervisors of Jackson County, Mississippi. For the purposes of having declared any breach of covenant or condition herein contained, the said Jackson County Post No. 160 of the American Legion, or its successors, or either of the grantors herein or any of their heirs at law, may institute a suit or suits in the proper court.

In the event the Old Spanish Fort is completely destroyed by fire, storm, or other act of God, the reversion clause herein shall cease and the Grantee herein, or their successors in office, shall become vested with title to said land free and clear of the conditions or covenants contained herein. Should, however, such destruction be caused by the wilful act or gross negligence of the Grantee herein, their successors in office or their agents or servants, and such fact is established by suit instituted within one year after such destruction in a court of competent jurisdiction, then in such event title to the said land hereinabove set forth lying West of the Cemetery shall thereupon become vested in the reversionary Grantee, or its successors.

Should the title become vested in the reversionary grantee, or its successors, the same shall be subject to all of the conditions set forth hereinabove imposed on the grantees herein and should it, or its successors, fail to comply with the conditions set forth as to maintenance and use of the building, or should the same be destroyed either wilfully or by the gross negligence of the reversionary grantee, its successors or their agents or servants, then in such event or on the happening of any of the, the said building and land lying West of the Cemetery shall revert to the grantors herein or their heirs at law.

It is the intent and desire of the Grantors herein that the Old Spanish Fort shall, as long as it is humanly possible, be preserved for the benefit of the people of Jackson County, Mississippi, and for the advertisement of the said County and the conditions contained in this conveyance are inserted solely to insure its preservation and protection and as long as the Old Fort shall be reasonably preserved and protected, as provided herein, the undersigned, or their heirs at law, shall have no right to possession or other legal interest in the same, and their rights shall only arise on the abandonment or abuse of the said building by the respective grantees herein as hereinabove set forth.

It is expressly understood that the grantors herein do not warrant the title to this land, or that the taxes for the year 1938 have been paid.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF we have hereunto set our hands on this the 21 day of March, A.D., 1939.

Mr. Graham's, November 21, 1814.

Sir,

I beg leave most respectfully to solicit your attention to a part of my report on the land claims in West Florida. The claim to which I particularly refer is that of William F. Kennedy. No. 33, under the following head: "Register of claims to land in the district east of Pearl river, in Louisiana, founded on orders of survey, permission to settle, or other written evidence of claim, derived from either the French, British, or Spanish authorities, which, in the opinion of the commissioner, ought to be confirmed." When this claim was coming on, there was a difficulty in the way of its confirmation

By J.P. [illegible]

Jackson County } To The honorable the Chancery Court of said County Honorable George Wood Chancellor presiding.

The undersigned Commissioners in partition appointed by former decree of this Court (in the Cause herein pending between Isabella Charpiano et als Complainants and Marie Louise Krenicke et als defendants) to make a fair and equitable partition of the lands ~~of~~ in this Cause ordered to be divided among the several Claimants respectfully report That before entering upon their duties or acting your said Commissioners did take and subscribe oath as required by law that they would faithfully and impartially make the partition required of them and in all things perform the trust conferred on them to the best of their skill and ability and they respectfully ~~ask~~ refer to said affidavit taken and certified before and by A.G. [illegible] Esquire Clerk and now on file in this Cause as part of this report.

And they further report that they caused a survey of said lands to be made by James Ballentine in the manner prescribed by law and a map of said land to be made in strict accordance with law and said land to be divided into lots. And did proceed to divide said land so surveyed and mapped into Eight several shares each share being divided into lots said commissioners having in said division due regard for the situation, quantity and quality of and advantages of each said share so that said eight shares are as near as may be equal in value; that said commissioners then rendered said several shares consecutively from ~~the~~ [illegible] to eight and numbered the lots in each share upon said map of said lots and shares aforementioned and the tracts on which they are numbered and laid down and did then and there proceed on the twenty eighth day of February A.D. Eighteen Hundred and Eighty in a public manner in the office of the Chancery Clerk at Scranton in said Jackson County Mississippi to make an allotment by ballot of the several shares of said tracts of land among the said [illegible] persons entitled thereto and did proceed then and there in strict compliance with law to number as many tickets as there were [illegible] numbered on said map to sort eight tickets numbered respectively from one to eight consecutively, and did put the same [illegible] box, a[illegible] place eight other tickets containing the [illegible] of the several eight persons entitled under the former decree to shares, in another box; and did then and there appoint a person to draw out said tickets thus: first a ticket containing a name then from the other box a ticket containing the number of the share at hazard, and said person did so draw alternate a name and then a number until both boxes were exhausted and a share drawn for each claimant. And your commissioners report and certify that in said drawing) share number One was drawn for Isabella Charpiano share number two for E. Alcock Krebs share number three for Allen Krebs share number four for Jerome Krebs share number five for John Krebs share number six for Josephine Walker share number seven for Mrs M. Reinecke and share number eight for Cecile Krebs. And the further report that said share No 1 consisted of lots numbered and described on the annexed map as No's (4, 58, 28, 38, 26, 70, 64, 46, 14, 50,) Four fifty eight, twenty eight, thirty eight twenty six, seventy, sixty four forty six, fourteen and fifty, And there were allotted to said Isabella Charpiano as her share in severalty. The consessions of land on Dauphine Island to Joseph Simon de la Pointe, whose name occurs often in the church registers as the father of Mme. Krebs, was made Nov. 12, 1715, byAntonine de la Motte Cadillac, governon of the province of Louisianna, and Jean Baptiste Ducols, royal conncillor and marine commissary. They certify that are vested by his Majesty the king, their, lord, with the powers to grant lands.It recites LaPointe's application, and was excuted on Dauphine Island, and registered, as ordered, the same day by Raguet ------ The grant was for the purpose of enabling LaPointe to raise cattle ------

It recites the groom's father and mother as Charles Trouillet and Marguerite Rochon, the bride's as Antoine Narbonne and Marie Joseph Krebs.
P. 288-
Settlements of estates was not necessarily any more prompt under Spanish than under the American dispensation. Upon the death os Sieur Claude Dupont, one Augustin Moreau, called Belleisle, resident on Pascagoula River, became administrator. There were several distributees, to wit, Marie Anne Dupont, wife of Mathias LeFlaux; Louison Dupont wife of Joseph Krebs; Jean Baptiste and Catherine Dupont; andMarie Jeanne Guillory, widow of Dupont, but then wife of Moreau. This widow petitioned and obtained from Grimarest an arbittration in 1783, Chastang, Sr., Duret, and Dubroca being selected. In some way they overlooked the debts and Moreau next yeat had the governon set aside their award. The same arbitrators were countinued, however, and, deducting debts, they ascertained the balance to be 2,347 piastres. Of this, half went ti the widow, the rest to the four heirs, all whom in 1786 sign in satification, renouncing all right of appeal. In connection with this settlement we find Favpot's grant of Jean Batiste's request for emancipations, and that Rapheal Krebs be made his guardian, Jean Baptiste being only 23 years old.
P. 306-
There were of course, a number of other streets, all unpaved and narrow, as under the French. Leaving the fort and its esplande behind, as one walked down Royal st, he would notice that the old Barracks Square had become private property in 1796, - that of Mary J. Krebs, the widow of Anthony Narbonne. She sold it that year, from conti to the fort front. for $5000.00
P/ 308-
Hugo Krebs came next notth of Andre' (Andry) on Royal (with the title confirmed in 1842 to his heirs)
P. 326-
James Innerarity in 1809 became the owner of Round Island, once the property of Francis Krebs.
Lanzos could not ceritfy about occupancy of islands at Pascagoula, as he more than once frankly advised Gayoso. But when Ambroise Gains oBtained 500 arpens, this petitioner produced the indorsement of Charles Ellier, Peter and Francis Krebs, James Nadeau, and Francis Colin.
Betsy Wilson, and old inhabitant of Pascagoula, in 1801 obtained twenty by forty arpens frint on both sides of that river, including the first bluff"below the confluence of the rivers Chicasaha and Estopacha"(Pascagoula, --She married Joseph Collins. c.Sidney Simon Cumbest, William Wilson and the wodow Krebs also obtained lands there,

Then the baptism of Francois Rilieu, in 1734 the marriage of Baudrau of Dauphin Island, at the house of LaPointe. Not until 1758 do we hear of Pas. again except for a mention of Rilieu and his wife and child as resident there. This seems to be the last church record of the place.
P 264-
There seem to be no grants or deeds of town lots while Grimarest was in command at Mobile, but several times old inhabitants were thus called on in determining what was royal domain and what nit. In Oct. 1782, Messrs. Lusser Duret, and Dubroca certifiy that the small island known as Chufe and "Camp of the Grand Bay", distant a league from the town, had been owned, and they are granted provisionally to Joseph Colomb. So in Dec. 1783, Chastang senior, Dubroca, and Duret similiary certifiey the Round Island has been possed by no one except Mme. Maurau, who was in possession in 1752 without title. This leads to the absolute grant to Francis Krebs, whose memoril sets up that Bienville had permitted Mme. Maurau, Mother-in-law of Krebs, to occupy the island in 1745, and that Galvez had one stopped there on returning from Mobile and Pensacola and promised Mme. Krebs a grant.

Historical Data

Archie Ogden Cautier Collection

Year of erection: 1721 (?)

Built for (first owner): Sieur Joseph de la Pointe.

Architect or designer: Not ascertained.

Built by: Not ascertained.

Original intended use: Probably a house.

Notable events and occupants: Sieur Joseph de la Pointe was an Admiral in Bienville's fleet maintained on Chatahoula Lake (now called Krebs Lake) to protect Duchess de Chaumont's royal concessions at Pascagoula. In 1721 he was commissioned by French to build a fort. During Spanish domination, the building was used as a fort, home of de Grinarest, Lieutenant Spanish army, who afterward married the granddaughter of de la Pointe. A few years later Baron Hugo Ernestus Krebs arrived from Germany, came into possession of the building and grounds through marriage with de la Pointe's daughter, Marie Jeanne. Krebs is described as having had a splendid plantation, hundreds of slaves, raised rice, cotton, indigo, among other commodities. He is said to have invented his own cotton gin using slave power, antedating Whitney's cotton gin by many years. Until recently the house was occupied by descendants of Baron Krebs.

ROGRESS REPORT
OLD SPANISH FORT

The documentary work on the Old Spanish Fort which is being performed primarily at Tulane, has yielded some pertinant information. Attached are copies of some of the most informative sources located.

We have also collected a great deal of data on construction techniques and practices in the area. French Canadian construction techniques have also been studied as there were some similar techniques brought from Canada to the Bay area.

We have determined at least 5 stages of construction in the building. One interesting technique we have deivsed is to measure to oldest wood work to determine that the carpenters used metric measurements, indicating continental construction rather than Anglo-American. The nineteenth century work was measured in feet and inches. This is a rough dating process at best but one more step towards confirming the age of the building.

One area that has received a lot of attention is the original roofing material. The evidence of the original roofing structure indicates thatching. An analysis of the spacing for purlins and nails in the rafters shows that it is unlikely the structure could have supported any other type of roofing material. This roofing was very common in the area. the techniques having been borrowed from the Indians. We believe the piece of wood wrapping with split river reeds which was found as a chinking patch in 1940 is a piece of surviving thatching. The oldest roof framing appears to date from the 18th Centry but as it is continuous over all three rooms it can not be the original roof. Considerable attention has been given to the 1771 report of the great hurricane which mentions that Mr. Krebs suffered the most damage. As the right hand room ap-pears to be from the last quarter of the 18th Century, we may assume there was considerable rebuilding after that hurricane.

The hardware which survived in the structure is one of our most valuable helps for dating the structure we have discovered some comparable items in New Orleans which are closely dated and a comparison is helping confirm the early date .

We have just located a rare, ealy map which shows fortifications on the Pascagoula and are awaiting a copy which will hopefully locate our building.

The biggest area of investigation continuesto be the exact identity of the building. Due to the inaccuracy of the 1720's map which shows the de la Pointe and Chaumont Concessions it is still debateable whether the Fort is part of the de la Pointe compound or in fact, the house shown as the LaMotte-Denis Habitation.

During our recent visit to Pascagoula we met with the Archeologist to determine the exact scope of his work. The areas within the structure and some exterior areas were decided on. We are awaiting the arrival of aerial infra-red photos which may indicate other features worthy of investigation and more closely pinpoint the sites already selected.

The main thrust of our work was the investigation of structural conditions now that the building is empty. Removal of modern concrete patches in many areas revealed considerable damage to the wooden structural members as well as deteriorated mortar. Damage to the vertical timbers in the walls is now readily visible. More damage was found in the attic framing where apparent insect damage is still on-going.

All evidence of damage, extent and location was carefully recorded and an analysis is now underway so that recommendations can be made for the future stabilization and preservation of the structure. Due to the rarity of the building all efforts are aimed toward retaining every bit of original material possible.

At this point, we recommend that a good exterminator be called in to treat the building and a schedule set up for a yearly inspection to present recurrent insect attack.

All maps in Tulane's collection have been examined. 36 maps are of possible interest. In the 18th century, the most pertinent map is the 1732 map of Sr. D'Anville showing the Chaumont concession and the "Habitation du Sr. Lapointe". 19 other 18th century maps (the earliest is 1705) show a village at Pascagoula and this is often indicated as an Indian village. A 1755 map by Ottens indicates by color key that Pascagoula was a place "occupied by peoples allied to or subjects of England and disputed by France." There is no fort there, as the color key has a separate category for fortified towns. Among the 19th century maps, there are several which bear place names of people involved in this study. Maps of the 1860's and 1870's indicate a town named Krebsville and the U.S. Coast Surveys of the area (1846-1857) show Gravelines Bay and East Gravelines. One undated map (19th century?) shows Krebs Lake and Gravoline (sic) Bay. An 1817 map by F. Lucas of Baltimore labels the area near Pascagoula "plantations". An 1832 map and an 1833 map indicate a place called "Old Fort" between Biloxi Bay and Pascagoula Bay, but this probably refers to the old fort at Biloxi. 2 20th century maps label the highway between Pascagoula and Mobile as Old Spanish Trail.

Another valuable source which has been examined is the Mississippi Provincial Archives. These are transcripts and translations of documents bearing on Mississippi history from the"Archives du Ministere des Colonies, Serie C 13 Correspondance Generale Louisiane" in Paris. The documents were edited, translated and published by Dunbar Rowland and A.G. Sanders of the Mississippi Department of Archives and History in 1927. Vol. I dealing with the Indian Wars (1729-1740) has been read thoroughly because names and places in the text sometimes do not appear in the index. A 1730, January 12 - March 23 journal made by Lusser of his journey in the Choctaw nation mentions the presence of Gravelines, along with two men named La Vallee and Michel, at Father Beaudoin's at the Chickasawhays. Lusser said that Gravelines and the others came "to get some things that they had at the Rev. Father Beaudoin's." The 1729-1733 journal of French officer Regis du Roullet stated that Mr. Diron sent a detachment to Pascagoula "to have an Englishman who had been left at Pascagoula arrested there." There was no mention of a fort at Pascagoula in the September 30, 1734 plans for Indian wars sent by Bienville to Maurepas. Vague references were made in this material to establishments made for the purpose of keeping English away from French lands. The most concrete reference is the following:(1736, February 10 letter from Bienville to Maurepas.)

> Things were in this situation when I learned through some settlers of the river of the Pascagoulas on the coast of Biloxi ten leagues from the bay of Mobile that Mr. Diron had addressed an order to the militia captain of this quarter which was alarming them extremely, by which he warned them that the English after having won over the Choctaws were urging them to take up arms against us, and he consequently ordered them to keep themselves on their guard against this nation. This order caused such great alarm in this quarter that the settlers were preparing to retreat to New Orleans when I forbade them to abandon their homes since they had nothing to fear there."

Other volumes of the Mississippi Provincial Archives remain to be examined. The transcripts themselves are in Jackson.

A copy of the Krebs family genealogy from Tulane's Genealogical Papers Series was examined.

Research has been started in the Index to the Spanish West Florida Archives, transcripts of which exist at Tulane.

The complete run of the Journal of Mississippi History was gone through. The most valuable thing here was Mr. Higginbotham's article on the Chaumont concession which we already have. This work did point out, however, that new works have appeared on the history of this Gulf Coast area and these can be examined when the more basic document research is completed.

April 7, 1979

Marie Louise Dupont based her claim to a piece of land (1 league square on the Pascagoula River) on a Spanish permit dated December 1, 1803. This Spanish grant was issued by Cayetano Perez and the land was not surveyed. Dupont claimed that the land had been cultivated and inhabited from 1774 - 1814. According to the information supplied previously by Building Conservation Technology, Inc., this is the plot on which the "Old Spanish Fort" stands.

The claim of Marie Louise Dupont is cited in the 1816 Register of Claims East of the Pearl River in American State Papers, Public Lands Section, Vol. 3, p. 11.

On June 10, 1815, William Crawford, Land Commissioner, provided "A List of Actual Settlers in the District East of Pearl River, Louisiana, Who Have No Claims Derived from Either the French, British or Spanish Governments." William Kirkwood was listed as having settled on the land originally belonging to Madame Dupont on the Pascagoula River. The date of Kirkwood's settlement there was given as November 1810 and the date of the original settlement was given as "1803 and cont. 2 years". Land Commissioner Crawford stated that few maps accompanied these settlers' claims, so the claims were difficult to particularize. This list also appears in Volume 3 of the American State Papers.

An examination of the inventory of colonial documents in the C 13 A series of the Archives Nationales in Paris yields the following information:

1. In March 1726 Merveilleux submitted a memoire to the French government concerning a fort on the Pascagoula River. (This was mentioned in the last report). New information is that this fort was supposed to be used for trade with the Chactas (Choctaw) Indians.

2. Sieurs De La Pointe and De La Vergne, residents of Pascagoula, had contracts with the Superior Council in 1725 to furnish lumber to Mobile.

Joseph Collins was appointed by Spanish Surveyor General Vicente Pintado to be the special surveyor of the Pascagoula post on April 22, 1806. The enclosed plan and legend is for 684 arpents granted to Collins in 1800. The plan shows a house and a mill. This land is in the vicinity of the Fish River. Perhaps with the use of scientific instruments and the old legend, the location of the house and mill could be more accurately determined. The "perch of the city of Paris" was about 100 English inches, but I have also seen it given as 200 English inches. The plan and legend are from the Pintado Papers at the Tulane University Special Collections Division.

In addition, much peripheral information has been located. This includes some twentieth century photographs of the Krebs house found in books. We also have at Tulane a manuscript Civil War record of a Joseph Krebs of Pascagoula.

Addendum: The Petit Larousse dictionary gives the "perch" measurement as 34.18 square metres.

Antoine de la Motte Cadillac Governor of the Province of Louisiana, and John Baptiste Duclos D. Domontigny, Esqr. King's Counsellor and Commissary of Marine commanding the Province aforesaid.

Whereas by a representation to us made by Joseph Simon de la Pointe an inhabitant residing at Dauphin Island, he prays a grant to a certain tract of land which fronts on the Sea Shore, containing one league in width be it more or less, by one league in depth, running its course due North, bounded on the South by Fish River, on the West by the Sea Shore fronting the Grand Bay, and on the East by its depth, for the purpose of placing a stock of cattle and to establish a plantation thereon.

Now therefore, in virtue of the powers conferred upon us by his Majesty the King, our Lord, we do hereby grant and confirm and by these presents have granted and confirmed with the above named Joseph la Pointe, the tract of land above described and designated, for himself his heirs and assigns, in order that he may enjoy, possess, sell, alienate or dispose of the said tract of land at his will and pleasure, as his lawful property acquired by legal right, on condition, that he will place and put on the said tract of land some cattle, and shall cultivate same two successive years; and he, the said Joseph la Pointe, in failing to comply with the conditions above stipulated, the land so granted shall fall back to the King's Domain, to be disposed of as if such grant was never made; subject however at all times to the payment of Royal dues, should (I enue) any such be hereafter established or reserved in the Province of Louisiana. We moreover reserve for the use of his Majesty our Lord and in his behalf, the power and authority, to take on the said land, all and every kind and description of Timber which may be required for the constructions of Forts, Magazines and other publick works, which his Majesty now has or hereafter may order to execute; also such timber and other conveniences as may be necessary in repairing and careening Ships, as well as such part of the said land as it may become necessary to erect fortifications; on condition, that Cedar Place which is said to be near Fish River, shall not be included in the tract of land above granted, in all or any part thereof. In faith whereof we have signed these presents and ordered to be registered in the office of the Supreme Counsel of the Province aforesaid, within two months from this date. Old Spanish Fort, Built in 1721

This Old Fort, Erected in 1721 by French Troops Under Sieur Joseph de la Pointe, Admiral of Bienville's Fleet, Still Standing on Krebs Lake, This City.

Standing in a romantic spot in the upper part of the city, on the shores of and facing Krebs Lake, is what is known as the "Old Spanish Fort," a building over two hundred years old, but still in a fair state of preservation, and still occupied, as it has been for these two hundred years, as a residence. The name, the "Old Spanish Fort" is a misnomer, as it was built by the French—under Sieur Joseph de la Pointe as a protection against the Indians and Spanish troops.

De la Pointe was an admiral in Bienville's fleet which was maintained on Chatahoula Lake, now Krebs Lake, to protect the royal concessions of the Duchess de Chaumont at Pascagoula. He arrived in the Bay of Biloxi in 1710, and established a naval base on Dauphin Island, where he resided with his wife, Madame la Marquise Marie Louise de Belle Isle. In 1721 de la Pointe was commissioned by the French government to erect the fort as a protection against incursions of the Indians.

In the same year the Duchess de Chaumont, mother of de la Pointe's wife, sent a fleet of five vessels with colonists and slaves for the colonization of the French Province of Louisiana, of which the Gulf Coast section of Mississippi was then a part. During the period of Spanish domination of this section the fort was taken by the Spanish government and was occupied both as a fort and as a chateau by de Henrique Grinarest, a lieutenant-colonel of the royal armies of Spain, and who afterwards married a granddaughter of de la Pointe. It is presumed that here is where the fort received its name of Spanish Fort, although it had been built by the French.

At this time the lake on the shores of which the fort had been erected was called Lake Chatahoula. Upon the arrival from Germany of Baron Hugh von Krebs, who became possessed of the land surrounding the lake, the name of the lake was changed to Krebs Lake and so has been known ever since. The exact date of Hugh Kreb's arrival is not known to this writer. He married Marie Jeanne, a daughter of de la Pointe, and was the progenitor of the long line of Krebs that have lived and reared families in this section for these two hundred years. Many descendents of Baron Von Krebs are still living all over the south.

Old historical narratives relate that Baron Krebs lived in these shores like a feudal lord. He had a splendid plantation, had slaves by the hundreds, raised cotton, rice, indigo and other products for export, and was surrounded by every luxury that a country gentleman could have in that day and time.

It is said that Baron Krebs and his wife moved from Pascagoula to Mobile and erected a dwelling there which is still standing, a quaint old building at the northwest corner of Conti and Hamilton streets. It was in this old colonial home that General Andrew Jackson is said to have been entertained while stationed at Mobile, by Joseph Krebs, a descendent of Baron Krebs.

The Old Spanish Fort is a comfortable, hospitable-looking home. Little changes have been made in its appearance all these years, and it stands as a testimonial of the thoroughness with which houses were erected in those days and as to the durability of the material that went into it. Many houses that were built years after it have rotted and fallen apart, but its old cement walls and hewn timber beams look as though they may be as enduring as the everlasting hills. Many generations of the Krebs family have occupied its walls hallowed by the memory of a romantic past, and even at this writing, it is used as a summer residence by Mr. Jules Johnson of Mobile, one of the many descendents of that hardy pioneer Baron whose name is perpetuated in this city by a Lake and one of our business thoroughfares, Krebs avenue.

Unfulfilled Prophecy

Joseph Jefferson, celebrated actor, believed he would be remembered by posterity as a painter rather than for his stage triumphs. One day, toward the end of his life, he was showing William H. Crane—Mr. Crane relates the incident in "Footprints and Echoes"—a painting he had just finished.

"Do you know, William," he said, "I think that whatever lasting fame will be mine when I am gone, will come through my brush and not through anything I have done on the stage."

"I don't suppose," comments Crane, "anyone looks at Jefferson's paintings today, or even remembers that he was a painter."

THE CONCESSION OF PASCAGOULA

TO

MADAM DUCHESS DE CHAUMONT

More than two hundred years ago, there arrived from France, a fleet sent by the DUCHESS DE CHAUMONT for the colinization of Louisiana, and destined for her concession at Pascageula, Mississippi.

MADAM DUCHESS DE CHAUMONT was lady-in-waiting to Princess Henrietta at the Court of Louis XLV, at Fontainbleu palace. She was the daughter of Comte General Gramont of the French Army, and Lady Elizabeth Hamilton of England, and a renouned beauty at the Court of Charles the Second.

MADAM DE CHAMONT married Le Chevalier de Chaumont, who was Duke de Crequin, Chevalier de St. Louis et de la Legion d'Hermeur of France.

In 1711 the Concession of Pascageula to Madam de Chaumont was made under the Corporation "The Western Company", and was registered by Parliament in Paris on the 7th of September, 1711.

In 1718 Admiral de la Pointe (brother of Madam de la Chaumont) was commissioned by the French Government to build a Fort on Lake Catahoula (now Krebs Lake) to protect the concession of Pascagoula to Madam de Chaumont.

In January 1721, the Frigate "Charles (a war vessel) under commandant Joseph de la Pointe and flying the "Fleur de Lys" dropped anchor in the Bay of Mobile at Fort Louis de la Mobile. Her passengers included Duchess de Chaumont, her daughter, Baroness de la Prade (or Prede), Count Captain Seumiad de Bellille, Sieur Gregriede Guillory and his wife Jeanne de Guillory, and the Dubes, Senac, Petats, and Vivias and others.

In 1721 Admiral de la Pointe returned to France and on account of ill health resigned his commission although he returned to settle in Pascagoula. Admiral Dupcht was appointed to succeed him.

Paſcagoula River.

From the Biloxi to the Paſcagoula river is about [illegible] miles. This river empties itſelf by ſeveral mouths between the eaſtermoſt and weſtermoſt of which, there is a ſpace of between 3 and 4 miles, that is almoſt one continued bed of oyſter ſhells, with very ſhoal water. The only channel is at the weſtermoſt entrance, where there are 4 feet. This large river about 20 miles above its entrance, is divided into two branches, which continue their courſe to the ſea, generally about 5 or 6 miles aſunder. The intermediate ſpace, for ſeveral miles above its mouth, is nothing but marſhes interſected by lagoons. After entering into either of the branches, there is from 3 to 6 fathoms, and the river is ſaid to be navigable for more than 150 miles.

Soil on the River.

The ſoil on this river, like all other rivers on the coaſt of Weſt Florida, grows better the higher you go; but even near the entrance it is far from being bad. There are ſome good plantations on the Eaſt ſide, but here, as well as all the way to the weſtward, the inhabitants are much moleſted by the natives, eſpecially by the Chactaws who kill their cattle, &c.

Paſs au Heron.

From the Paſcagoula river to the Paſs au Heron at the bay of Mobille is 18 miles. This paſs has 4 feet water; and from thence to the point, which is on the Eaſt ſide of the bay of Mobille, in latitude 30 d. 17 m North, is nearly 6 miles.

Before deſcribing this bay, I ſhall take notice of the following iſlands ſituated along the coaſt, between the bay of St. Louis and the point of Mobille.

Cat Iſland, and the adjacent parts.

Cat iſland lies about 8 miles eaſtward of the bay of St. Louis, and 7 miles from the coaſt: it is 6 miles in length, very narrow, and of an irregular ſhape, with a large ſhoal from the Eaſt end of it, extending within two miles of Ship iſland. The ſoil is poor, producing nothing but pine, ſome live oak and graſs,

Old Spanish Fort

Notes from a conversation with J. Higginbothem

In 1726 when the map was drawn there were about 10 people at the compound. These consisted of about five family members and other whites plus about three field slaves and two house slaves.

Boats would be: small dug out canoes for local indians and large canoes with sails for trading missions. De la Pointe made his living primarily as a trader.

The current "Old Spanish Fort" can be taken as a good model of what the other buildings in the compound probably looked like -- same shell plaster walls and such.

It is known that De la Pointe raised cattle.

Early records refer to a number of cedar trees in the area.

Look for buildings in "The Canadian Provincial Style" as models. De la Pointe was from Canada and most of the other buildings along the Mississippi River were in this style.

Look for the following books:

Frenchmen and Frenchmen's Ways by McDermitt
France in the Mississippi Valley by McDermitt
Old Mobile by Higginbothem

An old issue of the Louisana Historical Quarterly (between volumes 10-30) has the results of a 1717 auction on one of the islands (maybe Ship) at which de la Pointe purchased a number of items.

HISTORY OF THE "OLD SPANISH FORT"

One of the men who arrived at Ship Island with d'Iberville in 1699 was Joseph Simon de la Pointe. Apparently he was also among those who explored the Pascagoula River with d'Iberville, or heard the stories of those who did, for in 1715 he applied to the Governor of Louisiana, La Mothe Cadillac, for a concession of land, which was granted:

> ...land which fronts the Sea Shore, containing one league (approximately 3 miles) in width, be it more or less, by one league in depth, running its course due north. Bounded on the south by the Fish River, on the west by the sea Shore fronting the Grand Bay and on the east by its depth, for the purpose of placing a stock of cattle and to establish a plantation thereon.

This description makes more sense if "north" is substituted for "south" in reference to the boundary fromed by the Fish River. Assuming that this is the case, the "Old Spanish Fort" is located within the boundaries of the de la Pointe land grant. A c. 1726 drawing and map made by Francois d'Montigny locates the de la Pointe plantation on the shore of what is now know as Krebs Lake. If the Old Spanish Fort is a surviving building of the plantation, as its location idnicates, it was built between 1715, when de la Pointe was granted the land, and 1726, when de Montigny mapped the plantation.

Around 1730, Hugo Ernestus Krebs, from Germany, bought land near de la Pointe's and married de la Pointe's daughter, Marie. When Joseph Simon de la Pointe died, Krebs inherited his land. From then until about 1920, the land was in the possession of Krebs descendants.

As can be seen from the above, the "Old Spanish Fort" is neither Spanish nor a fort. The name seems to have been attached to the property rather late in its history. It was stormed by local militia in 1810 to recover it from a Spanish Garrison occupying the site.

The following chart illustrates the title succession of the land on which the Old Spanish Fort stands:

In 1772 Bernard Romans visited the Pascagoula area and wrote about it in his book, A Concise Natural History of East and West Florida, published in 1775. The Krebs plantation is mentioned as the site of an early cotton gin.

> The French in Florida have much improved on this machine by a large wheel which turns two of these mills at once....One of these machines I saw at Mr. Krebs' (either Hugo E. or Joseph Krebs ran the plantation at this time) at Pasca Oocooloo, but as it was partly taken down, he claiming the invention was very cautious in answering my questions, and I cannot pretend to describe it accurately....

Romans also wrote about the hurricane which devastated the Krebs plantation between August 30 and September 3, 1772.

> The greatest fury of it was spent on the neighborhood of the Pasca Oocoolo River, the plantation of Mr. Krebs there was almost totally destroyed, of a fine crop of rice and a large one of corn were scarcely left any remains. The houses were left uncovered, his smiths shop was almost all washed away, all his works and outhouses blown down..."

This account brings up an important point in the authentication of the Old Spanish Fort. Even if it is a surviving building of the de la Pointe plantation, it is likely that not much of the building as it stands today is the original 1720's material. Any of the buildings located that close to the water must have been seriously damaged in the 1772 hurricane and the half-dozen other hurricanes that swept over the area between 1740 and 1856.

Detail of above drawing. The Old Spanish Fort is assumed to incorporate the remains of one of the two carpenter shops labeled "L".

The re-enactment of the marriage of Krebs and La Pointe would be historically accurately and would be presented as a method of educating the people of Jackson County and the descendants of the Krebs family as to the genre of the people and customs of that day.

9. Project Summary (brief):

Portrayals of the couple and those people present who would have been at the actual ceremony, will be based on careful research from Colonial records and the customs and attire used in that period including the reception honoring the married couple.

10. Project objectives:

To educate and celebrate in the ways of the Colonial period with the purpose of honoring the Krebs family and their part in the Colonial history of Jackson County.

11. Narrative description of project:

The actors portraying Krebs and wife shall be dressed in period costume chosen from books at the New Orleans Mint Library. Sketches will have to be made as copies are not allowed. The actors should be descendants of the Krebses. Those witnessing the ceremony will be identified and actors chosen. A practicing Catholic Priest shall conduct the ceremony as near historically accurately as possible. The usual reception with food and drink will be based on historical research for the day. Visitors and descendants will be encouraged to attend.

12. Estimated Cost: For costumes settings and food - cost to be determined.

13. Revenue sources: Grants, Legislative tricentennial appropriations.

14. Project expenditures:

    For costume designing & materials, settings and food.

The Commandant Perez to the Widow of Joseph Krebs.

To his Honor the Commandant and sub-delegate of the Royal Treasury:

The Widow of Joseph Krebs with the most profound respect, presents herself before your Honor, and says; that she has a considerable stock of cattle, and that she wishes to establish them on a tract of land suitable for raising cattle and for coupers (vaquería) and that there is a tract of vacant land containing eight hundred superficial arpens, situated on the East side of the Pascagoula river, about one half league from the mouth of the said river and including in said tract of land the first Bluff on the said river. Your Petitioner therefore humbly prays that your Honor may be pleased to grant her a title to the said tract of land, for the uses and purposes above written. This favor she humbly hopes to receive from the great goodness of your Honor. (Dated) Mobile the first day of December in the year of our Lord. one thousand eight hundred and three

(Subscribed) The Widow of Jos^h Krebs

Mobile the same date as above written.

In consequence of the death of his Excellency the assessor of this Intendancy, the office of his Excellency the Intendant General has been and remains closed as regards all matters relative to the granting or disposing of lands. Wherefore I, by these presents do grant to the petition this my permission, by which she is authorised to take possession of the tract of land for which she solicits a grant, for the uses and purposes set forth in her petition and memorial above written. Provided always that the said land is vacant and that no one shall thereby be injured. And provided further that so soon as an assessor may have been appointed she she shall present her petition in the form and manner required by the regulations on this subject, in order that she may be furnished with perfect titles to the said tract of land

(Signed) Cayetano Perez

Mr Joseph Collins the Surveyor of this district will lay off and survey for the petitioner the land mentioned in this permission, at the place designated in the above petition and memorial. She, the Petitioner being responsible, that the said tract of land is vacant. Given at Mobile the second day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and three.

Know all men by these presents that we Florida Krebs and heirs at law of Joseph Krebs deceased, for and in consideration of one dollars and the promises hereinafter set fourth do release and by these presents forever quit claim to the heirs of Sedonie Krebs dec'd and to their several vendees and assigns of the lands hereinafter described, that certain tract of land situated in the county of Jackson and State of Mississippi in Sections 1 and 2 Township 8 S. of Range 6 West more particularly designated as that portion of the Mary L. Dupont claim which has been surveyed and subdivided into lots as shown by a plan of survey made for partition among the heirs of said sedonie Krebs dec'd and recorded in Book 4 page 5 32½ in the record of deeds in the chancery clerks office of said Jackson county, so far as it may appear that we have any interest, right or title therein. This quit claim is executed for the purpose, as a further consideration, of supplying as far as may be possible the missing links in the chain of title to said land which have been lost or destroyed by fire which links consisted of the following conveyances and transfers to wit: The said land originally belonged to our paternal grandmother Mary L. Dupont Krebs whose maiden name was Mary L. Dupont. After said death the said land was sold by the administrator by order of court according to law for partition among her heirs to her son, our farther Joseph Krebs, which sale was legal and regular so far as we know or ever had reason to believe That our said father Joseph Krebs had possession under said title for about 20 years from about the year 1834 to the year 1853 when he sold the same to one Abram Gindrat. The said Abram Gindrat held possession for about one years when being unable to pay the purchase price remaining unpaid, he reconveyed the same to our said father Joseph Krebs in satisfaction of the debt. A short time thereafter our said father Joseph Krebs conveyed an undivided half interest therein to his son-in-law W. S. Humphries about the year 1854 and about the year 1854 our said father Joseph Krebs died leaving a will by which he devised and bequeathed to his children share and share alike the said land to the extent of his interest therein In the administration of said estate however to the said executor said W. S. Humphries by regular said legal judicial by so far as we know or have reason to believe sold the said undivided half interest of said Joseph Krebs at public outcry and the same was bought by and conveyed to L. D. Krebs, one of the children of said deceased. Sedonie Krebs, another of said children, having purchased of the said L. D. Krebs and W. G Humphries their several interests in said lands, the said Humphries and wife our sister conveyed the half interest of the said Humphries therein to L. D. Krebs on condition that he shold convey the entirely of the title so vested in him to the widow and heirs of the said Sedonie Krebs which he did. These last transfers were made about the year 1877 and the said Sedonie Krebs and his said heirs and those claiming and holding under them as purchasers have held actual adverse possession continuously and uninterruptedly so far as we know for the space of 30 years under claim of title as above stated and we know of no one who ever had any claim on said land who by reason of infancy or unsoundness of mind have escaped the bar of the Statute of Limitation of 10 years of any action that they may have had against the said heirs of the said Sedonie Krebs, their said possession having been open and notorious and well known to all who ever had any connection with the title thereto to the best of our knowledge and belief In testimony of which we have hereunto set our hand this the 16th day of September 91.

FOR AND IN CONSIDERATION of the sum of One Thousand and Fifty Dollars ($1,050.00) cash in hand paid, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, We, the undersigned, E. C. FORD and C. I. FORD, do hereby sell transfer and convey unto the BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF JACKSON COUNTY, MISSISSIPPI, AND their Successors in office, for the use and benefit of Jackson County, Mississippi,

All right, title and interest in and to the lands hereinafter described, which was vested in the undersigned by virtue of a certain deed of conveyance executed by Fred Taylor, Commissioner of the Chancery Court of Jackson County, Mississippi, dated the day of March, 1939, to-wit:

The following described Real Estate in the City of Pascagoula, Jackson County, Mississippi, and in the private Claim of Mary L. Dupont, Claim Section 1, Township 8 South, Range 6 West, to-wit:

Lot 1 of the Cecil Johnson Subdivision of Lot No. 3 of the Sidonia Krebs Tract, as per map of said Subdivision made a part of a deed executed by Cecile A. Johnson et. al. recorded in Deed Book 40, pages 128-129 of the record of deeds of Jackson County, Mississippi, together with the improvements thereon situated, the same being a tract of land approximately 505 feet East and West by approximately 585 feet North and South, there is specifically excepted from this conveyance, however, a tract of land approximately 250 feet North and South and 200 feet East and West in Northeast corner of the above land, the said excepted portion being bounded by aline running as follows:

Commencing at the present northeast corner of the Krebs Cemetery as now established by the fence lines and which point is on the West margin of Pine Street approximately 50 feet South of the shore of Krebs Lake, thence running South along the West margin of Pine Street 200 feet, thence West 200 feet, thence North 200 feet more or less to the shore of Krebs Lake, thence folbwing the meanderings of the Lake shore to the west margin of Pine Street, thence South 50 feet more or less along said Street to the point of beginning. There is also granted to Grantee herein the right and privilege of utilizing for road and street purposes only the land lying North of the present Cemetery fence and along the North 50 feet of the lands reserved herein.

It is expressly understood that this conveyance is made subject to the following covenants and conditions, viz: The building situated on the property hereinabove described and known as the Old Spanish Fort is to be preserved by the Grantee herein and their successors in office, in a habitable condition as long as it is reasonably possible; any repairs made to the said building shall be performed in a manner that will not impair or destroy its appearance of antiquity or historical value; no additions or laternations shall be made to the said building which will result in the impairment or destruction of the historical appearance of the building; as long as the said building remains standing the public shall have the right of view and inspect the same, under such reasonable regulations as may be established by the Board of Supervisors of Jackson County, Mississippi, or any agents or custodians designated by the; the said building is not and shall not be permitted to be used for private commercial purposes.

In the event the Grantees herein, or their successors in office, shall fail to comply with any of the conditions hereinabove specified, then thereupon the the said building, together with all of the land herein conveyed lying West of the Graveyard or Krebs Cemetery, now situated on the said land, shall be and become the property of the Jackson County Post No. 160 of the American Legion, or any patriotic organization or society which may be the successors of same, the said American Legion, or its successors, shall take title to said land and building subject to the same conditions hereinabove set forth as to the Board of Supervisors of Jackson County, Mississippi. For the purposes of having declared any breach of covenant or condition herein contained, the said Jackson County Post No. 160 of the American Legion, or its successors, or either of the grantors herein or any of their heirs at law, may institute a suit or suits in the proper court.

In the event the Old Spanish Fort is completely destroyed by fire, storm, or other act of God, the reversion clause herein shall cease and the Grantee herein, or their successors in office, shall become vested with title to said land free and clear of the conditions or covenants contained herein. Should, however, such destruction be caused by the wilful act or gross negligence of the Grantee herein, their successors in office or their agents or servants, and such fact is established by suit instituted within one year after such destruction in a court of competent jurisdiction, then in such event title to the said land hereinabove set forth lying West of the Cemetery shall thereupon become vested in the reversionary Grantee, or its successors.

Should the title become vested in the reversionary grantee, or its successors, the same shall be subject to all of the conditions set forth hereinabove imposed on the grantees herein and should it, or its successors, fail to comply with the conditions set forth as to maintenance and use of the building, or should the same be destroyed either wilfully or by the gross negligence of the reversionary grantee, its successors or their agents or servants, then in such event or on the happening of any of the, the said building and land lying West of the Cemetery shall revert to the grantors herein or their heirs at law.

It is the intent and desire of the Grantors herein that the Old Spanish Fort shall, as long as it is humanly possible, be preserved for the benefit of the people of Jackson County, Mississippi, and for the advertisement of the said County and the conditions contained in this conveyance are inserted solely to insure its preservation and protection and as long as the Old Fort shall be reasonably preserved and protected, as provided herein, the undersigned, or their heirs at law, shall have no right to possession or other legal interest in the same, and their rights shall only arise on the abandonment or abuse of the said building by the respective grantees herein as hereinabove set forth.

It is expressly understood that the Grantors herein do not warrant the title to this land, or that the taxes for the year 1938 have been paid.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF we have hereunto set our hands on this the 21 day of March, A.D., 1939.

LEASE.

This lease agreement made this the 8th day of October, A. D. 1947, by and between the Board of Supervisors of Jackson County, Mississippi, and JACKSON COUNTY POST NO. 160, of the AMERICAN LEGION, INC., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as the American Legion, and YOUTH , INC., a non-profit corporation, witnesseth that:

1. The Board of Supervisors hereby leases and lets to the American Legion and Youth,Inc., for the term of twenty-five years the following described real estate in the City of Pascagoula, Jackson County, Mississippi, and in the private claim of Mary L. Dupont, Claim Section 1, Township 8 South, Range 6 West, to-wit:

Lot 1 of the Cecil Johnson Sub-division of Lot No. 3 of the Sidoine Krebs Tract, as per map of said Sub-division made a part of a deed executed by Cecile A. Johnson, et al., recorded in Deed Book 40, pages 128-129 of the Record of Deeds of Jackson County, Mississippi, together with the improvements thereon situated, the same being a tract of land approximately 505 feet East and West by approximately 565 feet North and South, there is specifically excepted from this conveyance, however, a tract of land approximately 250 feet North and South and 200 feet East and West in NE Corner of the above land, the said excepted portion being bounded by a line running as follows:

Commencing at the present NE corner of the Krebs Cemetary as now established by the advance lines and which point is on the West margin of Pine Street approximately 50 feet South of the shore of Krebs Lake, thence running south along the West margin of Pine Street 200 feet, thence West 200 feet, thence North 200 feet more or less to the shore of Krebs Lake, thence following the meanderings of the Lake Shore to the west margin of Pine Street, thence South 50 feet more or less along said Street to the point of beginning.

2. The consideration for this lease is the agreement of the AMERICAN LEGION and YOUTH INC., to pay an annual rental of $10.00 per year, the first payment to be made in advance on the execution of this lease and a like sum falling due annually on each anniversary date of said lease hereafter, and in further consideration of the agreement of the American Legion, to preserve the building on said property, known as the Old Spanish Fort, in a habitable condition as long as is reasonably possible, and to carry out the terms of the conveyance from J. I. FORD and E. J. FORD, to the BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF JACKSON COUNTY, MISSISSIPPI, dated March 21, 1939, with respect to preserving the historical appearance of said building, and in further consideration of the agreement of YOUTH, INC., to provide facilities and buildings for the establishment of a Youth Camp, or other Youth activities on said premises, and other considerations embodied herein.

3. It is agreed by and between the BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF JACKSON COUNTY, MISSISSIPPI, the AMERICAN LEGION, and YOUTH, INC., that the American Legion shall act as agent for the Board of Supervisors of Jackson County, Mississippi, and as custodian of the building known as the Old Spanish Fort, that the American Legion will preserve said building in a habitable condition as long as it is reasonably possible, and that the repairs made to said building shall be performed in a manner that will not impair or destroy its appearance of antiquity or historical value; no alternations or additions shall be made to said building which will result in the impairment or destruction of the historical appearance of the building; and that as long as said building remains standing the public shall have the right to view and inspect the same under such reasonably regulations as may be established by the American Legion. The American Legion solemnly covenants that said building shall not be permitted to be used for any private commercial purposes, nor will any activities be conducted therein that will be contrary to the law and the public policy of the State of Mississippi.

4. It is agreed by and between the parties hereto that, with the exception of the Old Spanich Fort building, which shall remain under the jurisdiction of the Jackson County Post No. 160 of the American Legion, that the remaining grounds and improvements thereon, shall be under the jurisdiction and control of YOUTH, INC., for the purpose of using said grounds and facilities thereon for Youth purposes. YOUTH, INC., is authorized to enter into agreements with any non-profit corporation, association, organization or individual who is willing to erect or to construct buildings or other facilities on said premises that will be used for youth purposes on a non-profit basis. Such agreement shall be made with the understanding that at the expiration date of this lease, all of said facilities shall revert to the Board of Supervisors of Jackson County, Mississippi to be used by Jackson County, Mississippi for Youth purposes.

5. This lease may be cancelled by the Board of Supervisors upon 90 days notice to the American Legion or to Youth, Inc., in the event the American Legion shall abandon its duties herein set forth with respect to the Old Spanish Fort building, or if Youth, Inc., shall abandon its program of establishing, maintaining and continuing youth programs on the premises. This agreement may be cancelled as to one of said corporations without effecting the rights of the other corporation as herein set out, and shall not be cancelled without affording each of said corporations an opportunity to be heard before the Board of Supervisors on whether they have in fact abandoned the premises, and they shall be entitled at such hearing to all remedies that may be provided by law.

6. It is distinctly understood and agreed that on the termination date of this lease, or in the event of the abandonment of said premises by both of the corporations herein named, that all buildings, structures or facilities placed upon said premises, whether by the American Legion or Youth,Inc., or any other Association, Corporation, Organization, or Individual pursuant to any agreement entered into with Youth, Inc., shall revert to and become the property of the Jackson County Board of Supervisors, to be used by it for youth purposes.

7. It is agreed by Youth, Inc., that the facilities to be erected by it, or organizations, Corporations, Associations, or Individuals by agreement with said Youth, Inc., will be made available to all the youth of Jackson County, and that the youth facilities maintained by it will be operated on a County wide basis.

8. It is agreed by both the American Legion and Youth, Inc., that every precaution will be taken to eliminate fire hazards to the Old Spanish Fort building, and Youth, Inc. agrees that any construction for camp purposes will be made of fire resistant material and will not be located in such close proximity to the Old Spanish Fort as to constitute a fire hazard.

9. This lease shall not be assigned by the American Legion or Youth, Inc., without written consent from the Board of Supervisors of Jackson County, Mississippi. This clause shall not be construed to prohibit Youth,Inc., from entering into agreements with organizations, corporations, associations, or individuals for the building or constructing youth facilities on said premises, but the conditions established in paragraph 6 as to the ownership of said property on the termination of this agreement shall be made a part of each agreement. This agreement supersedes and cancels any prior agreement between the Board of Supervisors of Jackson County, Mississippi, and the Jackson County Post No. 160 of the American Legion,Inc. or its Trustees.

"OLD FRENCH FORT"

(de la Pointe-Krebs House, also called "Old Spanish Fort")

Pascagoula, Jackson County, Mississippi.

Physical Data

Present owner: Jackson County Board of Trustees.

Present occupant and use: Clubhouse for local American Legion Post.

Description (present condition)

Wall construction: 1. Oldest part; cypress and cedar frame filled in with oyster shell concrete; 2. West room; wood frame filled in with clay and moss (bousillage).

Size and form: Rectangular, 37'-5" x 62'-3".

Number stories: One and attic.

Porches: One story porch on three sides - north, south and west.

Exterior openings, windows: Modern, double-hung windows first floor, shutter pintle marks, no remaining shutters.

Exterior openings, doors: Old wood batten door west wall, all others recent.

Cornice: Exposed rafters projecting about 2'-0" beyond porch plate.

Chimneys: 2, brick, stuccoed above roof.

Floors: First floor, wood floor about 18" above original oyster shell concrete floor; attic, random width wood floor T&G, flush joints.

Historical Data

Year of erection: 1721 (?)

Built for (first owner): Sieur Joseph de la Pointe.

Architect or designer: Not ascertained.

Built by: Not ascertained.

Original intended use: Probably a house.

Notable events and occupants: Sieur Joseph de la Pointe was an Admiral in Bienville's fleet maintained on Chatahoula Lake (now called Krebs Lake) to protect Duchess de Chaumont's royal concessions at Pascagoula. In 1721 he was commissioned by French to build a fort. During Spanish domination, the building was used as a fort, home of de Grinarest, Lieutenant Spanish army, who afterward married the granddaughter of de la Pointe. A few years later Baron Hugo Ernestus Krebs arrived from Germany, came into possession of the building and grounds through marriage with de la Pointe's daughter, Marie Jeanne. Krebs is described as having had a splendid plantation, hundreds of slaves, raised rice, cotton, indigo, among other commodities. He is said to have invented his own cotton gin using slave power, antedating Whitney's cotton gin by many years. Until recently the house was occupied by descendants of Baron Krebs.

Canty, Mrs. Oliver Krebs, Harold Grant, Miss Estelle Grant, Julius Grant, E. F. Grant, William Grant, and another son, Milton Grant, who married Estelle Krebs, and who died intestate leaving his heirs, his widow, Mrs. Estelle Grant, and minor children, Kate, Richard and Doma Grant, residents of Jackson County, Mississippi.

Complainant here mades defendants to this his bill of complaint, all of the foregoing named defendants and heirs of Helaire Krebs, Sr., whose names, places of residence and Post-office addresses, including street addresses , he has been able to discover after diligent search and inquiry, and also makes defendants hereto the unknown heirs, assigns, devisees and personal representatives of Helaire Krebs, Sr. Irene Krebs, Helaire Krebs, Jr., Mathilde Krebs, Aristide Krebs, Arthur R. Krebs, Mrs. Josephone Gebo, Hubert F. Krebs, A.D.Krebs, William A. Krebs, Evelina Krebs Hawkins, Thomas Hawkins, Evelina Patterson, Mrs. Hawkins Montgomery, Dave Hawkins, Mrs. Felicity Simon, Elphage Hawkins, Mrs. L. J. Frederic, Eran Frederic Livaudais, L. Jeff Frederic, Mrs. Marie Mitchell, Emile Frederic, Irene Ryder, Richard Ryder, Emanuel Deas, Harry C. Deas, Mary Krebs Grant, John Grant, Elizabeth Grant Davis, Richard Grant, Mrs. Elvin(Zoe) Maxwell, Delphine Grant Greiner, ~~Maxwell (Zoe) Maxwell~~, Delphine Krebs Grant, Isabelle Maxwell Haisten, Zoe Krebs Deas, Feronie Krebs Ryder, whose names, places of residence, Post-office address and street addresses complainant is unable to discover after diligent search and inquiry.

The fifth son of Augustine Krebs, Paul Krebs married and had one child. Said Paul Krebs, his widow and this child named Augustine Krebs, all died intestate, so complainant is informed and bblieves the truth to be, but should he be mistaken in this, he names defendants to this, his bill of complaint, the unknown heirs-at-law, assigns , devisees and personal representatives of Paul Krebs, Mrs. Paul Krebs and Augustine Krebs.

The sixth son of Augustine Krebs, William Krebs, as your complainant is informed and believes, to be true, left this country when a young man and has never been seen nor heard of by any of his relatives now living. And your complainant has been unable to discover after diligent search and inquiry any heirs of the said William Krebs, hence he makes defendants to this, his bill of complaint, all unknown heirs, assigns, devisees and personal representatives of the said William Krebs, deceased.

The seventh child of Augustine Krebs, Hippolite Krebs, as your complainant is informed and believes to be true, married one Richard Fitzgerald, and with her said husband left these parts, both of whom the said Hippolite Fitzgerald and her said husband have long since died, according to the laws of nature, and your complainant, after diligent search and inquiry has been unable to discover the names, places of residence, Post-office addresses and street addresses of their said heirs, and he makes as defendants to this his bill of complaint, all the unknown heirs, assigns, devisees and personal representatives of Hippolite Krebs Fitzgerald and Richard Fitzgerald.

Complainant would further show that Stephen Routh died intestate about the year 1876, and that your complainant has made diligent search and inquiry to ascertain the names, places of residence, Post-office addresses and street addresses of his heirs-at-law, and after such diligent search and inquiry, complainant has been informed and believes them to be as follows:

H. S. Routh, Alice Routh, Ernest S. Routh, Stephen M. Routh and Charles S. Routh, whose places of residence, Post-office addresses and street addresses are unknown after diligent search and inquiry.

but your complainant has been unable to learn whether the said parties are living or dead, and if living, their places of residence, Post-office address and street addresses. and if dead, the names, places of residence, Post-office addresses and street addresses of their heirs, and complainant makes as defendants to this, his bill of complaint, the unknown heirs, assigns, devisees, assigns , devisees and personal representatives of Stephen Routh, deceased, and H. S. Routh, Alice Routh, Ernest S.Routh, Stephen M. Routh, and Charles S.Routh, if living, and if dead their unknown heirs, assigns, devisees and personal representatives.

Her husband, Chas. S. Ladnier, a resident citizen of Harrison County, Mississippi, and the following children:

Lawrence Ladnier, whose place of residence and post-office address is Mobile, Alabama, street address unknown.

Mrs. Ida Benson, Gus Ladnier and Mrs. Joe Able, resident citizens of Harrison County, Mississippi.

Eddie Ladnier, who died several years ago, leaving the following heirs ;

His widow, Mrs. Kate Ladnier, a resident citizen of Jackson County, Mississippi, and the following children:

Lonnie Ladnier, whose place of residence and Post-[illegible] address is Aransas, Texas, no street address; Eddie Ladnier, whose place of residence and Post-office address is Mobile, Ala., c/o U.S.Dredge [illegible], and Eugene Ladnier, Ida May, Anna Ladnier, Celestine Ladnier, Henry Ladnier, Hildred Ladnier, her minors ~~children~~, who live with their mother Mrs. Kate Ladnier.

Complainant makes defendants to this, his bill of complaint the unknown heirs, assigns, devisees and personal representatives of Celestine Ladnier and Eddie Ladnier, deceased, as well as all of the above named parties.

That L. D. Herrick died intestate several years ago leaving as his sole and only heir-atOlaw, his widow, Mrs. Caroline Herrick, a resident citizen of Jackson County, Mississippi, and complainant makes as defendants to this, his bill of complainant, the said Mrs. Caroline Herrick.

That complainant has made diligent search and inquiry to ascertain the names, places of residence, Post-office addresses and street addresses of any and all other persons who have or might claim any interest in or to the lands hereinabove described, but that after such diligent search and inquiry he has been unable to find any other persons, save those made defendants to this bill of complaint. and complainant prays that publication may be made for all the above named defendants and any and all other persons having or claining any right, title or interest in and to the lands described in this bill of complaint.

That on account of the breaks in the chain of title to this land, as shown in the deraignment of title, and on account of the errors in the deeds of conveyance as hereinabove set out, some doubt is raised as to the validity of your complainant's title to said property, and your complainant is therefore hindered to some extent in being able to dispose of said property to the best advantage, and though your complainant is advised that by adverse possession he has acquired a valid title to said land, yet he is anxious to have the record thereof cleared and all clouds, doubt or suspicion removed therefrom, and to have this Court declare him to be the legal and equitable owner thereof, and to have his title quieted and confirmed against all parties named as defendants to this, his bill of complaint, as well as any other persons who have or claim any interest therein. And complainant is without remedy save in this Honorable Court.

The premises considered, complainant prays that this, his bill of complaint may be received and filed; that all resident defendants be summoned personally to appear herein, and that process by publication be made in the manner required by law for all non-resident and unknown defendants, as well as for any other person having or claiming any right, title or interest in or to the above described land. That all said defendants be summoned to be and appear before this Honorable Court at the December Term 1926 thereof, and then and there be required to answer, plead or demur to the allegations of this bill of complaint, answer under oath being expressly waived. And complainant prays that on the final hearing hereof, that the deeds hereinabove referred to may be reformed and corrected and the title to said land be quieted and confirmed against all said defendants. And complainant prays for such other relief as in equity he may be entitled to receive.

FLORIDA. KREBS.
To HEIRS OF SIDOINE KREBS. Dec'd.

Jackson County

Know all men by these presents that we Florida Krebs and heirs at law of Joseph Krebs deceased, for and in consideration of one dollars and the promises hereinafter set fourth do release and by these presents forever quit claim to the heirs of Sedoine Krebs dec'd and to their several vendees and assigns of the lands hereinafter described, to-wit certain tract of land situated in the county of Jackson and State of Mississippi in Sections 1 and 2 Township 8 S. of Range 6 West more particularly designated as that portion of the Mary L. Dupont claim which has been surveyed and subdivided into lots as shown by a plan of survey made for partition among the heirs of said sedoine Krebs dec'd and recorded in Book 4 page 532½ in the record of deeds in the chancery clerks office of said Jackson county, so far as it may appear that we have any interest, right or title therein. This quit claim is executed for the purpose, as a further consideration, of supplying as far as may be possible the missing links in the chain of title to said land which have been lost or destroyed by fire which links consisted of the following conveyances and transfers to wit: The said land originally belonged to our paternal grandmother Mary A. Dupont Krebs whose maiden name was Mary L. Dupont. After ~~said~~ death the said land was sold by the administrator by order of court accoading to law for partition among her heirs to her son, our farther Joseph Krebs, which sale was legal and regular so far as we know or ever had reseaon to believe That our said father Joseph Krebs had possession under said title for about 20 years from about the year 1834 to the year 1853 when he sold the same to one Abram Gindrat. The said Abram Gindrat held possession for about one years when being unable to ~~pay the purchase~~ pay the purchase price remaining unpaid, he reconveyed the same to our said father Joseph Krebs in satisfaction of the debt. A short time thereafter our said father Joseph Krebs conveyed an undivided half interest therein to his son-in-law W. G. Humphries about the year 1853 and about the year 1854 our said father Joseph Krebs died leaving a will by which he devised and bequeathed to his children share and share alike the said land to the extent of his interest therein. In the administration ~~thereof~~ of said estate however to the said executor said W. G. Humphries by regular said legal judicial by so far as we know or have reason to believe, sold the said undivided half interest of said Joseph Krebs at public outcry and the same was bought by and conveyed to L. D. Krebs, one of the children of said deceased. Sedonie Krebs, another of said children, having purchased of the said L. D. Krebs and W. G. Humphries their several interests in said lands, the said Humphries and wife our sister conveyed the half interest of the said Humphries therein to L. D. Krebs on condition that he shold convey the entirely of the title so vested in him to the widow and heirs of the said Sedonie Krebs which he did. These last transfers were made about the year 1877 and the said Sedonie Krebs and his said heirs and those claiming and holding under them as purchasers have held actual adverse possession continuously and uninterruptedly so far as we know for the space of 30 years under claim of title as above stated and we know of no one who ever had any claim on said land who by reason of infancy or unsoundness of mind have escaped the bar of the Statute of Limitation of 10 years of any action that they may have had against the said heirs of the said Sedonie Krebs, their said possession having been open and notorious and well known to all who ever had any connection with the title thereto to the best of our knowledge and belief In testimony of which we have hereunto set our hands this the 16th day of September 91.

Regarding Family Investigation, Kriebs, Krebs - Neumagen.

The City Officials of Trier sent your writing of Oct. 16, 1967 to us for futher Investigation. We found out the following: The parents of your Ancestors Johann Krieb and Anna Charitas Fritsch were married on Feb. 14, 1702 in Neumagen. Sorry, the marria License is intered without . The baptism of Johann Kriebs therefore can not testified, because the earliest Church books of Neumagen began in 1688. Anna Charitas Fritsch, daughter of Reiner Fritsch and Catharina ---------- is born on March 24, 168 in Trittenheim/ Mosel. From the Marriage union of Johann Kriebs and Anna Charitas Frit were Born the following children:

Jan. 22, 1703 Susanna
Mar. 18, 1705 Gertrud
May 1, 1706 Johann Reinard
May 15, 1708 Johann Gerlach
Oct. 18, 1709 Catharina
Mar. 15, 1712 Anna Maria Catharina
May 15, 1714 Hugo Ernst
Aug. 27, 1716 Maria Anna
Feb. 28, 1721 Johann Peter

The father of Johann Kriebs died Oct. 12, 1751 (without his age given). His mother died Mar. 4, 1773.

About the Education, studies, and time he served in Military Service of Hugo Ernst and Vocation of his father is --------- list of University of Trier, nor the Church books of Neumagen given. May be we can apprehend, that the Godfather of Hugo Ernst, the Cananicus of Stift St. Paulin in Trier, Hugo Ernst Braun, was responsible for the education and higher studies for his Godchild.

Hearty Greetings

To the Commissioners of land claims East of Pearl River — Sir —

Be pleas'd to take notice that I claim for myself and children whose names are Marie — Josef — Etienne — Genevieve — Placide Krebbs, two lots, and their appurtenances, situated in Royal Street, Town of Mobile — the one containing ten toises (60 feet) front by twenty six toises (156 feet) deep, — the other having ten toises (60 feet) front extending to the River, by virtue of two concessions made by the Spanish Government — the one to Pedro Vivares, who sold it to John Joice, by Deed of Sale bearing date the 15th of April 1788 who transferd his right and title to said first mentiond lot, to my late husband Hugo Krebbs, by an instrument of writing, dated

30th of December 1793. —— the other concession above mentioned was made to William J. Francy Bucsson, who authorised Nicholas Mongulet to sell it, from whom my aforesaid late husband purchased it by Deed of Sale dated the 9th of August 1792. ——

I also claim another lot on Royal Street by virtue of a concession granted by the Spanish government to James Campbell who sold it to Mr Dubuisson, by Deed of Sale dated the 6th March, 1784. from whom my said late husband purchased it by an instrument of writing dated the 14 Septem 1784. ——

The above mentioned concessions are lost by time and accidents. ——

study of the land grants made by the King in Council [illegible] appear in the records of the province for the first five years.

The outlines of the coast and rivers are taken from Bernard Romans' Map of Florida, New York, 1774. The approximate locations of the grants as they are given in the records are indicated on the map. Many of the grants, however, were identified in their metes and bounds by landmarks which it would be impossible to find today; others were unspecified in their location.

The map is useful in revealing the centers of settlement during the first five years. The Natchez settlement is not shown because, although it began to spring into prominence about 1767, its real importance is in the 'seventies, and a consideration of it requires a separate study of the development of the western lands of the province.

My Dear Mrs. Gautier,

How sweet of you to send Regina's article and pamphlet about The Old Fort to me.

I read every word of it and found it most interesting. It also brought back so many pleasant memories of the times we went to go swimming in Krebs Lake.

I was so delighted when I heard that it was to be a museum. Did I tell you about the fig tree? I told some one, I think, but you were here such a short time and I talked to all of you that I just don't remember. Well here it is again: Cousin Florida Krebs asked me if I ever noticed if there was a fig tree about thirty feet back and to the left of the house. I had, so she said that one of her ancestors had sent to Italy for a box of dried figs and they were so delicious that he planted one; it grew and produced delicious Smysna figs and when the parent tree would die one of the suckers would take root and bear fruit. She said she had eaten many a fig from it.

Thank you again and we are looking forward to the promised visit from you. Regards to the others who came with you.

Sincerely,

Regina Marston

Ici repose Edmond Krebs fils de Rene Krebs et de son spouse Marie, nee Dupont, decede le 29 novembre 1849 a l'age de 34 ans.
Il est vivement regrete de sa mere qui fut sa seule consolation dans ses moments d'adversite, et laisse une orpheline pour cherir sa memoire.

Here rests Edmond Krebs son of Rene Krebs and of his wife Marie, born Dupont, deceased the 29th of November 1849 at the age of 34 years.
He is greatly regretted by his mother who was his only consolation in his moments of adversity, and leaves an orphan to cherish his memory.

Ici repose Numa Turpin, ne a la Nelle Orleans le 5 April 1813, Decede a Pascagoula le 23 octbre 1828 Age de 15 ans et demi.
Son pere pleure un fils frappe dans son printemps Et sur qui reposait l'espoir de ses vieux ans.
Sur un enfant cheri sa mere verse des larmes
Pour vous qui les versez ces pleurs ont bien des charmes
Mais desormais tranquille a l'abri des alarmes
Celui que vous pleurez a subi son arret
Son sort fut de mourrir et le jour n'est qu'un pret.

Here rests Numa Turpin born at New Orleans the 5th of April 1813, Died at Pascagoula the 23rd of October 1828 Aged 15 years and a half.
His father mourns a son struck in his prime
And upon whom rested the hope of his old age.
Over a loved child his mother sheds tears.
For you who shed them, these tears have many a charm,
But henceforth, quietly sheltered from alarms
He for whom you mourn has undergone his judgment
His lot was to die and the day is but a loan.

~~A.G. Debuys Clerk~~
~~By D.P. Debuys D.C.~~

Jackson County } To The Honorable the Chancery Court of said County Honorable George Wood Chancellor presiding.

The undersigned Commissioners in partition appointed by former decree of this Court (in the Cause hereon pending between Isabella Chinpians et als Complainants and Marie Louise Arnecke et als defendants) to make a fair and equitable partition of the lands ~~of~~ in this Cause ordered to be divided among the several Claimants respectfully report That before entering upon their duties or acting your said Commissioners did take and subscribe an oath as required by law that they would faithfully and impartially make the partition required of them and in all things perform the trust conferred on them to the best of their skill and ability and they respectfully refer to said affidavit taken and certified before and by A.G. Debuys Esquire clerk and now on file in this Cause as part of this report.

And they further report that they caused a survey of said lands to be made by James Ballentine in the manner prescribed by law and a map of said land to be made in strict accordance with law and said land to be divided into lots. And did proceed to divide said land so surveyed and mapped into Eight several shares each share being divided into lots said commissioners having in said division due regard for the situation quantity and quality of and advantages of each said share so that said eight shares are as near as may be equal in value; that said commissioners then severed said several shares consecutively from one to eight and numbered the lots in each share upon said map of said lots and shares aforementioned and the tracts on which they are numbered and laid down and did then and there proceed on the twenty eighth day of February A.D. Eighteen Hundred and eighty in a public manner in the office of the Chancery Clerk at Scranton in said Jackson County Mississippi to make an allotment by ballot of said several shares of said tracts of land among the said several persons entitled thereto and did proceed then and there in strict compliance with law to number as many tickets as there were shares numbered on said map to wit eight tickets numbered respectively one two three four five six seven eight consecutively, and did put the same in a box, and eight other tickets containing the same of the several eight persons entitled under the former decree to shares, in another box; and did then and there appoint a person to draw out said tickets thus: first a ticket containing a name then from the other box a ticket containing the number of the share at hazard, and said person did so draw alternate a name and then a number until both boxes were exhausted and a share drawn for each claimant. And your commissioners report and certify that in said drawing) share Number One was drawn for Isabella Charpiaux Share number two for E. Aleck Krebs share number three for Allen Krebs Share number four for Jerome Krebs Share Number five for John Krebs Share number six for Josephine Walker Share number seven for Mrs M. Remeike and share Number eight for Cecile Krebs. And the further report that said Share No 1 consisted of lots numbered and described on the annexed map as No's (4, 58, 28, 38, 26, 70, 64, 46, 14, 50,) Four, fifty eight, twenty eight, thirty eight twenty six, seventy, sixty four, forty six, fourteen and fifty, And there were allotted to said Isabella Charpiaux as her share in severalty. FLORIDA. KREBS.

To HEIRS OF SIDOINE KREBS, Dec'd.

DB 12 p. 608

Jackson County

Know all men by these presents that we Florida Krebs and heirs at law of Joseph Krebs deceased, for and in consideration of one dollars and the promises hereinafter set fourth do release and by these presents forever quit claim to the heirs of Sedoine Krebs dec'd and to their several vendees and assigns of the lands hereinafter described, to wit, certain tract of land situated in the county of Jackson and State of Mississippi in Sections 1 and 2 Township 8 S. of Range 6 West more particularly designated as that portion of the Mary L. Dupont claim which has been surveyed and subdivided into lots as shown by a plan of survey made for partition among the heirs of said sedoine Krebs dec'd and recorded in Book 4 pages 330 2½ in the record of deeds in the chancery clerks office of said Jackson county, so far as it may appear that we have any interest, right or title therein. This quit claim is executed for the purpose, as a further consideration, of supplying as far as may be possible the missing links in the chain of title to said land which have been lost or destroyed by fire which links consisted of the following conveyances and transfers to wit: The said land originally belonged to our paternal graindmother Mary L. Dupont Krebs whose maiden name was Mary L. Dupont. After ~~said~~ death the said land was sold by the administrator by order of court according to law for partition among her heirs to her son, our farther Joseph Krebs, which sale was legal and regular so far as we know or ever had reason to believe That our said father Joseph Krebs had possession under said title for about 20 years from about the year 1834 to the year 1853 when he sold the same to one Abram Gindrat. The said Abram Gindrat held possession for about one years when being unable to ~~purchase~~ pay the purchase price remaining unpaid, he reconveyed the same to our said father Joseph Krebs in satisfaction of the debt A short time thereafter our said father Joseph Krebs conveyed an undivided half interest therein to his son-in-law W. G. Humphries about the year 1854 and about the year 1854 our said father Joseph Krebs died leaving a will by which he devised and bequeathed to his children share and share alike the said land to the extent of his interest therein In the administration ~~thereon~~ of said estate however to the said executor said W. G. Humphries by regular said legal judicial by so far as we know or have reason to believe, sold the said undivided half interest of said Joseph Krebs at public outcry and the same was bought by and conveyed to L. D. Krebs, one of the children of said decedant. Sedonie Krebs, another of said children, having purchased of the said L. D. Krebs and W. G. Humphries their several interests in said lands, the said Humphries and wife our sister conveyed the half interest of the said Humphries therein to L. D. Krebs on condition that he shold convey the entirely of the title so vested in him to the widow and heirs of the said Sedonie Krebs which he did. These last transfers were made about the year 87 and the said Sedonie Krebs and his said heirs and those claiming and holding under them as purchasers have held actual adverse possession continuously and uninterruptedly so far as we know for the space of 30 years under claim of title as above stated and we know of no one who ever had any claim on said land who by reason of infancy or unsoundness of mind have escaped the bar of the Statute of Limitation of 10 years of any action that they may have had against the said heirs of the said Sedonie Krebs, their said possession having been open and notorious and well known to all who ever had any connection with the title thereto to the best of our knowledge and belief In testimony of which we have hereunto set our hands this the 16th day of September 1891.

BRIDGE.

The genial hospitality so characteristic of the Gautiers', was lavishly extended on last Saturday afternoon by Mrs. Hermes Gautier at her attractive home in Gautier, when she entertained the Bridge Club and other guests at one of the most delightful social events of the season.

On their arrival at Gautier the guests were met by Messrs. Henry, Walter and Hermes Gautier and Mr. Dennis Burns in their cars, and were conveyed to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hermes Gautier, where they were graciously received by Mrs. Hermes Gautier, charmingly assisted by Mesdames Kate Staples, J. L. Orrell, Horace Hines, Dennis Burns, Henry Gautier, N. P. Emmitt, and Miss Archie Quinn. Five tables were arranged in the spacious hall for the players and three delightful games of auction were enjoyed. The Club prize, a lovely lace and satin lingerie waist, was won by Mrs. Q. S.

JEROME AUGUSTE KREBS.

Mr. Jerome Auguste Krebs, one of the old and respected citizens of this city and well known all along the coast, died at his home here Saturday, Feb. 17, at 2:30 o'clock, aged 64 years, 4 months and 18 days. Mr. Krebs had been an invalid for more than two years. About ten days before his death he suffered a stroke of paralysis from which he never rallied. The funeral took place from his late residence in Lake Avenue Sunday afternoon, Feb. 20, at 2:30 p. m., proceeding to the Church of Our Lady of Victories and thence to Krebs Cemetery for interment. The services at the church and the cemetery were conducted by Father B. O'Rielly.

Deceased was a life-long resident of Pascagoula and had a large connection of relatives, as well as a host of friends. He ws a member of Scranton Camp Woodmen of the World and the members of the camp attended the funeral in a body. Surviving near relatives are: Three sons, Messrs. Sidione, Sylvester and Leon Krebs of Pascagoula; two daughters, Miss Phillipa Krebs, of Pascagoula and Mrs. John A. Green, of Crichton, Alabama; two brothers, Mr. Allen Krebs of Birmingham, and Mr. John Krebs of Moss Point; two sisters, Mrs. Reineck and Mrs. Blanche Frentz of Pascagoula and seven grandchildren.

Mrs. M. L. Screven on Saturday afternoon entertained a number of the little playmates of her son, Murray, at a George Washington party, on the occasion of his eleventh birthday. After indulging in a number of interesting games to their hearts' content the little guests were invited into the dining room, where refreshments consisting of ice cream, cake and candy were served. The room was decorated in a profusion of flags and red, white and blue streamers. The big event was the cutting of the Washington pie, from which each guest drew a horn. Those enjoying the occasion with Murray were Edgar and Adelaide Hull, Tom Morris, Malcolm Chisholm, James Miller, Alex Jackson, Jeanne Martin, Sarah and Marie Ford, Ebbie Ford, William Sparkman, Lawrence Mayo and Robert Kell.

One bann announced; dispensed with two.

Pierre Trouillet,[2] major son of Charles Trouillet, deceased, former guardian of the king's storehouses,[3] and Marguerite Rochon, originally from, and living in, this parish.

Isabelle Narbonne,[4] minor daughter of Antoine Narbonne, captain gradué of His Catholic Majesty's Army, and Marie Joseph Krebs, originally from, and living in, this parish.

Witnesses mentioned: Don Pedro de Favrot, captain of the Regiment of Louisiana, civil and military commandant of this place; Françoise Gerard, Mrs. de Favrot; Jean Chastang; Antoine Narbonne, brother of the bride.

Witnesses signing: Pedro Favrot, commandant of the said fort; A(ntoine) Narbonne, father of the bride; Jean Chastang, the younger; Antoine Narbonne, brother of the bride.

1. The celebrant did not sign, but it was definitely Fray Eon, the pastor. Even in print, his consistent use of the accent grave in lieu of the accent aigue indicates that he was the scribe.

2. Pierre was baptized March 4, 1752, when he was two days old. His brother, Jean Louis, had been born December 17, 1750 (Mob. bb I:182), but his baptism is recorded on the same folio. The Trouillet brothers sign a well educated and practiced hand. They owned land jointly as early as 1774 (ASP I:847) and in the 1780s they were partners in a naval supply enterprise (Hamilton, Colonial Mobile, 340-341).

3. The descriptive phrase was added between the lines then confirmed as a legitimate addition at the end of the record. Garde-magasin at Alibamons, he died en route to Mobile from that post. DeVille, G C C, 62.

4. She was born in April, 1770. Mob. bb I:237. Widowed about 1795, she may have married Joseph Campbell soon after. Hamilton, Colonial Mobile, 366; ASP I:626, 639, 697, 702-703, 847.

FAMILY GROUP RECORD

Placide Krebs

Oct. 5, 1796 - May 1869

Placide Krebs is buried in Skullyville Cemetery in a grave no longer marked.
The name has been spelled variously, with a single or double "b."
He was the son of Hugo Daniel Krebbs & Louisa LeFlore (LeFleur, LeFlau), and the grandson of Hugo Ernestas Krebbs, a man who immigrated from Germany to the New Orleans area in the early 1700s.

Placide married Rebecca Folsom, daughter of Nathaniel Folsom and Ai ne chi hayo.
They resided and raised a large family in Winston County, Mississippi.
Their last child, Rebecca, was born en route to Indian Territory, at Holly Springs, MS, where Rebecca Folsom Krebs died shortly after childbirth.

The Children of Placide & Rebecca Krebs were:

1. Nathaniel

2.

3. Jane

4. Delight

5. Born July 10,1824 in Mississipi, died in Pittsburg County, OK, July 20, 1909
Louisa married Henry C. D. Massey. They settled in what is now Pittsburg County, OK, and founded a large family of that surname. She is buried in Massey Cemetery, near McAlester, beneath a monument inscribed Louisa Griffith, the surname of her second husband.
She was the great great aunt of Alma Mason, a very material contributor to this website.

6. Nelinda

7. Edmond Folsom - A prominent citizen of the Choctaw Nation, a lawyer and a judge, for whom the town of Krebs, Oklahoma, is named.

8. Cillen - Dec. 5, 1827 - Mar. 16, 1884, Skullyville burial #94, Married Tandy Walker, later Principal Chief of the Choctaws.

9. Michael

10. Joseph

11. Alfred

12. Robert

13. Peter

14.

15. Rebecca - April 17, 1846 - March 3, 1936, Skullyville Burial #3, Born at Holly Springs Mississippi.
She married Wm. C. A. Riddle, later David C. McCurtain (Burial #60), later Edward Lanier (Burial #2.).
Her daughter by Wm. Riddle, Hearts Delight Riddle, died at age 12 yrs, and is buried in the McCurtain family lot (#63.)
Her daughter by David McCurtain, David Cornelia McCurtain (Hartshorne) (#55.), a colorful woman and a militant Choctaw who lived in Skullyville and Spiro, well into her tenth decade, is buried there as well.
The eloquent monument she raised stands at the foot of her grave. (#32)

This information about the Krebs family & its connections was supplied by Mrs. Alma Mason, of McAlester, OK,

"Contrat de Mariage Entre Mr. Hugo Kreps, Et Demoiselle Louise le Flaux Passé Le Douze de Janvier 1786," Mobile, January 12, 1786[1]

[cover] "Marriage Contract between Mr. Hugo Kreps and Miss Louise le Flaux, drawn up the twelfth of January 1786."

"Before us, the notary public, and the undersigned witnesses were present in person Mr. Hugo Kreps, an inhabitant of this city, the legimate son, using his rights of majority, of the late Mr. Hugo Ernestus Kreps and the lady Marie Anne Chauvin, his parents, a native of this parish [in the] Province of Louisiana [and the] Bishopric of Kebec [Québec], of one party;

And Miss Louise le Flaux, legitimate daughter, of age, of the late Mr. Jean Ba[p]tiste le Flaux and the late Marie Jeanne Gérard, her parents, a native of this city, [of the] same province and bishopric, of the other party:
Which parties, in good faith, by consent and free will, and with their relatives and friends hereafter named, residents of the said place, [stipulate] the following agreements and conventions of the marriage, TO WIT: on behalf of Mr. Hugo Kreps Mr. Chastang, Sr., and Mr. Pierre de Juran, his friends, inhabitants and residents of this city;

And on that of the said Miss Louise le Flaux, Mr. Corneillus [Cornelius] M'Curtin [McCurtin] and Mr. Chastang, Jr., her relatives and friends, inhabitants and residents of the said place;

The said parties will take and marry each other by name and law and [the] Sacrement of Matrimony, and this is to be celebrated and solemnized before our Mother the Holy Catholic, Apostolic Roman Church at the first request of either of them and as soon as agreed to and deliberated upon among their said relatives and friends;

Neither party shall be held responsible for debts made and contracted by the other before the celebration of the future marriage; on the contrary, if any such should exist, they shall be paid and discharged against the goods of the one making or contracting them, without recourse to the goods of the other;

The said future husband and wife shall be joint and communal [holders] of all their goods, movable and immovable, immovable acquisitions and bequests, according to the usage of Spain, according to whose will the future community shall be administered and governed, even if they should happen to establish residence and make acquisitions in lands and under laws and customs contrary thereto, which they have expressly relinquished and renounced by the present, the future spouses taking each other in all their rights, movable and immovable, present and future, those of the said spinster, the future wife, at present consisting of a sum of three hundred sixty piastres in Colonial currency;

The said future husband bringing to the present community a Negress called Perrine, aged seventeen years, valued at four hundred fifty piastres in paper; plus twenty-six horned animals, including ten cows and their calves [and] five without calves, valued together at three hundred ninety-five piastres; and one two-year-old bull, valued at fourteen piastres; plus two horses, valued at fifty piastres; plus a note for thirty-six piastres and one escalin owed by the Widow Kreps, his mother, together forming the sum of nine hundred forty-five piastres and one escalin in Colonial paper money; plus a note for two hundred sixteen piastres and five escalins gourdes [i.e., "full weight"], in hard coinage, owed by the Widow Kreps; which said amount he declares he possesses in the effects and articles named above;

The said future husband has endowed, and does endow, his said future wife with the sum of two hundred piastres gourdes as preëstablished dowery, paid one time against the best of the goods of the said future husband, in the event that dowery takes place, the principal of which shall remain the property of the said future wife and of the children to be born of the future marriage, and as surety for which she shall have a mortgage from the day of the nuptial blessing on all goods, present and future, of the said future husband;

It has been agreed that the préciput [i.e., "privileged proceeds"] shall be the sum of two hundred piastres gourdes, which the survivor of the two shall take by choice and before division [either] from the movable goods of the community, following the inventory that shall be made of the same at the time and without additions, or in cash specie, at the choice of the survivor;

And in the event of the death of one of them, without children, for [the sake of] good amity and [the] reciprocal love that exists between the said future spouses, the said future husband and the said future wife have made each to the other, by the present, bequeathment pure and simple, between living persons and irrevocable and in the best manner that [a] bequest may be made, of all their estate generally whatsoever, present as well as future, and of whatever may come to them in the future, whether by bequest, testament, legacy or otherwise, through the survivor of the said future spouses, their heirs and dependents, to enjoy all their estate in full ownership as of things belonging to them as well as of those which shall proceed from the community;

Done and ratified at Mobile, [in] the year one thousand seven hundred eighty-six, the twelfth of January, in the afternoon, in the presence of Messrs

KNOW ALL MEN BY THESE PRESENTS, that I, Nicholas Mangulla a free negro man, residing in this Place, attorney in fact of my Brothers William and Francis Dubuisson of the City of New Orleans, do covenant, that I sell really and truly to Huge Kreps of this City, a house situated on Royal Street, erected on a certain lot of ground bounded on the River, containing Ten toises in front with the depth as far as the River, bounded on the North by a lot of ground belonging to John Joyce and on the South by James Street; and I sell the house and lot above described to the said Huge Kreps free from incumbrances or mortgage, for the sum of thirty six dollars cash to me in hand paid, the receipt whereof I do hereby acknowledge and myself therewith fully satisfied and contented, renouncing the benefit of the law, "non numerata pecunia", fraud and of all others thereto relative and grant a formal receipt and discharge. By virtue of which, I relinquish and desist myself of the right of property, possession useful dominion and ownership, which I had and held in over the said home and lot, and cede, renounce and transfer the whole unto the purchaser or to his lawful representatives, in order that as true owner thereof, he may enjoy, possess, sell, alienate or dispose of the same at his will and pleasure, in virtue of this deed which I make in his favor in token of real delivery, whereby it is shewn that he has acquired possession of the premises above granted and conveyed without the necessity of any further proof with which I relieve him; and I bind myself to the eviction security and warranty of this sale in due form of law, with my property present and future, granting hereby as inserted the Clause of guarantee, renouncing the laws in my favor with the general one in form which prohibits the same. And I the above named Huge Kreps, being here present at the execution of this deed, do accept it in my favor, receiving therefrom as purchased, the said house and lot for the sum and agreeably as sold to me, acknowledging the same to be placed at my disposal and grant a formal receipt and discharge. In testimony whereof the present is done at the Town of Mobile on the Nineta day of the Month of August in the year of our Lord, one thousand seven hundred (110 ends) and ninety two. In the name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost, Be it made known to all who may see these presents that I Louise Le Fleau, legitimate daughter of the late [illegible] Le Fleau and Mary Joanne Girrard being sick but of sound Judgment, memory and understanding, convinced of the uncertainty of this Life, am desirous to make my last will and Testament, and for direction thereof I invoke the Sovereign Queen to intercede for me with her dear Son, that he may pardon my Manifold sins, and conduct my soul in the way of Salvation, with which supplication and divine Invocation I ordain it to be made as follows: In the first place I recommend my soul to God who created and redeemed it by the precious blood and death of his dear Son, our Lord Jesus Christ and beseech him through his mercy to pardon and receive it among the number of his Saints, and it is my further will and desire that my body be decently interred by the said pastor of my executor, for so is my will

It is also my will and desire that three masses be said for the benefit of my Soul and twenty five cents be given as a charitable donation to the Poor of this place for so is my Will I declare that I am not indebted to any person whatever —
I also declare that I was lawfully married to Mr Hugues Crepe, and from that marriage have three children now in existence named by the Stephen, Genivieve and Placide and a grand daughter named Louise Robeshow the daughter of my deceased daughter

I give and bequeath my property in manner following that is to say, to Stephen my new house and lot, to Placide my old house and to my daughter Genevieve the lot on the north side thereof to be divided equally between her and my grand daughter
It is further my Will and desire that my two slaves and such other property as I may die possessed of be equally divided for so is my Will
I also declare that Mr Bazi

Pascagoula river plantations in which he illustrates in some detail the plantation of the Sr. De la Pointe and the Chaumont Concession (see figure 17).[31] This drawing is somewhat earlier than the one of the Chouachas, for a notation on the back records that it "came with the letter of M. de La Chaise of the 30 October, 1726." The Krebs house at Pascagoula, already mentioned, is said to have been part of this De la Pointe plantation (see figure 18), but it is not readily identifiable from Dumont's sketch. It is significant that in both the properties illustrated here, two-storied, galleried buildings are shown as had been shown in the 1719 sketch of Dauphin Island whereas such buildings did not at first appear in New Orleans.

In New Orleans, building techniques advanced through the various forms of wood construction to half-timbered structures with brick-between-posts. Not until 1730, when Pierre Baron built a new prison on the Place d'Armes was the first all-brick building constructed.[32]

This was followed in 1732 by great brick barracks buildings flanking the public square[33] and other private houses of brick. The heavy weight of these all-masonry structures presented structural difficulties and eventually buildings with a first story of brick and the upper one of brick-between-posts came to be favored.

One of the most significant structures of brick-between-posts was the large, three-story convent built for the Ursuline Nuns when they arrived in the colony in 1727 (See figure 19).[34] Ignace François Broutin, who had become acting engineer-of-the-King after Pauger's death in 1726, designed the building; Pierre Baron re-designed it in his own favorite style, where the handsome timber framing of the brick-between-posts construction was left exposed as a picturesque decorative element. Impractical in the damp climate, the convent soon deteriorated and had to be replaced by a new building. Broutin designed this new all brick building in 1745; Bernard Deverges, engineer-in-chief of Louisiana after Broutin's death in 1751, completed it in 1752. This impressive, dignified, Louis XV style building still stands, the only known building surviving intact from the French colonial period (see figure 20). Inside, the great cypress staircase, constructed of heavy timbers with decorative carvings of acanthus leaves and its wrought iron handrail, was reused from the earlier convent of 1727-1734 (see figure 21). This is perhaps the earliest artifact of French colonial production in Louisiana.[35] The lead weatherboards. These buildings were typical of the structures erected along the Gulf Coast during early years of the French colonial period.

The curiously naïve drawings of François Benjamin Dumont de Montigny form the most extensive corpus of graphic representations of these early years. Although not conspicuous for their accuracy of detail, Dumont's drawings, with their wealth of notations, give information concerning the Gulf Coast architecture found in no other source. Many of them were adapted for the engraved illustrations for his Memoires Historique sur la Louisiane, published in Paris in 1753. Many of them are contained in the long manuscript poem in the Bibliotheque de l'Arcenal in Paris, at the front of which some former owner or editor has noted that "It appears that the author of this poem was a M. Dumont. His verses are detestable but there are some singular things . . . This poem contains 4692 verses in all."

Another important, illustrated, Dumont manuscript is in the Newberry Library in Chicago, and many more of his drawings are preserved in the Bibliotheque Nationale and the Archives Nationales in Paris. Some of these are slightly different versions of the same subject, and although many are unsigned, the distinctive primitive style leaves little doubt as to their authorship.

One of Dumont's drawings (see figure 13) shows the "Lodging of the Author at New Orleans" with the principal house, kitchen, and house for the negroes, pavillion, willow tree serving as a henhouse, trellis for vines, first garden, a sort of pond, large garden, oven, and a "ladder by which the chickens get up to the tree to roost." The gardens are laid out in formal French fashion; the flower garden and trellis all fenced off behind the house and outbuildings and separated by the pond and a bridge from the vegetable garden and orchards in the rear.[26] The entire property, which was probably located on Bourbon Street near Bienville, is surrounded by palisade fences as required by the acts of concession. An engraving in the published memoirs shows a similar development on a smaller, typical town lot and indicates that the buildings were of the simplest posts in the ground construction.[27] Dumont also gives detailed directions for building cabins of this sort, roofed with cypress bark or palmetto leaves. He adds that "in a country so well wooded as is Louisiana, it would not be difficult to lodge one's self, since one can, at so little expense, build a house there in twenty four hours."[28]

Similar in character to his New Orleans house drawing is one that he made of The Chouachas, one of the most important plantations on the lower Mississippi, located on the west bank of the river below New Orleans. (See figure 14).[29] This plantation had been established as part of the extensive concessions made in 1719 by John Law's "Company of the Indies" to the Duc de Belle Isle and several associates, including the Marechal d'Asfeld, director-general of fortifications of France, and successor to the Marechal de Vauban, Louis XIV's great military engineer. Le Blond de La Tour, engineer-in-chief of Louisiana, served as director of these concessions until his death in 1723 and probably designed the principal buildings of the Chouachas plantation. On the levee in front was the large "cross of the missions" to identify the location to missionaries traveling on the river. The principal buildings were enclosed by a large palisade fence. The rather pretentious house for the manager was set off by a typical French pigeon cote and a similarly shaped belfry for the plantation bell. Flanking the manager's house were the service buildings; the barns, indigo works, and negro cabins were in the fields beyond. A formal potager or vegetable garden was enclosed by another palisade fence behind the manager's house. Outside the fence was a hedge, probably of orange trees. All the buildings seem to be of one story. The drawing was probably made about 1736, for in 1737, the plantation had been sold by its absentee owners, and it became known as "Concession Plantation," a name by which the site is still recognized.

Dumont's crude drawings give little detail of the construction of the buildings, but Alexander De Batz's series of drawings made in 1731, at the time of the retrocession of the colony by the Company of the Indies to the King, supplies this deficency.[30] De Batz showed all the buildings of the Company's plantation across the river opposite New Orleans, including the Manager's two-story, brick-between-posts house, occupied by the historian Le Page du Pratz, who served as plantation manager there until his departure from Louisiana in 1734 (see figure 15). Included among De Batz's drawings of the Company's plantation are plans of the water mill (see figure 16), the negro cabins, and hospital. These buildings may have been designed either by Le Page, who claimed to be an architect, or by Pierre Baron, who was then the King's engineer in Louisiana.

Of particular interest and importance to students of early Gulf Coast architecture are Dumont's map and drawings of the Irving P/ Delmas and his brother A. G. Delmas built a Canning Factory on the Henry property on the river bank. They canned oysters, shrimp and figs.

House where shuckers kived ran North and South and were about 75' to 100' long. About 20 families lived in these houses. Joe Wagner was crew chief and brought the people to Pascagoula from Baltimore. They were called Boheiman's. They came at the request of Delmas Bros. They also went to Biloxi after canning season was over here. Mrs. John Loris' mother and father, Mrs. W. Guy Krebs' (Sophia) mother and father Mr & Mrs Joe Dumbraski came. I.P. Delmas family lived in the Henry home about 4 yrs and Tack Krebs fired the boilers in the factory, he lived with the Delmas family. The Bourge family built a home next to the Henry home. They left and Herbert Krebs moved in this house.

The Bxourge home is the oldest home. It is now on Canty St. having been moved there. It is now occupied by Syd. Spratley family.

A. D. Krebs had 3 daughters and 1 son. Tommy died in his teens

First P.O. was at foot of Delmas ave where Olivia Sward used to live. Torjusen home was built directly behind where old river ice house is. Mail was carried to Mobile on horse back. At one time Joe Delmas rode on horse back to take Mail to Mobile.

First repair work on O.L.V. Church was done by man named Isodore Dupont. I was about 6 years old then.

On of the first doctors in town was Dr. Cox and Dr. Evans. Cox was ZoeBelle's father.

First dentist was Dr. Uhlmer. I was about 9 yrs old when he filled my front tooth. It took 2 hours to hammer gold filling in.

Cris Nelson had a dry goods store on Pas. St. His daughter Dora married Pedro Jane.

KREBS: - Jehann Ludwig Krebs 1713 - 1780 German organist and composer, born at Buttelstedt, Thuringia on Oct, 1713, He studied music first with his father and in 1726 entered the Themasschule at Leipzig, where he became a pupil of J. S. Bach. He later held post as organist at Zwickau, Zeitz and at Altenburg, where he died in Jan. 1780. Kreb's organ music is composed in the forms used by Bach xxxxx and leans heavily on his masters style. It is techin$_{eca}$lly very accomplished and includes some especially fine trio sonatas. He also wrote sontas for flute and harpsichord and some sacred vocal music. C.P Co.

Krebs: Sir Hans Adolf Krebs - 1900 - British biochemist, born in Hildesheim, Germany. On Aug. 25, 1953 he was a nobel prize winner for medecine. Discovered the Citric-Acid Cycle. M.D. degree at Hamburg Germany University in 1925. Was knighted in 1958.

Early maps- "Modern" maps (tabulea Novae) were early added to Ptolemaic Atlas, both in Manuscrips and printed editions. The earliest was a map of the north drawn at Rome in 1427 by the Dane Claudius Claussi/n Swart, known as Claudius Clavus. Cardinal Nicholas Krebs (1401 - 64) of Cusa (Cues, on the Moselle) drew the first modern map of Germany, which was engraved in 1491.

German Churchman and scholor. At the troubled council of Basil (1431 - 49) he worked earnestly Bor unity of the Christan Church, and promoted reform of the Calendar. Pope Eugene IV bestowed the red hat of a Cardinal upon him in 1448, and in 1450 he was named bishop of Brixen (Bressanone) Italy. Eminenlty a diplomat, he was appointed in Monasteries and sees, convoking synods, labering to restore discipline and doctrine, trying to compose the Hussite schism, prometing a Crusade against the Turks, mediating for peace between the Roman and Byzantine Churches. He was active in exposing the False or Isidorian Decretals. Before Copernicus he preceived that the earth moves around the sun, and his philosophy was humanistic, with pantheistic tendencies that anticipated Giordano Bruno. He wrote mathemical and philosopohical treaties; his chief work was De docta ignorantia

2. Here reposes Edward Krebs, son of Rene' and Marie, nee Dupont. His wife died November 29, 1849 at the age of 34. He is deeply regretted by his mother who was his only consolation in his moments of adversity. He leaves an orphan girl to cherish his memory.

3. Here reposes Nema Turpin, born in New Orleans, April 3, 1813. Died in Pascagoula October 23, 1836. Age 25½ years. His father cries his son struck down in his spring, and on whom rested his hopes for his old age, on a child cherished by his mother who pours tears. For you who are pouring those tears they have some chance but henceforth at peace and protected by the adored one.

4. Here reposes seven of the children of Rene' Krebs and of Marie born to his wife. All died in tender age.

5. Here reposes Catherine Krebs, wife of Bayile Krebs, died May 24, 1831. Age 33. Born 1798. She has bowed to the almighty decree. A good wife, a good mother. The foundation of her faith in dying she blessed by her saintly hands the children that were around her and asked for her tenderness.

The Land Of Valentine Theme Of Annual Ball

Pas-Point Bureau

J. E. Krebs of Pascagoula reigned as King Joy XXXII and Miss Martha Rhodes Turner of Moss Point as Queen Joy XXXII at the 32nd annual coronation ball of the Young Men's Business Club of Moss Point.

The Land of Valentine was the theme of the ball held at the Elks lodge in Pascagoula Friday evening.

The new king of Joy is a general contractor. A veteran of World War II, he holds membership in the Elks and Knights of Columbus and was selected as king of the Knights of Columbus ball in 1960.

Miss Turner is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack F. Turner of Moss Point. She was valedictorian of the 1965 senior class of Moss Point High School and graduated from Sullins College in Bristol, Va., in 1967 as valedictorian of her class. Presently a senior at the University of Mississippi, Miss Turner is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma social sorority, mortar board, senior women's honor socieity, Sigma Delta Pi, Spanish honorary, and Phi Kappa Phi, scholastic honorary.

Miss Turner's father is a former king of Joy and her maternal grandmother is a former archduchess. Her mother and her uncles, Tom Lennep of Pascagoula and Edwin Lennep Jr. of Libya, Africa, also served as court members.

For her coronation the queen chose an ensemble depicting the Napoleonic era. The gown of silk satin embroidered with brilliant jewels featured a portrait neckline banded in gold paillettes and rhinestones. The focal point of the gown was a sunburst at the waistline created of a large ruby surrounded by rhinestones. Appliques of the Napoleonic bee design of rhinestones, crystal beads and rubies were placed down the sides of the sheath skirt. The bee design was repeated near the hem outlined by two bands of gold encrusted laurel leaf motiffs.

The queen's mantle, a replica of that worn by empress Josephine, fell from a gold lace collar traced in jewels of gold, silver and red. Banded in ermine the mantel featured the Napoleonic bee design formed of rhinestones and hand-cut beads interspersed with scrolls and teardrops extending the entire length of the train.

Mrs. Ellis Gardner of Pascagoula served as archduchess to the queen. She was escorted by archduke Dr. G. R. Hilbun of Moss Point.

Members of the court introduced by E. A. Khayat, master of ceremonies, were:

Duchesses, Mrs. A. L. Welsh, Mrs. Gary Smith, Mrs. Lum Cumbest, Mrs. Thomas Hegwood Jr., Mrs. A. L. Daffin Jr., Mrs. David Smith, Mrs. Jack Breland, Mrs. C. R. Slaughter Jr., Miss Sharon Stagg, Miss Martha McIlwain and Miss Kathy Bodden.

Dukes of the court were E. S. "Ned" Nelson, Paul Palmer, Robert Nichols, T. M. Von Sprecken Jr., Dr. C. D. Whigham Jr., Andrew J. Keenan, Douglas Fontaine, Terry Adams, J. M. Epting Jr., Gayden Harper, Jr., and Hubby E. Nelson.

Trainbearers to the queen were Miss Leslie Colville, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Colville of Moss Point, and Miss Kathy Herring, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Herring Jr. of Pascagoula.

The crownbearers to their majesties were Steven Hockaday, son of Dr and Mrs. Perry J. Hockaday of Pascagoula, and Eric Denmark, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Denmark of Moss Point.

Following the coronation of the 1969 king and queen by the 1968 monarchs, Miss Vicki Ramsay of Pascagoula and James F. Harvey of Moss Point, dancing was enjoyed to the music of the Roy Choice orchestra of Mobile.

The king and queen entertained members of the court and invited guests at a royal breakfast held at the Knights of Columbus home following the ball.

Joe E. Brown served as chairman of the ball and Jack Beatty was director of art work.

It appears from a plat & certificate of survey by James Dowell U.S.D.S. dated July 25th 1833. that the claim of Francis Krebs, viz, claim No. 89. Report No. 3. Certificate of Confirmation No. 20 & Warrant of Location No. 374. was on that day surveyed, which survey contained the quantity of 643 75/100 acres. I am convinced that some mistake has happened either in the issuing this warrant of location, or in executing the survey - The it appears from the records at Augusta Mo. was confirmed for 1280 acres, and that the certificate of confirmation did issue for that quantity. - if these facts appear in the records ~~of~~ in your office, I have to request that you will be pleased to issue such instructions to the surveyor as will cause the claim to be surveyed ~~for~~ in conformity to the confirmation. I to wit, for the quantity of 1280 acres you will greatly oblige me by dropping a line on this subject addressed to me at Augusta Mo. and any charges for your trouble shall be forwarded as soon as known.

Very Respectfully

Friend Selmas

I went up to your uncle's this evening, but had no time to go & see you; therefore I took the shortest way of ~~letting~~ ~~let~~ communicating to you; thus I think it would be good for you to try to have the Mobile Road Removed from being a County Road; for, as you may see yourself our principal County Road is in very ~~bad~~ bad order, and all those, who could be had to work on the Mobile Road — would work on this — I send you a letter which I wish you would attend to, & if you go to you uncle's — be so good as to take a letter for Miss Lewis which is in the Store

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

Bk 31 p. 587-8

To all to whom these presents shall come, Greeting:

Whereas there has been deposited in the General Land Office a certificate numbered four of th the Register and Receiver of the Land Office at Augusta, Mississippi, with a plat of the Survey of the tract of land therein mentioned, whereby it appears that by the Act of Congress approved on the eighth day of May One thousand eight hundred and twenty two entitled "an Act supplementary to the several Acts for adjusting the claims to land and establishing Land Offices in the Districts East of the Island of New Orleans? "

the claim of Antoine Krebs entered as number Four in Abstract Number one of the Register and Receiver has been confirmed and that the same has been surveyed and designated as Section Eight in Township Eight South of Range six West, containing two hundred and ninety three acres, and twelve hundreths of an acre; in the District of lands subject to sale at Augusta in the State of Mississippi:

Now know ye, That the United States of America, in consideration of the premises, and in conformity with said Act of Congress, have remised, released and forever quit-claimed and by these presents do remise, release, and forever quit-claim unto the said Antoine Krebs, or his legal representatives & to his or their heirs the said Land above described; subject to any just claims to all and every part thereof, of all and every person or persons bodies politic or corporate dervied from the United States or from either the British, French or Spanish authorities:

To have and to hold the same, together with all the rights, privileges, immunities, and appurtenances of whatsoever nature thereunto belonging, subject to any such just claim or claims as aforesaid, unto him the said Antoine Krebs or his legal representatives and to his or their heirs and--assigns forever; so that neither the United States or any other persons claiming under them, except as is provided in said Act, and the Reservations aforesaid may or can set up any right or title thereto.

In testimony whereof I, James K. Polk President of the United States of America, have caused these Letters to be made Patent, and the seal of the General Land Office to be hereunto affixed. Given under my hand at the City of Washington the eighth day of April in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty-seven and of the Independence of the United States the Seventy first.

(L.S.) BY THE PRESIDENT: James K. Polk,
By J. KNOX WALKER,

S.H. Laughlin, Recorder of the General Land Office.

The State of Mississippi
Jackson County

The Orphan's Court to Bazile Krebs of the aforesaid County and State: Greeting:

Whereas, Paul Krebs late of the County aforesaid, deceased; lately died intestate, having whilst he lived, and at the time of his death, dues, goods, rights and credits within the county aforesaid, by means whereof the full disposition and power of granting the administration of all and singular the goods, rights and credits of said deceased, and final dismission of the same to the said Court by statute manifestly belongs. Thereupon the Court desiring that the goods, rights, and credits of the said deceased may be well and truly administered, converted and disposed of, do hereby grant unto the said Bazile Krebs, in whose fidelity the Court has the highest confidence, full power by virtue of these presents, to administer the goods, rights and credits of said deceased, which to him in his life time and at the time of his death did belong and to ask, levy, receive and recover the same, and to pay the debts in which the deceased stood obliged so far forth as his goods, rights and credits will extend, according to their rate and order of law, being first sworn on the Holy Evangelist of Almighty God, to make a true and perfect inventory thereof, and to exhibit to the said Court, in order to be recorded in time as the law directs, and to render a just and true account, calculation and reckoning of the said administration as the law requires; and the Court ordain, depute and constitute you, the said Bazile Krebs, administrator of all and singular the goods rights and credits of the said deceased.

Witness John Fairley Esq.r Judge of Probate for the County and State aforesaid, the Second Monday of December in the year of our Lord One thousand eight hundred and thirty —

EARLY PERIOD

This book contains copies of old records pertaining to the decendants of Joseph Simon de LaPointe and Hugo Ernestus Krebs. It is by NO MEANS complete! If you are a decendant of these families, we would invite you to add to this collection of old papers.

We also ask that you PLEASE use care in examining this this book as it is very fragile (cheap!), but never-the-less, a very interesting collection of old records. If you should desire an in-depth study of some of these papers, most of them can be found in the "Krebs" family file in the Jackson County Library in Pascagoula.

Sehr geehrte Miss Rapier!

Die Stadtverwaltung Trier hat Ihr Schreiben vom 16.1o.67 an uns zur Erledigung weitergeleitet. Wir haben festgestellt: Die Eltern Ihres Vorfahren, Johann Kriebs und Anna Charitas Fritsch, heirateten am 14.2.17o2 in Neumagen. Leider ist der Heiratseintrag ohne Elternangaben. Die Taufe des Johann Kriebs kann ohnehin nicht mehr festgestellt werden, da die frühesten Kirchenbücher von Neumagen 1688 beginnen. Anna Charitas Fritsch ist als Tochter der Eheleute Reiner Fritsch und Catharina .... am 24.3.1682 in Trittenheim /Mosel geboren. Aus der Ehe Johann Kriebs- Anna Charitas Fritsch gingen die nachstehenden Kinder hervor:

22. 1.17o3	Susanna	15. 3.1712	Anna Maria Catharina
18. 3.17o5	Gertrud	15. 5.1713/4	Hugo Ernst
1. 5.17o6	Johann Reinard	27. 8.1716	Maria Anna
15. 5.17o8	Johann Gerlach	28. 2.1721	Johann Peter
18.1o.17o9	Catharina

Der Vater Johann Kriebs starb am 12.1o.1751 (Ohne Altersangabe) Die Mutter starb erst am 4.3.1773. Angaben über Erziehung, Ausbildung, Militärzeit von Hugo Ernst sowie über den Beruf des Vaters sind aus den Promotionslisten der Universität Trier sowie aus den Kirchenbüchern Neumagen nicht zu ersehen. Vielleicht kann man annehmen, dass der Pate von Hugo Ernst, der Canonicus vom Stift St.Paulin in Trier, Hugo Ernst Braun etwas für die Erziehung und Ausbildung seines Patenkindes getan hat.

German documentation of parents of Hugo Ernestus Krebs -- Johann Kriebs and Anna Charitsas from Trier, Germany.

Baron Franz von Krebs (born in Castle Cashem), whose towers rise above the flowing waters of the Mosel River into the Rhine province of Germany). He married a daughter of Joseph Simon de la Pointe and Jeanne Puluot of Canada (his wife). From this union were three sons:

(1) Francois Krebs – who married Marie Louise de Belle Isle, daughter of Moreau Augustine de Belle Isle and Marie Louise de Guilorie de l'Isle a Guillory (his wife).

(2) Pierre Krebs – who married Aline Petoet (Petite ?) of Pascagoula. It is said that from this marriage are descended the Sandses, Senacs, Frys, Demouys and Rapiers and descendants of Mobile.

(3) Hugo Krebs – who married Marie de Josieuse, of New Orleans. Marie was the cousin of Madame Jan Diard (nee Francoise de Mau), plantation owner and army officer in Haiti. M. Diard & Mde. Diard were the parents of Francois Diard, who came to New Orleans at the turn of the 18th century and married Eugenie Rapicault, the daughter of Therese Billeron (the cousin of Bienville) and her husband Renee Rapicault, of Ste. Genevieve and New Orleans. M. & Mme Renee Rapicault were also grandparents of Joseph Krebs Diard (of New Orleans and later of Mobile), who married Adeline Jourdan. The latter couple were the parents of Charles Diard – who married Sarah Antonia Parker (of Mobile), the daughter of Louise Adolaide DeLage (of Mobile) and Robert Monell (a native of Albany, N.Y.).

(4) Marie Josephine Krebs – who married Captain Antoine Narbonne (or Narbona)...mentioned as belonging to the French Navy. Their daughter Anna Norbona (she spells her name the Spanish way) became the wife of Don Enrique Grimarest..the most distinguished figure in the whole ghostly company. For, inthe archives of the Indes at Seville is a copy of a letter signed by Don Bernardo de Galvez (the governor of Louisiana) proposing to the King of Spain that Don Enrique, Captain in the Regiment of Navarre, be made governor of Mobile. The date of this document is May 26, 1781. There are in the same archives two other papers relating to Grimarest. One announces his promotion to be lieutenant-colonel for "distinguished merits contracted at the capture of Mobile (in 1780); and the other is the royal license granted Grimarest to marry Dona Ana Narbona.

A descendant of Hugo Krebs and Marie de Joyieuse (but whether immediate or not is not stated) was Joseph Krebs. As related in family records, he married the daughter of William Fisher..the owner of the Fisher Tract and other property in Mobile. His (J. Krebs') sister Josephine Krebs became the progenitress of the Delmas Family of Pascagoula and Mobile. And another sister, Emarante Krebs, married Eugene Latady.

Corinne Krebs was married in great state (July 15, 1850) to Henry G. Humphries, in her father's house at NW corner of Conti and Hamilton Streets in Mobile. She had for her bride's maid her stately sister Miss Florida Krebs, long an early socialite of Mobile.

Henry G. Humphries was a notable man of Mobile (said to be very handsome), and was a successful cotton man before the War Between the States. He was a member of the secession convention in Montgomery (from Mobile County) in 1861; provost-marshal at Mobile, 1862-63; and enrolling officer, 1864-65. He had a long lineage beginning with Sir John Humphries, a native of Dorsetshire, England..who was a member of the illustrious House of Bohun. Sir John's wife was Lady Lucy, daughter of Baron Clinton, 11th Earl of Lincoln. Sir John was deputy governor of Massachusetts. A descendant, John J. Humphries, moved to Columbus, Mississippi, and there engaged largely in cotton planting. His son Dr. W.N. Humphries was a trustee for the Mississippi College for Women. And his son, Henry G. Humphries, settled in Mobile in 1819.

One of the handsomest edifices and residences was the house that stood on the southwest corner of St. Louis&Conception Streets in Mobile (until torn down and built over by the first Greyhound Bus station). And it was there his daughter Marie Humphries became the wife of Hon. Marion Gaines of Austin, Texas. This beautiful old Humphries home for many years before demolition became the home of Mrs. Nina Hood Boykin (daughter of the late O.J. Hood).

RE the old Krebs home, NW corner of Conti and Hamilton Streets: It was occupied in 1865 by Louis D. Krebs; by Mrs. M. Krebs in 1866; in 1878 by L.D. Krebs; and in 1886 by Miss Florida Krebs, by whom (in 1902) it was sold to the Mobile Library Association..and became the site of the first Mobile Public Library. When the Library was moved in 1926, the old home became the property of J. Howard Wilson...and still later by H. Hoffman.

.....There is a note about the Chevalier de Belle Isle, whose lovely daughter married Sieur Francois Krebs? The chevalier arrived in these parts June 4, 1721, on the good ship Portefaix from France, along with DeGuilloric and DeJoyieuse (whose names play some part in this family history and narrative) and Dubas, Senac, Petat (Petect ? or Petite ?) and Vivia (whose names do not). The archives in Paris record a grant under the charter of the Western Company (September 7, 1717) to Count M.A. de Belle Isle, chevalier at the court of Louis XIV of France, and general of the marines in Louisiana (in 1730). Belle Isle appears to have come over to occupy his grant and grow up with the country.

Going further back into the judicial records of Spanish times in Mobile, we find for the first few years transactions are in French (or in both French and Spanish). But as the hold of Spain grew stronger, hers became the sole official language. The Trouillet division of 1786, before Commandant Favrot, was in French, but others were altogether in Spanish.

On March 15, 1786, we find Pierre Trouillet petitioning for the dissolution of the partnership with his brother Jean Trouillet, and for division of the property...Pierre wishing to leave for New Orleans. Jean Trouillet was the husband of Elizabeth Chastang, and they were parents of Marguerite Trouillet, born in Mobile on November 6, 1785, and baptized July 7, 1786.

The neighborhood of old Fort Louis de la Mobile (the first Mobile settlement at 27-Mile Bluff on Mobile River) was not deserted, for in 1792 the Widow Rochon obtained the very site, named "The Bluff", described as "land 12 arpens front by 40 deep, b[illegible] a piece of land called 'the Old Fort', distant about nine miles from this place, situated on Mobile River". A short distance below this James Innerarity established a cotton plantation on which to work the negroes of his wife, Eloise Isabelle Trouillet, as she owned a number accustomed to agriculture. He applied for a tract "40 arpens on the river by 30 deep, situated on both sides of a small spring (bottom) commonly known by the name of Fond de Lourse (otherwise the Old Fort Spring)". It was situated between the plantation belonging to Dubroca and St. Philip and that of Rochon's at the Old Fort on the river. B. Dubroca and Peter Chastang testify that the tract is vacant, and Perez grants it April 6, 1809, the intendancy being closed. Two years later we find a grant to Isabelle Narbonne bounded on the north by (James) Innerarity's habitation and on the south by that of St. Philip.[1]

A map of Township #2 North Range East Land District Southern Part of Alabama, [illegible] and examined and approved January 26, 1849 (and signed by James H. Weakley, Surveyor of the Public Lands in Alabama)....shows us 240acres with a full frontage on the Tom[illegible] marked "4" owned by Augustin Rochon (next south of the land of James Caller..#3 [illegible] erty was several miles above the meeting of the Tombigbee and the Alabama (to form Mobile River).

Old Fort Louis de LaMobile, 27-mile Bluff (north of Mobile Bay on the Mobile River) obtained by Widow Rochon in 1792. Her husband, Pierre Augustin Rochon was the grandson of Joseph Simon de LaPointe and M. Catherine Doucin, and the SON of Marie Jeanne Simon deLaPointe and Augustin Rochon.

Explanation to examining genealogist

During the Depression in the 30's, the W.P.A. in New Orleans, La. hired a number of people who read, wrote and spoke the French language fluently to translate old French and Spanish documents found in the Archives of the Louisiana State (Library) Museum. (Now in the Cabildo Archives.)

The translations were typed on loose-leaf notepaper and put in black covers. In time these black note books were referred to, for want of a better name, as the "Black Books". People doing research in the Museum were often told to look in the row of "Black Books" to check whether or not the information they needed could be found in them

It was in one of these "Black Books" the succession of Sieur LaPorte was found, showing the deposition by Dr. Krebs regarding the treatment of the said LaPorte.

Thus: Black Book translation in Cabildo Library copied by Doucette Rayner Bolten 10-5-1955.

Succession of Sieur V. LaPorte

Deposition and certificate of Dr. Krebs regarding the health and death of Sieur V. LaPorte. I, the undersigned personally appeared before Attorney General of the King to make a deposition regarding the death of Mr V. LaPorte who was brought to my plantation at Pascagoula (Miss) on September 25 in a carriage by seven Englishmen for treatment. LaPorte was very sick and refused to answer questions or give any information regarding his past life. On the third day, while having his shirt changed, I noticed a large contusion on his right arm. He told me it was a putrid Anthrox which he had in New Orleans. I certify he urinated and spat blood. I opened the contusion and syringed it with wine and brandy.

Signed: KREBS

Before me, the undersigned authority, this day, personally appeared DOUCETTE RAYNER BOLTEN, known to me to be that person who upon her oath stated that this record is copied exactly as shown in translation of French document Number P 71056--Box 58 10-20-1763 found in Cabildo (Library) Museum in New Orleans La.

Miss Regina Rapier

With reference family research Kriebs, Krebs-Neumagen.

Dear Miss Rapier:

The City Administrator of Trier forwarded to us your letter of October 16, 1967. We confirm the following. The parents of your ancestors Johann Kriebs and Anna Charitas Fritsch were married on the 14th of February, 1702 in Neumagen. Regret to advise that the marriage license made no mention of the parents of the couple. The christening of Johann Kriebs can therefore not be confirmed because the earliest church books from Neumagen only started in 1688.

Anna Charitas Fritsch was born on the 24th of March in 1682 in Trittenheim/Mosel as the daughter of Reiner Fritsch and Catharina. Out of the marriage from Johann Kriebs and Anna Charitas Fritsch the following children were born:

22nd Jan.,1703 Susanna
18th Mar.,1705 Gertrude
1st of May,1706 Johann Reinard
15th of May,1708 Johann Gerlach
18th of Oct.,1709 Catharina
15th of Mar.,1712 Anna Maria Catharina
15th of May,1714 Hugo Ernst
27th of Aug.,1716 Maria Anna
28th of Feb.,1721 Johann Peter

The father, Johann Kriebs, died on October 12, 1751 (without record of his age). The mother died on March 4, 1773.

Specifics about the upbringing, the education and military service of Hugo Ernst, as also the profession of his father, cannot be found out of the promotion list from the University in Trier or out of the church books from Neumagen. Perhaps we can assume that the godfather of Hugo Ernst, Mr. Hugo Ernst Braun, the Canonicus from Stift St. Paulin in Trier, looked after the upbringing and education of his godchild.

Best regards,.

KREBS: Johann Ludwig Krebs 1713 - 1780 German organist and composer, born at Buttelstedt, Thuringia on Oct, 1713, He studied music first with his father and in 1726 entered the Thomasschule at Leipzig, where he became a pupil of J. S. Bach. He later held post as organist at Zwickau, Zeitz and at Altenburg, where he died in Jan. 1780. Kreb's organ music is composed in the forms used by Bach and leans heavily on his masters style. It is techinically very accomplished and includes some especially fine trio sonatas. He also wrote sontas for flute and harpsichord and some sacred vocal music. C.P Co.

Krebs: Sir Hans Adolf Krebs - 1900 - British biochemist, born in Hildesheim, Germany. On Aug. 25, 1953 he was a nobel prize winner for medecine. Discovered the Citric-Acid Cycle. M.D. degree at Hamburg Germany University in 1925. Was knighted in 1958.

Early maps- "Modern" maps (tabulea Novae) were early added to Ptolemaic Atlas, both in Manuscrips and printed editions. The earliest was a map of the north drawn at Rome in 1427 by the Dane Claudius Claussión Swart, known as Claudius Clavus. Cardinal Nicholas Krebs (1401 - 64) of Cusa (Cues, on the Moselle) drew the first modern map of Germany, which was engraved in 1491.

Nicholas of Cusa (Kū'za) German, Nickolaus Van Cusa; Latinized, Nicolaus; original name, Nickolas Chrypffs (or Cryfts) or KREBS. b. at Kues (Cusa), nearTrier, Germany (1400 Or 1401) d. at Todi, Italy, Aug. 11, 1464. German Churchman and scholor. At the troubled council of Basil (1431 - 49) he worked earnestly Bor unity of the Christan Church, and promoted reform of the Calendar. Pope Eugene IV bestowed the red hat of a Cardinal upon him in 1448, and in 1450 he was named bishop of Brixen (Bressanone) Italy. Eminenlty a diplomat, he was appointed in Monasteries and sees, convoking synods, laboring to restore discipline and doctrine, trying to compose the Hussite schism, prometing a Crusade against the Turks, mediating for peace between the Roman and Byzantine Churches. He was active in exposing the False or Isidorian Decretals. Before Copernicus he preeived that the earth moves around the sun, and his philosophy was humanistic, with pantheistic tendencies that anticipated Giordano Bruno. He wrote mathemical and philosopohical treaties; his chief work was De docta ignorantia

Mr. Vincent Ros, President

Pascagoula, Miss. 39567

Dear Mr. Ros:

I am sorry for the delay in writing you, after my phone call. The press of business as well as life on the farm in the summer managed to get in the way of my good intentions.

I am enclosing a map of the area of Germany we visited last month, also circling Numagen (Nu is pronounced like Mew). ~~Numagen~~ is in the wine growing area famouse for the white Mosel wines. In the last 4 or 5 years it has been recognized ardeological as the summer home of Constantine (he wintered down the Mosel river at Trier, which is famous for it's Roman ruins.) The economic base of the community is wine and tourism - am told fishing is good in the Mosel!

As you know Hugo Ernestus Krebs, the 7th of 8 eight children was the son of Johann Krebs (Kreibs) and Anna Charitas Fritsch, both of whom died in Numagen, the marriage, births of children and death certificates are on file at the church.

My visit to ~~Numagen~~ was only about 2 hours, so I did not have time to get all the exact families straight. About 30% of the town are "Krebs" (all related) and about another 35% are direct descendants. All from the same family! The area is beautiful! The people that I had a chance to meet were extremely warm, friendly and very excited about having a "famous" American connected to their family. We met briefly with the Oberbergermeister (Lord Mayor), who speaks some english, claims to read it better. We had an interpreter with us - although many of the townspeople speak some english (no doubt due to the tourism) involved conversation was difficult.

This trip to Numagen was arranged by my hosts in Zweibrucken - there is a famous Saint, hopefully I am correct that his name is Nicholas de Krebs. He is buried in a church in Rome - and his "heart" is a holy relic in the church at Kues (Numagen did not have a church of it's own at that time). This Saint is highly regarded by the Germans in the lands between the Mosel and Rhine,the population being 99% Catholic. Unfortunately, I lacked the time to further investigate Nicholas, but he should be easy to trace. As I mentioned, I am a descendant of this family through Hugo's daughter Marie Marguerite m. Juan de Gradenigo (etc. through the Voorhies, Mouton & Robichaux's in Louisiana). Since many of these people are in Louisiana history books, I grew up with discussion of various orgins - when the time came for a trip to Germany, going to Numagen seemed like an adventureous thing to do - particularly with such enthusiasm from my hosts!

By way of explanation - when Cornwallis was defeated at Yorktown, it was by the Deux Pont Brigade of Zweibrucken, then under French territory. The Zweibrucken's are proud, they claim to have been the "only German's who fought on the right side of the Revolutionary War!! " The relationship between York County & Zweibrucken was strengethened in the last 10 or so years,and they became our "Sister City". A delegation was invited, and visited our County in October -1976 during bi-centennial celebrations at Yorktown. Our visit in June, was by return invitation for the opening of their Rose Festival - Zweibrucken being famous for its roses and horses. Our delegation consisted of two members of Planning Commission (my position); 2 from School Board; 2 from Bi-Centennial Committee; and 1 member of the Board of Supervisors. A local historian accompanied us as our translator (a necessity). Some of the delegates took family, and our total was 18.

Our host in Neumagen was Oskar Krebs, Romerstr. 65, 5559 Neumagen-Dhron/Mosel, West Germany. (their numbers, address-wise are reversed compared to ours). Should you desire to write, I would suggest that the Oberbergermeister would be the appropriate person, perhaps in care of Oskar Krebs. Formality is the rule, and as we were "cautioned" many times before our visit "the chain of command is important to them"!! Also, enclosed is a copy of the brochure from where we had lunch - it also has a map.

Just noticed, I have been spelling Neumagen incorrectly on the first page!

I might also suggest that more information can be obtained from the German National Tourist Office, 630 5th Avenue, NY,NY 10020. As I mentioned Neumagen is a popular tourist spot - particulary in July, August & September during the "wine-tasting" season.

The climate is considerably cooler than that of Mississippi - in summer! Evenings do require a jacket or sweater. Winters I have been told are milder.

Lastly, one of the delegates who accompanied me on this brief visit suggested that Pascagoula should make the wines of Neumagen the official wine of your community!

If I can answer any questions, please let me know. The translator who accompanied us has also offered to act as a go-between if that is desired.

Sincerely,

Dana R. Rist

Dear Nap:

On further reflection I think I do understand what that baptismal entry says. It seems that the proposed godparents were not present at the ceremony and that two other people stood in for them as proxy godparents. I also think the first line with the two dates does not belong as part of the Krebs baptismal entry.

I think the first line says:

"Feb 1 - Mch 5 - Jean Francois, cure of -- acting.

Then:

Jan 11 - garson Joseph ne de l[e]'m[arriage] entre hughues her-

In addition to switching back and forth in languages he gets some of the French wrong (garson for garçon; natife for natif, etc.) and I have made no attempt to change any of that.

Thanks for letting me look at the copy. It seems to match a lot of the notes that Walter Saucier took back in the late 60s when he and I spent a day or so in the rectory in Mobile, he looking at the baptismal book while I tackled the marriage one.

And thanks again for the latest bit of information on Lizana which, as far as I am concerned, answers the question nicely.

Good talking to you, Nap. And glad that that storm didn't hit you.

men went together to the governor's house, but, remarked Pittman, "I could read in Mons. D'Abbadie's countenance the moment I entered that he never designed I shou'd be there." Pittman would have departed, but D'Abbadie called him back and seated him at his right hand, just beyond Aubry. "This was rather inconvenient," Pittman continued, "for being deaf with my left ear I cou'd not hear perfectly. . . . Mons. D'Abbadie spoke very low to the [Indian] Interpreter which was again another very great inconvenience, for I was obliged as often as modesty wou'd permit me to desire Mons. Aubry to repeat to me what passed." In spite of these difficulties, Pittman heard quite clearly the governor's assurances to the Arkansas of continuing French attachment and concern for their welfare. D'Abbadie's remarks surprised Pittman, for he knew most certainly that Spanish authority would soon replace that of France in Louisiana. Letters recently received from Paris and Madrid had made the coming change of government a matter of common gossip in New Orleans. The governor's solicitude for the redskins and his stubborn rejection of the new imperial alignment in the Mississippi Valley could only be understood as part of a devious scheme to encourage the hostility of the Indians and keep the British from reaching the Illinois.[20]

Ten days later Pittman was again present at meetings of D'Abbadie, a bellicose band of those Tonica warriors who had turned back the Loftus expedition, and a party of Choctaws. On both of these occasions the governor made it amply clear that the British officer was his friend; he assured the Indians, who all shook hands with Pittman, that the English as well as the French would be their good friends. On the eighteenth, when the Tonicas received their annual gifts from the governor, D'Abbadie allowed Pittman to make a formal talk to the chieftains and to distribute wine, brandy, and a few presents.[21]

Determined to execute Farmar's orders and reach Fort Chartres in spite of D'Abbadie's warnings and procrastination, Pittman proposed about the middle of July to leave New Orleans, accompanied by one servant and an Indian interpreter, under the pretense of returning to Mobile. Instead, he planned to go to Pascagoula where he hoped to persuade Joseph Krebs, a local planter, to loan him a pirogue and three or four Negroes so that he might paddle up the Pascagoula River to Chickasawhays and the Choctaw villages. From there, with a local escort, he would go into Cherokee territory and engage a dozen or so warriors of that tribe to guide him down the Tennessee River to the Illinois country. Pittman imagined that the Cherokee could simply carry "white colors" as a sign of their peaceful intent, "by which sanction my Person will be sacred to those Indians." With luck he would remain at Fort Chartres through the winter. If the redskins in the north proved to be hostile, he would slip away and "drive down the Mississippi with the current" as quietly as possible (as those British agents whose small parties succeeded in reaching Fort Chartres were, in fact, forced to do).[22] Before undertaking this daring subterfuge, Pittman had the foresight to secure from D'Abbadie a letter of introduction to M. de St. Ange, the French commandant whom he hoped to find at Fort Chartres.[23]

Surfeited with French hospitality, Pittman left New Orleans on July 19, but his elaborate scheme for a secret dash to the Illinois was put aside. He sailed on a merchant vessel which Major Farmar had hired for military transport service and then subleased to a Jewish merchant doing business between Mobile and New Orleans. Pittman reached Mobile on the thirtieth to find himself in considerable ill favor. The seamen aboard the vessel complained to Farmar of having been forced to carry Pittman with them, without compensation and at some cost in cargo space, and the major chastised Pittman for having left New Orleans without orders, even though Farmar had actually written on the twenty-first telling the lieutenant to return to Mobile if he were unable to get up the Mississippi. Plans for a regimental ascent of the river were still very much alive at Mobile, and Farmar hoped to send the next expedition by way of Lake Pontchartrain and the Iberville River. Within a few days Pittman was off on his original mission again. He reached New Orleans by August 12, embarrassed by his initial failure, miffed by Farmar's cold reception, and more than ever determined to make his way northward.[24]

Governor D'Abbadie, suave and cooperative as always, told Pittman that if he could find passage up the Mississippi, he was certainly free to take it. The governor would support his request for transportation with any who might help him. Encouraged by D'Abbadie's apparent change of heart, Pittman gathered together a handful of Canadian voyageurs who were also seeking to ascend the river. Reading to them from a prepared statement, he indicated that his mission had D'Abbadie's blessing and assured them that it was his purpose "to find means of calming the savages in the Illinois, and giving the habitants a fair idea of the English who are going to reside among them, as to the liberty which the subjects of Great Britain enjoy, & of their laws whose justice the universe reveres & admires." Portraying himself as the bearer of "the amenities of peace," Pittman besought the Canadians to give him passage, to defend him from "the insults of the savages . . . & to take

Scranton was on a boom Wednesday night. We had a baptising, two weddings, a minstrel show, a dog fight and a drunken man knocked down, and still we live.

An advertisement should be shaped to represent the business it represents. It ought not to fit loosely over the proprietor's conscience in the least.

Mrs. L. W. O'Connell made a shipment last week of seven barrels of pecans from the grove of the "Oaks," her charming Pascagoula home.

H. P. Weiss (Chip), representing the New Orleans Picayune, paid Scranton a journalistic visit last Friday. He was looking as handsome as ever.

I hope you will do me the honor to make my house your home during your stay.—

Our frontiers are still infested by parties of Indians from whom I was so unfortunate as to receive two wounds on the 24th. Ulto.— My left arm is very much shattered and a slight wound in the right.— We suppose they were Creeks.—

A report has circulated here that your Government has been apprehensive of an invasion from our western Countries, but I have the satisfaction to assure you that nothing can be more groundless; such a measure would I think most certainly be disapproved of by the United States.—Mr. fagot the bearer of this Letter will be able to give you full Satisfaction with regard to this matter

I am Sir with sentiments of Esteem.

Inhabitants of Pascagoula to Carondelet

June 15, 1792 [34]

Governor and Intendant General: Joseph Krebs, resident of Pascagoulas, in the name of all the inhabitants from that river to the Bay Saint Louis: With all due respect to Your Lordship, they state and say that the continued presence of the Indian nations along this coast in their journeys to and from that capital results in considerable damage to them, not only in the crops which they raise for the maintenance of themselves and their poor families, but also in the cattle belonging to them which the Indians kill and wound; for it happens that when there are a number of head of cattle together at the time when they try to kill one to eat, they do not take the slightest precaution to select just one, but injure others with the shots of the guns they use. Consequently the loss is much greater for this reason.

In view of the above fact, the inhabitants humbly beg Your Lordship to take under consideration the dire situation in which they find themselves on account of the large number of their families and the slight recourse they have for their support by raising the animals, and provide the best measures, in accordance with your usual justice. They beg you to keep them from experiencing in the future the injuries named above, a favor which they hope to receive from Your Lordship's good judgment.

SEÑOR GOVERNOR: It is true that the inhabitants of Pascagoula suffer all the injuries and damage from the Indians which they report in this petition presented to Your Lordship. Upon leaving that town for their villages, the Indians are given three days' provision for the journey which they often use up before they set out on the march. Then, since the route to most of their villages is by way of the Pascagoula River they encounter the cattle there and kill them, as has been reported. This damage cannot be remedied except by depriving the Indians of the use of this route and by presenting them with gifts here or in Pensacola instead of at that capital. Only by these means can the inhabitants be assured that the Indians will not pass. Your Lordship will take such measures as may seem best to you.

Marie Louise Dupont based her claim to a piece of land (1 league square on the Pascagoula River) on a Spanish permit dated December 1, 1803. This Spanish grant was issued by Cayetano Perez and the land was not surveyed. Dupont claimed that the land had been cultivated and inhabited from 1774 - 1814. According to the information supplied previously by Building Conservation Technology, Inc., this is the plot on which the "Old Spanish Fort" stands.

The claim of Marie Louise Dupont is cited in the 1816 Register of Claims East of the Pearl River in American State Papers, Public Lands Section, Vol. 3, p. 11.

On June 10, 1815, William Crawford, Land Commissioner, provided "A List of Actual Settlers in the District East of Pearl River, Louisiana, Who Have No Claims Derived from Either the French, British or Spanish Governments." William Kirkwood was listed as having settled on the land originally belonging to Madame Dupont on the Pascagoula River. The date of Kirkwood's settlement there was given as November 1810 and the date of the original settlement was given as "1803 and cont. 2 years". Land Commissioner Crawford stated that few maps accompanied these settlers' claims, so the claims were difficult to particularize. This list also appears in Volume 3 of the American State Papers.

An examination of the inventory of colonial documents in the C 13 A series of the Archives Nationales in Paris yields the following information:

1. In March 1726 Merveilleux submitted a memoire to the French government concerning a fort on the Pascagoula River. (This was mentioned in the last report). New information is that this fort was supposed to be used for trade with the Chactas (Choctaw) Indians.

2. Sieurs De La Pointe and De La Vergne, residents of Pascagoula, had contracts with the Superior Council in 1725 to furnish lumber to Mobile.

Joseph Collins was appointed by Spanish Surveyor General Vicente Pintado to be the special surveyor of the Pascagoula post on April 22, 1806. The enclosed plan and legend is for 684 arpents granted to Collins in 1800. The plan shows a house and a mill. This land is in the vicinity of the Fish River. Perhaps with the use of scientific instruments and the old legend, the location of the house and mill could be more accurately determined. The "perch of the city of Paris" was about 100 English inches, but I have also seen it given as 200 English inches. The plan and legend are from the Pintado Papers at the Tulane University Special Collections Division.

In addition, much peripheral information has been located. This includes some twentieth century photographs of the Krebs house found in books. We also have at Tulane a manuscript Civil War record of a Joseph Krebs of Pascagoula.

Addendum: The Petit Larousse dictionary gives the "perch" measurement as 34.18 square metres.

Local News

The old Joseph H. Krebs homestead at the head of Krebs Avenue on the Pascagoula River, which has been recently purchased by Edward Mitchell, will shortly be demolished. The old mansion is a veritable landmark, having been erected 76 years ago. (built in 1819) The original walls, standing, were constructed of clay and moss, and the sills and frame of pitch pine were hewn by hand. The site was ~~fire~~ occupied by Peter Krebs, at which time a corn field extended from the river front to the present site of Fritz D. D. Becht's residence. In this house have been born Mrs. Cecile Sarrazin, Mrs. Yelverton and Jos. H. Krebs, the recent owners. The present owner will shortly erect a large and substantial wharf on the river front and a warehouse and other improvements.

Three banns announced.

François Krebs, son of deceased Hugues (Ernestus) Krebs and Marie Joseph (Simon dit) Lapointe, deceased.

Dame Helene Maurau (Moreau), widow of Jacques Lamy, deceased, daughter of Joseph Morau (Moreau), deceased, and Marie Jeanne Dauphin, deceased.

Witnesses mentioned: Corneille Macortin, Theodre Benoist.

Witnesses signing:[2] Th(eod)re Benoist, the bride of August 2, 1770; Cornelius McCurtin, the groom of March 24, (1778).

1. Although weddings were usually not allowed during the season of Advent, the couple was permitted to marry because bad weather had prevented an earlier arrival. Note that the three banns had already been published.

2. Salvador de la Esperanza signed the lower edges of this folio, recto and verso, and both sides of the following sheet, so marking the end of an era.

Spanish forces had entered the city of Mobile on March 12, 1780 (Mob. fb I: JDL Holmes transcript). Esperanza, who made the first Spanish entries in the church registers, had arrived with the troops. The British surrendered the fort on March 14.

Messrs. Chastang Senior, Dubroca and Duret old inhabitants of this Town, will certify in continuation herewith, what they may know relative to the possession of the premises above mentioned, and whether any other persons have any claim or title to the same.

(Signed) Griniarest

On this day the twelveth of December in the year of our Lord, one thousand seven hundred and eighty three, in compliance with an order of his Excellency Henry Grinarest Lieutenant Colonel of the Royal Armies, Political and Milatary Governor of Mobile and its Districts; We the undersigned do give upon our words of honor the following report: Round Island was in possession of the Widow Mrs. Maurau the mother of Widow Lanne wife of the petitioner without title for the same, in the year one thousand seven hundred and fifty two, and that we have no knowledge of any other person having claim or been possessed of the said Island.
(Signed) Chastang Senior - Dubroca - Duret

Henry Grinnarest, Political and Military Governor of this Town and its Dietricts, Lieuten ant Colonel of the Royal Armies.

By virtue of the power and authority conferred upon me by His Majesty, and in consideration of the preceding Memorial and the Certificate annexed thereto, I do by these presents grant unto the above named Francis Krebs an inhabitant of this Jurisdiction the entire and absolute property in and to Round Island, according to the prayer of petitioner, for his own proper use during his life, and after his death, to his lawful heirs, for the purposes of cultivation, raising Cattle, cutting wood, possessing the same as a place of residence, and for any other purpose which he may think proper; and f under the authority of this grant, he is permitted to take the immediate possession of said Island, and he is hereby recogni[sed] to be the only lawful owner of the same, to remain uninterrupted thereon by any person whatsoever; and that this grant may be perpetuated, it is ordered that the same be deposited in the Archives of this Government and that a certified copy duly authenticated in due form of law be given to the petitioner. Given at Mobile on the third day of December in the year of our Lord, one thousand seven hundred and eighty three. Signed with my hand and sealed with my armorial bearings.

(Signed) Henry Griniarest.

To his honor Henry Griniarest Leiutenant Colonel of Infantry Civil and Military Governor of the town of Mobile and its District & & &

James Marturin and Nicholas Careaux Inhabitants of this Jurisdiction humbly pray and wishes to make to your honor their most humble representations in order that you may be pleased to honor them with your Protection.

Your petitioners are desirous to establish and cultivate a piece of land lying and being at the Coast of Beloxy which has never been claimed by any person, bounded on the East by the mouth of the Bay of the old Fort, on the West by Lewis Bayan and on the South by the Sea; situated on a Point called Point of Dumanon, which said tract contains about Eight Arpens in front; and, the same being property belonging to the Royal Domain of his Catholic Majesty; I dare hope, that your honor will be pleased to grant to your petitioners the tract of land prayed as above. In acknowledgment of which, your petitioners shall not cease in offering promises to heaven for the preservation of your honor's days. We remain with profound respect and intirely submission, Sir, your most humble servants and subdue subjects.
Mobile twenty eight of April, one thousand seven hundred and eighty four.

Mark X of James Marturin. -

Let Messrs. Dubroca, Chastang, Seignor and Chastang Junior as old inhabitants residing in this place, report in continuation herewith, whether the land petitioned for has ever been in possession of any individuals which can allege a claim or right to the same either by them)25 ends) or any of their heirs. (Signed) Griniarest -

We the undersigned, do hereby certify that we have no knowledge of any person having any right or claim to the above tract of land. Mobile twenty eighth day of April one thousand seven hundred and eighty four. (Signed) Dubroca - - (Signed) Chastang Senior - - (Signed) Chastang Junior. - -

Henry Griniarest Lieutenant Colonel of Infantry, Civil and Military Governor of the Town of Mobile and its jurisdiction:

By virtue of the Powers which the King our Sovereign has conferred upon me; I grant and confirm unto the said James Marturin and Nicholas Careaux the eight arpens of land which they solicit in the preceding Memorial; that is to say, to James Mathurin the four arpens situated on the West, and to Nicholas Careaux the other four arpens adjoining thereto towards the East, which tract of land they shall enjoy during their life time, and after their death, to their lawful representatives, and the said land shall be used by them for cultivation, raising of Cattle, cutting wood and in establishing a Plantation thereon; and in virtue of this title, they can therefore entere in the enjoyment and possession of the said tract of land, and they shall be recognized as lawful owners thereof free from molestation by any person whatsoever in the course of their labours. - And in order that this grant may appear at all times, let it be deposited in the Archives of this Government, granting to the petitioners copies(of the same duly authenticated in due and legal form)of the same duly authenticated in due and legal form of law. Given at Mobile on the twenty eighth day of the month of April in the year of our Lord, one thousand seven hundred and eighty four, signed with my own hand and sealed with my Armorial Bearings. -

(Signed) Henry Griniarest

To his honor Peter de Favrot Captain of the Regiment of Louisiana, Civil and Military Governor of the Town of Mobile and its District.

John Courrege humbly prays, that he is desirous to make your honor, his humble representation, in order that you may be pleased to honor him with your protection.

Your petitioner is desirous to establish himself within this jurisdiction as an inhabitant, with the view to carry on the fishing trade between this place and New Orleans, and for this object, your petitioner could not select a better spot than that situated on the Bay Andrews running along Mobile point, which land has never been (26 ends) owned by any person and still belongs to the Domain of His Catholic Majesty; therefore, I dare to hope that your honor will be pleased to grant him the prayer of his petition and to allow him to built a house thereon immediately. In acknowledgment of your honor's goodness, he will not cease to offer promises to Heaven for the preservation of your honor's days, and of all those which will be dear to your honor. I remain with profound respect, Sir, your most humble and most subdue Servant. Mobile Eighth of August, one thousand seven hundred and eighty five. (Signed) John Courrege

The petitioner is hereby authorised to establish him self on the tract of land which he solicits, that is provisionally, without causing injury to any person, leaving the right of possession thereof to his Majesty the King, until a general regulation concerning the distribution of land, claims in this Country shall be established by the Superior Tribunal, or by any other person duly appointed for that purpose. Let a copy of this Document be made out, or a duplicate thereof, to be deposited in the Archives of this Province in evidence of the same.

(Signed) Favrot.

these presents , confirm and ratify in the his Royal name, to the said Antonio Bassot, the lot of ground described and designated in his representation, in order, that he may possess, enjoy and dispose of the same in absolute property, agreeably to the tenor of the Decree inserted in the title hereof, observing the conditions prescribed by the regulations concerning land claims. In faith whereof, we have ordered these presents to be despatched, signed with our hands, sealed with our Armorial bearings, and countersigned by the undersigned Secretary of this Government by his Majesty. Done in the City of New Orleans on the twelveth day of May in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and eighty six.

(SEAL) (Signed) Stephen Miro
By order of his most Excellent Sir-Andrez Lopez de Armesto.

The undersigned acknowledges to have sold for cash the lot and house above mentioned and described to Mr. Farge the transfer of which was executed in this office. New Orleans the thrity first day of July, one thousand seven hundred and eighty six.

KNOW ALL MEN BY THESE PRESENTS, that I, Joseph Gordon, of the Town of Mobile, do hereby give, grant, bargain and sell really and truly, to James Innerarity of the Town aforesaid, an island to me appertaining commonly known by the name of Round Island, having purchased the same of Francis Krebs of Pascagula, as will more fully and at large appear by deed executed in my favour before this Government Office, on the fourteenth day of the month of October in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and seven; lying and being about sixteen leagues distant from the island called Horn Island, containing about one league in length and a little less in width; and it is the same island which I sell to the above named James Innerarity free from encumbrance or mortgage, with all the improvements thereon, and they may be found at present, for and in consideration of the sum of five hundred dollars cash in hand well and truly paid by the purchaser, the receipt whereof I do hereby acknowledge, and myself therewith fully satisfied and contented; by virtue of which, I relinquish and desist myself of the right of property, possession, useful dominion and ownership which I have in and over the said Island, hereby ceding, renouncing and transferring the whole unto the purchaser or to his lawful representatives, that as true owner thereof, he may enjoy, possess, sell, alienate or dispose of the same at his will, in virtue of this deed which I make in his favour in token of real delivery, whereby it is shewn, that he has acquired possession of the premises aforesaid, without the necessity of any further proof with which I relieve him; and I bind myself to the eviction, security and warranty of this sale in due form of law, with my property present and future, with power and submission to the justices of his Majesty the King Ferdinand Seventh and clause of guarantee granted hereby as inserted so as to compel me to (363 ends) the fulfilment of the same, with the rigid of a sentence agreed and passed by a judgment without appeal, whereupon, I renounce the laws of my favour and defence, with the general law prohibiting the same.

And I the above named James Innerarity, being here present of the execution of this deed, do accept it in my favour, receiving therefrom as purchased the said Island called Round Island, for the sum, conditions, and in conformity as sold to me, acknowledging the same to be placed at my disposal, and grant a formal receipt and discharge in due form. In testimony whereof, the present is done at the Town of Mobile, on the tenth day of the month of March in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and nine.

I, Cayetano Perez, Captain of the Regiment of Louisiana Infantry, Civil and Military Commandant of this Town and its Jurisdiction, with two official witnesses acting with me for want of a regular Notary; do hereby certify, that I know the parties who have thus acknowledged and signed the foregoing, in presence of Michael Eslava, Diego Alvarez and Benjamin Dubroca instrumental witnesses.

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

To all to whom these presents shall come, Greeting:

Whereas there has been deposited in the General Land Office a certificate numbered Twenty of the Register and recorder of the Land Office at Augusta, Mississippi, with a plat of the Survey of the tract of land therein mentioned, whereby it appears that by the Act of Congress approved on the third day of March, one thousand eight hundred and nineteen entitled, " an act for adjusting the claims to land, and establishing Land Offices in the Districts East of the Island of New Orleans," the claim of Francisco Krebs entered as number Eighty nine in Abstract number three of Commissioner Crawford has been confirmed, and that the same has been surveyed and designated as Section Eleven Township Eight (South) of Range Six west and Section Eighteen in Township Eight (South) of Range Five West, containing together One thousand two hundred and sixty five acres and ten hundredths of an acre, in the District of lands subject to sale at Augusta in the State of Mississippi:

Now know ye, that the United States of America, in consideration of the premises, and in conformity with said Act of Congress have remised, released and forever quit-claimed and by these presents do remise release and forever quit-claim unto the said Francisco Krebs or his legal Representatives to his or thier heirs the said Land above described; subject to any just claim or claims to all and every part thereof, of all and every person or persons, bodies politic or corporate derived from the United States or from either the British, French or Spanish authorities; and notice to affect any valid right which may exist to the west half of the North West quart of Section seventeen in Township eight South of Range five west, in virtue of a sale of said quarter on the twenty second day of October one thousand eight hundred & thirty six to Ursin Baby.

To have and to hold the same, together with all the rights, privileges, immunities and appurtenances of whatsoever nature thereunto belonging, subject to any such just claim or claims as aforesaid, unto him the said Francisco Krebs or his legal representatives and to his or their heirs and--assigns forever; so that neither the United States or any person claiming under them, except as is provided in said Act and the Reservations aforesaid, may or can set up any any right or title thereto.

In testimony whereof, I, James K. Polk, President of the United States of America, have caused these Letters to be made Patent, and the seal of the General Land Office to be hereun affixed.

Given under my hand, at the City of Washington, the eighth day of April in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty Seven and of the Independence of the Unite States the seventy first.

In the Name of God, Amen.

I, FRANCOIS KREBS, of the County and State aforesaid, being somewhat indisposed in bodily health but of sound mind and disposing memory and understanding do make and ordain this my last will and testament in the manner and form following:

First: I resign unto Almighty God my soul hoping for salvation through the mediation of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, my body I trust to my trusty friend, Executor of this my last will and testament, my body to be decently buried under his direction.

Item 1st: I do appoint my true and trusty friend ANTOINE KREBS my executor to this my last will and testament.

Item 2nd: I give and bequeath unto Antoine Krebs all my real estate consisting of all my land, messuages and tenements of which I am now possessed, to have and to hold unto Antoine Krebs, his heirs & assigns forever.

Item 3rd: I give unto ANTOINE KREBS, ELIC KREBS, BRAZILE KREBS, GLAUDIUS MERRILUS, Jackson County, and POLITE KREBS of Pensacola in West Florida all my stock of cattle, household & kitchen furniture and all my negro slaves together with all my personal property of whatever description I am now possessed to be equally divided, share alike between them.

Item 4th: I give unto my Negro woman named MARIE FRANCES and her children their freedom during their life times and request that my executor of this my last will and testament (Mr. Antonio Krebs) will use his best effort to have them emancipated.

In testimony whereof I have this day set my hand and Seal in the presence of the undersigned. Witnesseth the eleventh day of February in the year of Our Lord One thousand eight hundred and twenty two.

Three banns announced.

François Krebs, son of deceased Hugues (Ernestus) Krebs and Marie Joseph (Simon dit) Lapointe, deceased.

Dame Helene Maurau (Moreau), widow of Jacques Lamy, deceased, daughter of Joseph Morau (Moreau), deceased, and Marie Jeanne Dauphin, deceased.

Witnesses mentioned: Corneille Macortin, Theodre Benoist.

Witnesses signing:[2] Th(eod)re Benoist, the bride of August 2, 1770; Cornelius McCurtin, the groom of March 24, (1778).

1. Although weddings were usually not allowed during the season of Advent, the couple was permitted to marry because bad weather had prevented an earlier arrival. Note that the three banns had already been published.

2. Salvador de la Esperanza signed the lower edges of this folio, recto and verso, and both sides of the following sheet, so marking the end of an era.

Spanish forces had entered the city of Mobile on March 12, 1780 (Mob. fb I: JDL Holmes transcript). Esperanza, who made the first Spanish entries in the church registers, had arrived with the troops. The British surrendered the fort on March 14.

MARIE LOUISE de BELLEISLE

This is your great-great-great-great-great-great-grandmother, from whom you have derived 1/256 of your blood.

We know very little about her but her name. There is reason to believe that she could have been married in Chaumont Castle on the Loire, but that is hardly provable.

Since her daughter was married in 1735, it is reasonable to believe that she must have been born about 1695 or earlier, and since her husband, Joseph Simon de LaPointe was a widower and remarried in Biloxi in 1723, it is reasonable to believe that she died in 1720 or earlier.

We do not know if she had any children other than your ancestor, whose marriage is recorded in the Mobile Church Records, a succinct note of which has been published as follows:

> "In 1735 Marie Josephe Simon de LaPointe, daughter of Joseph Simon de LaPointe and his wife Marie Louise de Belleisle, married Baron Hugo Ernestus von Krebs."

In 1874, Emma Louisa Laurendine Ford Sands undertook the support of her family -- invalid husband Charles Felix Senac Sands, who had sustained War injuries, and four young children.

Family tradition says that Emma had been banished to the Conservatory of Music in Leipzig, Germany, when she was fifteen years old in order to put an ocean between her and young Charlie because parents Ford considered their daughter too young to accept his proposal of marriage. Emma had taken a degree in music at Leipzig and returned to Mobile to marry C. F. S. Sands on November 25, 1857. She had occasionally given piano lessons to the children of friends. Why she chose in 1874, when she was forty-one years old, to earn money by applying her skills in operating her "Singers Machine" rather than resuming music lessons is not recorded. Certainly it was not lack of musical talent, for she remained a powerful pianist well into her eighties.

Here reproduced from the back pages of her cooking note book is a list, partial, of her patrons. The entries are headed "Money Made from Singers Machine" and dated "From Feb. 14, 1874." Since, with few exceptions, the names are all recognizable as those of relatives, it is evident that the family rallied around to commission their determined young kinswoman.

Present members of the Krebs family may be interested to note that a "drefs" was made for a "Mifs C. Krebs," who would have been one of Charles Felix' cousins.

LOUIS NARBONN MARIE LOUISE

Louis Narbonn and Marie Louise Narbonn were named as the parents of Antoine Narbonne at his marriage to Marie Louise Dinant in Mobile on June 17, 1764. Marie Louise's maiden name was not readable. The Parish records state that he was born in Sainte Catherine Parish in Agen, Guyenne, France. However, Sainte Catherine is in a small town outside of Agen.[1]

AGEN

Agen dates back to the Roman era when it was called Aginnum. It was in the country called Nitiobriges in ancient Gaul, and Ceasar made reference to it. St. Foy converted the region to Christianity in the 4th century. The area which was known as Agenais or Guinne belonged to Eleanor of Aquitane and came under British rule when she married Henry Plantagenet in 1152. It was subsequently a contested area until it came under the rule of the French king in 1615. In the Middle Ages it became an agricultural center and remains so. It is famous for its prunes known as pruneaux d'Agen. Agen prunes were taken on the Crusades. The area has had many phases of depopulation and emigration. Agen is now in the Department of Lot-et-Garonne.

The map of Agen in 1648 is approximately 75 years before the birth of Louis and Marie Louise Narbonn.

Know all men by these presents that I [illegible]
Dn Anthony Narbonne Captain of the Army, inhabitant of this place acknowledge that I sell bona fide & effectually, to Francis Alexander Inhabitant of the same place, two lots adjoining to each other which both together contain one hundred & twenty five feet front, by the ordinary depth of one hundred & twenty together with two old cabins upon them situate in Royal Street, fronting South on St Francis Street, & bounded on the North by a lot belonging to the Interpreter Simon Favre, they being the same that fell to my lot, in the partition of the property of my late husband Narbonne; And I sell them free from incumbrance and mortgage, in order that he may make what use of them he shall think proper for & in consideration of the sum of sixty dollars to me cash in hand paid the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, and the delivery not being present, I renounce the law of the non numerata pecunia & others that speak of this precise circumstance; wherefore I give up & relinquish all right, title & claim which to the said lots I had & sell, all of which together with the ownership & possession, I yield & renounce in favor of the purchaser, his heirs & assigns, in order that as his own he may possess, sell, exchange, or alienate them at pleasure, by virtue of this deed of conveyance which in his favor, I execute in sign of real delivery, by which he may be seen to have acquired legal possession without the necessity of any other proof from which I exempt him, and I oblige myself to guarantee the legality of this sale in every lawful form, to the extent of all property present & to come, and I renounce the laws in my favor with the general that forbids it; And I the said Francis Alexander being present at the passing of this deed of conveyance, accept by means of it the purchase of the before mentioned lots with the three cabins thereon, for the sum & on the conditions herein before agreed upon & expressed, with which I acknowledge myself to be satisfied; In testimony whereof this writing is passed in the town of Mobile, this thirteenth day of April 1798. And I Dn Manuel de Lanzos, Captain of the Army, Military & political Commandant of the said place, accompanied by two witnesses of assistance, certify that the parties have signed as above.
Witnesses present, Dn Miguel Eslava Dn James de la Sausaye & Dn Diego

Dear Betty:

I promised you I would send an updated copy of the Krebs Family Tree (Hilaire's branch). My cousin, Harry Lee Krebs, gave me this, and I have added as many dates as I could find, and added the names to Harry Joseph Krebs (my grandfather).

Thanks for your help when we were there in October.

Sincerely,

Marguerite N. Taylor (Rita)

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, COUNTY OF JACKSON

In the name of God amen. I, René Krebs living in the county and state above mentioned and possessing perfectly both my judgement and all my memory, I make, order dictate and declare my testament in the following manner and in the form hereinafter descreed expressing my last will.

I resign my soul to allmighty God, hoping that my sins will be forgiven through the merit and the mediation of our Lord Jesus Christ and my body I resign to the earth to be buried there according to the preferences of my testamentary executors hereafter named and the goods of this world that God has confided to me I have disposed and I give the, as follows, to be divided, shared, distributed and alotted after my death in the manner I have desired. (I have desired... It looks as though this were intended. But the form is ungrammatical and unintelligible)

1. I will, I order and declare and my will is that the three slaves; Zepherin, Constance and Bonne shall belong to Marie, my wife, as property coming from her mother, Madame Dupont.

I wish, I order and my will is also that the property known as the residence of Mme Dupont, mother of Marie my wife, belongs also to Marie, my wife, as property descending from her mother; the sale of the said three slaves and of the said residence having been passed to my name at the time of probate of the estate of Mme Dupont.

2. I will, I order and my will is that my residence on the banks of the Pascagoula river, which I occupy at present, be given in a life estate (en jouissance) for her life time to Marie my wife.

3. I will, I order, and my will is that my boat Zulime not be sold for a year after my death or longer, if my executors think that the said boat con continue to navigate with advantage and my will is that the income from the boat during this extent of time be remitted to Marie, my wife.

4. I will, I order and my will is that all the rest of my property be sold, the half of the product of that sale I bequeath and I give to Marie, my wife, as having two children to rear of whom I leave her guardian and tutrice. The other half of the said property, I will and my will is that it be divided equally among all my heirs. I wil also and such is my will, that Marie, my wife be guardian of Nathalie, my grand-daughter (daughter of my son) of whom I am the guardian.

5. I will and I order that on the properties of which I make disposition in the preceding articles there be levied the sum sufficient for my executors to acquit, pay and liquidate all my just debts and every sort of expense which they will have been obliged to incur for the execution of this my present will and testament.

6. I will and I order that the executors of this my present will and testament (which contains my last will relatively to the division and the distribution which I intend, is to be made of my property and which my executors will carry out immediately after my body is consigned to the earth.

By virtue of
The formalities required by the law of this state concerning wills and by these precents I choose and name my two sons-in-law Hilaire Krebs and J. E. Sarrazin executors of my last will and testament.

In testimony of which, I René Krebs, I have apposed my signature and my seal this 16th day of November, of the year of our Lord Jesus Christ, one thousand eight hundred fifty-one.

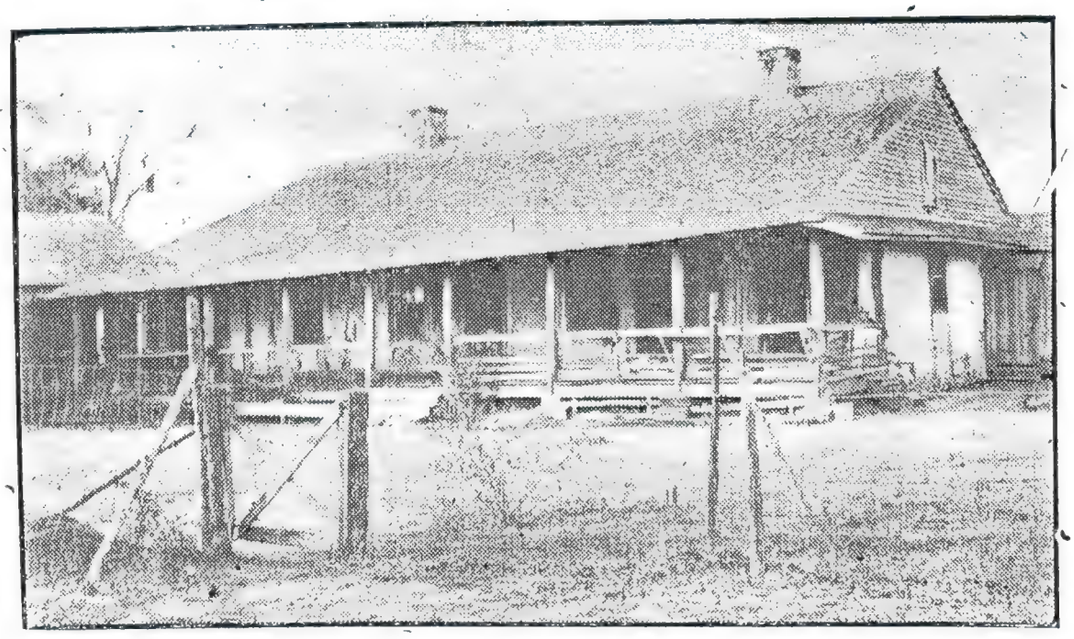
Hilaire Krebs Home Pre-Civil War Pascagoula, Mississippi

Old Spanish Fort, Built in 1721



This Old Fort, Erected in 1721 by French Troops Under Sieur Joseph de la Pointe, Admiral of Bienville's Fleet, Still Standing on Krebs Lake, This City.

Standing in a romantic spot in the upper part of the city, on the shores of and facing Krebs Lake, is what is known as the "Old Spanish Fort," a building over two hundred years old, but still in a fair state of preservation, and still occupied, as it has been for these two hundred years, as a residence. The name, the "Old Spanish Fort" is a misnomer, as it was built by the French—under Sieur Joseph de la Pointe as a protection against the Indians and Spanish troops.

De la Pointe was an admiral in Bienville's fleet which was maintained on Chatahoula Lake, now Krebs Lake, to protect the royal concessions of the Duchess de Chaumont at Pascagoula. He arrived in the Bay of Biloxi in 1710, and established a naval base on Dauphin Island, where he resided with his wife, Madame la Marquise Marie Louise de Belle Isle. In 1721 de la Pointe was commissioned by the French government to erect the fort as a protection against incursions of the Indians.

In the same year the Duchess de Chaumont, mother of de la Pointe's wife, sent a fleet of five vessels with colonists and slaves for the colonization of the French Province of Louisiana, of which the Gulf Coast section of Mississippi was then a part. During the period of Spanish domination of this section the fort was taken by the Spanish government and was occupied both as a fort and as a chateau by de Henrique Grinarest, a lieutenant-colonel of the royal armies of Spain, and who afterwards married a granddaughter of de la Pointe. It is presumed that here is where the fort received its name of Spanish Fort, although it had been built by the French.

At this time the lake on the shores of which the fort had been erected was called Lake Chatahoula. Upon the arrival from Germany of Baron Hugh von Krebs, he became possessed of the land surrounding the lake, the name of the lake was changed to Krebs Lake and so has been known ever since. The exact date of Hugh Kreb's arrival is not known to this writer. He married Marie Jeanne, a daughter of de la Pointe, and was the progenitor of the long line of Krebs that have lived and reared families in this section for these two hundred years. Many descendents of Baron Von Krebs are still living all over the south.

Old historical narratives relate that Baron Krebs lived in these shores like a feudal lord. He had a splendid plantation, had slaves by the hundreds, raised cotton, rice, indigo and other products for export, and was surrounded by every luxury that a country gentleman could have in that day and time.

It is said that Baron Krebs and his wife moved from Pascagoula to Mobile and erected a dwelling there which is still standing, a quaint old building at the northwest corner of Conti and Hamilton streets. It was in this old colonial home that General Andrew Jackson is said to have been entertained while stationed at Mobile, by Joseph Krebs, a descendent of Baron Krebs.

The Old Spanish Fort is a comfortable, hospitable-looking home. Little changes have been made in its appearance all these years, and it stands as a testimonial of the thoroughness with which houses were erected in those days and as to the durability of the material that went into it. Many houses that were built years after it have rotted and fallen apart, but its old cement walls and hewn timber beams look as though they may be as enduring as the everlasting hills. Many generations of the Krebs family have occupied its walls hallowed by the memory of a romantic past, and even at this writing, it is used as a summer residence by Mr. Jules Johnson of Mobile, one of the many descendents of that hardy pioneer Baron whose name is perpetuated in this city by a Lake and one of our business thoroughfares, Krebs avenue.

Technical University. They will take up their school work on September 17.

Misses Nell and Anne Kell, Frances Jane, Margaret Woodward and Mary Evans will leave Sunday morning for Columbus, Miss., where they will enter the Mississippi State College for Women. Misses Nell Kell and Frances Jane attended the college last session, but the other young women will matriculate for the first time and enter the freshman class.

The A. & M. College will get at least two young men from Pascagoula this season, Hubert Grant and Heberdon Shepard. These men will leave next week to be on hand at the opening of college.

J. S. Abbey, Jr., will attend the Hinds County High School in Raymond this winter.

The experiment of having the preaching service and the Sunday school at the same hour at the Methodist church worked so well last Sunday, despite the rain, that the same program will continue until further notice. Under the new plan the church service will commence at 9:30 in the morning, continue for forty-five minutes, then the Sunday school will follow.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Hall are receiving congratulations on the arrival of a girl. The young lady has been named Florence, for her mother, and has decided to remain permanently. She is receiving much attention from two sets of grandparents.

Mr. Elbert E. Lancaster and Miss Margaret H. Muntz, both of Mobile, were married last Saturday at the Methodist parsonage in this city, Rev. Jas. W. Sells officiating.

Unfulfilled Prophecy

Joseph Jefferson, celebrated actor, believed he would be remembered by posterity as a painter rather than for his stage triumphs. One day, toward the end of his life, he was showing William H. Crane—Mr. Crane relates the incident in "Footprints and Echoes"—a painting he had just finished.

"Do you know, William," he said, "I think that whatever lasting fame will be mine when I am gone, will come through my brush and not through anything I have done on the stage."

"I don't suppose," comments Crane, "anyone looks at Jefferson's paintings today, or even remembers that he was a painter."

1851 fg 1-

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, COUNTY OF JACKSON

In the name of God amen. I, René Krebs living in the county and state above mentioned and possessing perfectly both my judgement and all my memory, I make, order dictate and declare my testament in the following manner and in the form hereinafter descreed expressing my last will.

I resign my soul to allmighty God, hoping that my sins will be forgiven through the merit and the mediation of our Lord Jesus Christ and my body I resign to the earth to be buried there according to the preferences of my testamentary executors hereafter named and the goods of this world that God has confided to me I have disposed and I give the, as follows, to be divided, shared, distributed and alotted after my death in the manner I have desired. (I have desired... It looks as though this were intended. But the form is ungrammatical and unintelligible)

1. I will, I order and declare and my will is that the three slaves; Zepherin, Constance and Bonne shall belong to Marie, my wife, as property coming from her mother, Madame Dupont.

I wish, I order and my will is also that the property known as the residence of Mme Dupont, mother of Marie my wife, belongs also to Marie, my wife, as property descending from her mother; the sale of the said three slaves and of the said residence having been passed to my name at the time of probate of the estate of Mme Dupont.

2. I will, I order and my will is that my residence on the banks of the Pascagoula river, which I occupy at present, be given in a life estate (en jouissance) for her life time to Marie my wife.

3. I will, I order, and my will is that my boat Zulime not be sold for a year after my death or longer, if my executors think that the said boat con continue to navigate with advantage and my will is that the income from the boat during this extent of time be remitted to Marie, my wife.

4. I will, I order and my will is that all the rest of my property be sold, the half of the product of that sale I bequeath and I give to Marie, my wife, as having two children to rear of whom I leave her guardian and tutrice. The other half of the said property, I will and my will is that it be divided equally among all my heirs. I wil also and such is my will, that Marie, my wife be guardian of Nashalie, my grand-daughter (daughter of my son) of whom I am the guardian.

5. I will and I order that on the properties of which I make disposition in the preceding articles there be levied the sum sufficient for my executors to acquit, pay and liquidate all my just debts and every sort of expense which they will have been obliged to incur for the execution of this my present will and testament.

6. I will and I order that the executors of this my present will and testament (which contains my last will relatively to the division and the distribution which I intend, is to be made of my property and which my executors will carry out immediately after my body is consigned to the earth.

By virtue of

The formalities required by the law of this state concerning wills and by these precents I choose and name my two sons-in-law Hilaire Krebs and J. E. Sarrazin executors of my last will and testament.

In testimony of which, I René Krebs, I have apposed my signature and my seal this 16th day of November, of the year of our Lord Jesus Christ, one thousand eight hundred fifty-one.

Joseph Simon dit La Pointe[1]
By Robert de Berardinis, OMPL

Joseph Simon dit La Pointe, the first permanent European settler of Mississippi in 1715,[2] began life in a banlieu (suburb) of Québec in Nouvelle France (Canada) about 1672, the fourth son of Hubert Simon dit La Pointe and Marie Viez de la Mothe.[3] His parents were married 27 NOV 1659 at Notre Dame Cathedral, Québec[4] after obtaining their marriage contract 23 NOV 1659 from notary Guillaume Audouart.[5] The marriage contract and marriage act describe Hubert Simon as the son of Guillaume Simon and Sébastienne Doublez and his birthplace as the village of Taverny (northwest of Paris), Départment de Val d'Oise.[6] The parents of Marie Viez are given as Robert Viez de la Mothe, first sergeant in the "Guards regiment" which was one of the two "bodyguard" regiments for the French monarchs and royal family,[7] and Sainte Paulin.[8] Marie Viez's parentage is further substantiated by the marriage contracts and marriage acts of Marie Viez de la Mothe's sister, Marie-Sainte,[9] and half-sister, Marguérite (le) Breton.[10] Most likely, although no documentation exists to support this assumption, the sisters came to Canada as filles du roi, or "daughters of the king."[11] Joseph received confirmation on 26 MAY1681 at Notre-Dame de Québec.[12] Hubert Simon was a successful merchant and fur trader who was buried at the recorded age of 78 years 18 NOV 1704.[13] Marie Viez de la Mothe predeceased her husband on 26 MAY 1682 at the hospital, Hôtel Dieu, in Québec, and was buried the same day.[14]

Next, Joseph and his brother Ignace[15] were at Rochefort, France on 25 AUG 1699[16] ready to join in the establishment of a permanent French colony on the Gulf Coast at Fort Maurepas. Joseph and Ignace do not appear on the list of inhabitants of December, 1699,[17] and it appears likely that they returned to Rochefort. In any case, the two brothers were back at Fort Maurepas by May 1, 1700.[18] From a historical perspective, Joseph Simon's life in the early Louisiana colony appears not to have been particularly remarkable, and there is no mention of him by name in any of the contemporary journals dealing with Fort Maurepas (d'Iberville, de Sauvole, and du Ru).[19] As a group, the Canadians, and perhaps Simon as well, were judged very critically by their European "superiors." Descriptions of their behavior at Fort Maurepas were anything but laudatory. The "metropolitan" French view towards the Canadian pioneers is useful in illustrating the growing differences between the society in the new world and its parent society. Describing the work habits of the Canadians, de Sauvole said,

> [1700] Why do they leave their country, why does one see them straying in this territory and elsewhere, if it is not to avoid work and not to be subject to anyone at all?…I can testify that for the least work, it is necessary for me, myself, to go get them from their bedding, and not leave them until the work that they had was finished.[20]

Jesuit Priest Paul du Ru gave an interesting comparison between the new and old worlds,

> March 14 (1700). It is hard to get our people together…Today is Sunday and it was necessary to have Mass very early so that all of the parishioners can attend. Several men carried on boisterously during the Mass and I became indignant…French customs mean little to the Canadians, and they are more lawless than the others. Most of them bring from Canada a certain spirit of presumption which often degenerates into brutality, but what makes them difficult to control is the spirit of freedom which they acquire in the forest where they have no master over them and they follow their own caprice.[21]

Whether or not the characterizations in the preceding passages applied to Joseph Simon is, of course, pure speculation. It does seem likely that an independence of spirit, adaptation to a new world, and a sense of mastery over one's own fate would have been very common traits among this group, Simon included. It is likely that Joseph took a wife in La Rochelle between 1698 and 1704, although the actual date is unknown. Joseph married Marie Catherine Foucault, most likely after his early voyages to Ft. Maurepas, judging from the birth and marriage dates of his children.[22]

What is known about Joseph Simon, the man, must be culled from the large body of records that exist for both early Louisiana and La Rochelle. To begin with there has been some confusion caused by the fact that there were three Joseph Simons, all related: Joseph, the subject of this article; his son, Joseph Simon dit La Pointe;[23] and his nephew, Joseph Simon dit Deshéberts, sometimes dit Lapointe Deshéberts.[24] All three lived in La Rochelle and all three were merchant traders. During the early foundation of Fort Louis de la Louisiane, another brother, Jacques,[25] came to Mobile. The story of Joseph and his brothers is similar to that of the well documented case of the Chauvin brothers (also Canadians). Joseph and his brothers, Ignace, Jacques, and Augustin,[26] like the Chauvins, came very early during the development of the Louisiana province. Joseph was well established by 1705.[27] La Vente, the backer of the Chauvin brothers, may have been involved with Joseph as well.[28] Between 1705 and 1711, Joseph is identified as a resident on Massacre Island.[29] By 1711, Joseph is again a resident of Mobile.[30]

With his receipt of the Fish River Grant, Joseph now settles on the Pascagoula River. In the grant, Joseph is identified as living "on Dauphin Island" and receiving a tract of land "one league by one league" on the east side of Pascagoula Bay for the purpose of raising cattle a minimum of "two years." In addition, the King retained the timber rights to the tract. He is next identified as a cattle rancher in the 1721 census.[31] He is further identified as being in residence at Pascagoula in a report of Louis Tixerant, garde du magasin de la Compagnie des Indes à Biloxy, in 1722.[32] It is during this period, 1718 to 1722, when Biloxi was re-established as the capital of the province, that some confusion began, which has continued to the present day, regarding the neighboring immense Chaumont concession, its owners, and any familial relationship between Joseph and the owners.[33] Giraud proves that it is not the family of the duc de Chaumont-Quitry (the only ducs of Chaumont at any time in France) who held the concession, but one of John Law's earliest financial investors, Antoine Chaumont.[34] Joseph is identified also as being present in Pascagoula in the censuses of 1725 and 1726.[35] It is well documented that he regularly traveled between La Rochelle and the province of Louisiana as a merchant.[36] His ship, l'Andromède (the Andromeda), in particular, received a subsidy from the King for carrying supplies to the colony.[37]

By 1723, Joseph was a widower and remarried Catherine Douccin, widow of Louis Vinconneau and a native of La Rochelle.[38] That same year he saw his daughter Elizabeth marry Jean-Baptiste La Prade, although she was to die before 1730.[39] In addition, Joseph's nephew, Louis Lavergne (son of his sister Marie Anne and her husband Louis Lavergne) arrived by 1723 and was in business with him selling lumber to Mobile.[40] It was about 1730 or so (the marriage act not being extant) that his daughter, Marie Josephe, married Hugo Ernestus Krebs, and she died in 1751.[41] Joseph's daughter,

Marie Jeanne, married Pierre Étienne Milon before 1736,[42] and after Pierre's death, François Barbet dit St. Michel in 1747.[43] Marie Jeanne married for a third time Augustin Rochon[44] and died in 1764.[45] Of Joseph's daughter with Catherine Douccin, nothing further is known. Therefore, it is reasonable to assume that she died young and without posterity. Although the exact date of Joseph's death is not known, it is known that he is dead by 1747.[46] His second known wife, Catherine Douccin, died on 30 MAR 1752.[47]

[7] There were two "Guards" regiments which guarded the French royal family, régiment des gardes-françoises and régiment des gardes-suisses. For more on the gardes-françoises, see Régiement general du roi pour le regiment de ses Gardes françoises (Paris: l'Imprimerie royale, 1757). It is more likely, though undocumented by the Service historique de l'armée de terre of the French Army, that Robert Viez de la Mothe was a member of the gardes françoises. Its membership, even in the non-commissioned officer ranks was limited to the elite of France, for example, the colonel of the regiment in 1766 was le Maréchal, duc de Biron, pair de France and commandeur des ordres du Roi.

[8] See Notes 5 and 6, supra. Due to the destruction of the City Hall in Paris in 1871, most of the registres parroissaux and états-civils of Paris were destroyed. Thus, the ancestry of Marie Viez de la Mothe probably may not be able to be proven beyond this information. Only the marriage contract carries the information regarding her father's position, the same situation applies to her sister, Marie-Sainte, in Note 9, infra.

[9] See the "Contrat de marriage de Jean Poytras (Poydras) et Marie-Sainte Vier," Pierre-Georges Roy, Inventaire, vol. 5, p. 138, and vol. 6, p. 109; also, see the "Mariage of Jean Poidras and Marie-Sainte Vies," 27 AUG 1664, Notre-Dame de Québec, Charbonneau and Légaré, Répetoire, vol. 1, p. 250; also, see "POITRAS ou Poidras, Jean," Jetté, Dictionnaire, pp. 933-34. The parentages (filiations) given in the preceding are identical to those of Marie Viez de la Mothe.

[10] See the "Contrat de marriage de Nicolas Patenaude (Paternostre) et Marguérite Breton," Pierre-Georges Roy, Inventaire, vol. 5, p. 84, and vol. 1, p. 236; also, see the "Mariage de Nicolas Patenostre et Marguérite Breton," 30 OCT 1651, Notre-Dame de Québec, Charbonneau and Légaré, Répetoire, vol. 1, p. 236; also, see "PATENAUDE ou Patenostre, Nicolas," Jetté, Dictionnaire, p. 881. The mother of Marguérite is Sainte-Paulin which is identical to the mothers given in Notes 5, 6, and 8, supra. Hereafter, the reader may infer correctly the parentages (filiations) given in the sacramental record will match with proposed family relationship.

[11] This suggestion is made due to the fact the sisters have come to Canada to get married, are literate (see their individual marriage acts for signatures), and come from "nice" families. For more on this subject, see Colette Piat, Les filles du roi (Monaco: Éditions du Rocher, 1998), Silvio Dumas Les filles du roi en Nouvelle-France; etude historique avec répetoire biographique, series Cahiers d'histoire, No. 24 (Québec: Société Historique de Québec, 1972), or in a more abbreviated form (in English), Elmer Courteau, The King's Daughters (Sparta, WI: J. Reisinger, 1976). The author suggests care in using Yves Landry, Les filles du roi au XVIIe siècle: orphelines en France, pionnières au Canada; suivi d'un répetoire biographique des filles du roi (Montréal: Leméac, 1992).

[14] See the "Sépultre de Marie Viez," 26 MAY 1682, Notre-Dame de Québec, Charbonneau and Légaré, Répetoire, vol. 1, p. 342; also, see Jetté, ibid. Although Charbonneau and Légaré list her date of death as 25 MAY 1682, there is nothing in the act to suggest she died on 25 May 1682. Translation of the act follows:

> The twenty-sixth of May, 1682, Marie Viez, wife of Hubert Simon dit La Pointe residents of the Cape St. Michel, aged 40 years or so deceased in the communion of our Holy Mother Church in the hospital room [Hôtel Dieu]of this city after having received the holy sacraments of penitence for life and of extreme unction. The body was buried the twenty-sixth of the present month and I was assisted in her burial by François de Laval and Estienne Volant who have signed [as witnesses].

[15] See the "Baptême d'Ignace Simon dit La Pointe," 10 FEB 1674, Notre-Dame de Québec, Charbonneau and Légaré, Répetoire, vol. 1, p. 93; also, see Jetté, Dictionnaire, p. 1050. Jetté gives St-Michel à Sillery as the place of baptism (in error) although the dates are correct. The parents listed are Hubert Simon and Marie Viez de la Mothe. Also, see the family listing of Hubert Simon and Marie Viez de la Mothe in "Ménage 16, Rencensement de 1681," Charbonneau and Légaré, Répetoire, vol. 6, p. 245.

[22] Letter from Archives départementales de Charente-Maritime to author. The original sacramental registers of this particular parish of St. Jean in La Rochelle of the relevant period are now lost, but a table of baptisms remain (decennial dates only), now in the custody of the archives. For more on his wife's name, see Notes 39 and 43, infra. Also see, J. F. Bosher, The Canada Merchants, 1713-1763 (Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1987), p. 66. He states (without giving archival citation) that when Simon Lapointe [sic] married, he "brought only 3,000 livres to a marriage while his wife brought no more than 8,000 livres."

[23] See Note 22, supra; also, see J. F. Bosher, Canada Merchants, pp. 30, 187-88, 198. >From Note 24, infra, and knowing that Joseph, son of Hubert, was dead by 1747, the other Joseph Simon La Pointe in La Rochelle must be his son. In addition, since Catherine Douccin, identified as widow La Pointe died in 1752 (see Note 47, infra), the other widow La Pointe must be the daughter-in-law.

[24] See the "Mariage de Simon et Bultel," 5Mi.1317/3; Périgny, paroisse de St-Cybard, 05.10.1722, "...Joseph Simon Desheberts, negotian...en la nouvelle France...et dam'lle Magdeleine Bultel, fille du Sieur Jean Bultel, paroissien de St-Sauveur, marchand, et de dame Magdeleine Guyas conjoint, ses pere et mere..." Also, see the "Mariage de Simon et Bultel," 5Mi.1104-3; GG.591, La Rochelle, paroisse de St-Sauveur, Archives départementales de Charente-Maritime, 05.10.1722, "...la benediction nuptialle le Sieur Joseph Simon desherberts, négotien demeurant en la ville de La Rochelle, fils de sr Guillaume Simon et de damoiselle Catherine Drouin..." The second act mentions that it is en extract of the original from Périgny. See the "Baptême de Guillaume Simon," Notre-Dame de Québec, Charbonneau and Légaré, Répetoire, vol. 1, p. 43; also, see the "Mariage de Guillaume Simon et Catherine Drouhin," 17 NOV 1688, Charbonneau and Légaré, Répetoire, vol. 2, p. 67; and Jetté, Dictionnaire, pp. 1050-51. Although there is no known baptism of Guillaume's son "Joseph," it may be safely assumed based on the lack of subsequent records in Canada for his son, "Prisque," (born 22 FEB 1702), that "Prisque" is "Joseph." The confusion over names is further exemplified with the following act, "Baptême de Madeleine Deshéberts La Pointe," 5Mi.1104/3; GG.592, La Rochelle, paroisse de St-Sauveur, Archives départementales de Charente-Maritime, 18.09.1723, "...a esté baptisée Madeleine, née le seizieme dudit mois et an, fille legitime du sieur Simon Des heberts dit La Pointe, marchand, et de Madeleine Bultel, son epouse...le pere est absent. [Signatures follow]"

Again, the parentages of Jacques are Hubert Simon and Marie Viez de la Mothe. Also, see the family listing of Hubert Simon and Marie Viez de la Mothe in "Ménage 16, Rencensement de 1681," Charbonneau and Légaré, Répetoire, vol. 6, p. 245.

[33] It has been claimed that Mme. (sometimes duchesses) Chaumont was Joseph's aunt. See Cyril Cain, comp., Four Centuries on the Pascagoula 4 vols. (Spartanburg, SC: The Reprint Company, 1983), vol. 1, History Story and Legend of the Pascagoula River Country, p. 4 (citation not given). Mme. Chaumont, or Marie Catherine Barré (see Marcel Giraud, Histoire, vol. 3, L'Époque de John Law 1717-1720, pp. 33-5, 216-17) could only be an "aunt" in an "in-law" relationship, i.e., the aunt of Joseph's wife, Marie Catherine Foucault. Since the family names of all of Joseph's grandparents are known, this is the only path available for any familial relationship. Also, see Note 22, supra.

Elizabeth's parents are identified as "...Sieur Joseph Simon, native of Québec, lately a resident of this colony, and Marie Foucault, her [Elizabeth Simon's] parents, by me, F. F. Caston, reverend chaplain of the vessel "Le Profond", they waited because there wasn't a chaplain in their area [Pascagoula] nor at the port of Ft. Louis also called Biloxi, and the minute it was over I was sent to Reverend Father Raphaël de Luxembourg, Curé of New Orleans, grand vicar of Monseigneur, the bishop of Québec. March 1, 1734

One bann published, dispensed with two.

Jean Baptiste Baudrau, Creole of Dauphine Island, son of Jean Baptiste Baudreau dit Graveline, militia captain and habitant of the Pascagoula post, and of Susanne.

Marie Catherine Vinconneau of La Rochelle, daughter of Louis Vinconneau (deceased), a master tailor of wearing apparel, and of Catherine Doussin, who is now married to Joseph Simon dit la Pointe, habitant of Pascagoula.[2]

Witnesses signing were: Jean Baptiste Baudrau, father of the groom; (Charles) Egron (dit La Motte); (C)ristian (possibly Christian Ladner); (François) Rilieux, spouse of Marie Renée Alexandre dit Chenet; N(icolas) Bodin (dit Miragouin); Pierre Millon (son-in-law of Joseph Simon); (Nicolas?) Rouss(au?), resident of Dauphine Island in the 1730s who later moved to Louisiana's German Coast.

Father Mathias, Capuchin priest and apostolic missionary, was functioning as curé at Fort Condé of Mobile and of Pascagoula, its dependency.

1. The Mobile diocesan archivist recently notified this writer that this folio is currently maintained in a separate folder. In addition, some doubt now exists about its original location.

2. The wedding took place in the home of Joseph Simon dit La Pointe at Pascagoula.

BELLEISLE

- o O o -

MARIE LOUISE de BELLEISLE

This is your great-great-great-great-great-great-grandmother, from whom you have derived 1/256 of your blood.

We know very little about her but her name. There is reason to believe that she could have been married in Chaumont Castle on the Loire, but that is hardly provable.

Since her daughter was married in 1735, it is reasonable to believe that she must have been born about 1695 or earlier, and since her husband, Joseph Simon de LaPointe was a widower and remarried in Biloxi in 1723, it is reasonable to believe that she died in 1720 or earlier.

We do not know if she had any children other than your ancestor, whose marriage is recorded in the Mobile Church Records, a succinct note of which has been published as follows:

> "In 1735 Marie Josephe Simon de LaPointe, daughter of Joseph Simon de LaPointe and his wife Marie Louise de Belleisle, married Baron Hugo Ernestus von Krebs."

For a genealogical chart from Belleisle to you, see the LaPointe chart.

Mob. mb I:17a-1–17b
December 4, 1736

The year one thousand seven hundred thirty-six the fourth of December we–: Jean François Capuchin priest, apostolic missionary acting as pastor of Fort Condé of Mobile and of the Pascagoulas and dependencies baptized with the ceremonies of the church Simon Pierre Milon, legitimate son of Pierre Etienne Milon,[1] habitant, and of Jeanne Simon.[2] The godfather, Joseph Simon dit La Pointe, habitant; the godmother, Catherine Doussin. The godfather declared he was unable to sign because of his infirmity. The godmother declared she did not know how to sign, at Pascagoulas the day and year written herein.

–Jean François, pastor

The said Simon Pierre was born April 4, 1735.

–Jean François, pastor

Those signing: Pierre (Etienne) Millon, the father; (Nicolas?) Roussau, signing for (Joseph) Simon dit La Pointe, the godfather and the grandfather of the infant.

1. Surely the brother of Henry Joseph Milon, son of Pierre Milon and Françoise Domine or Romain.

2. Her next marriage in 1747, to François Barbet, shows her as a daughter of Joseph Simon.

Betty -

Did my best. Only the priest's name is a mystery. - This was poor writing.

Residents on La Pointe - Never dealt with that family -

Brother Jerome -

this is a Baptismal for Elisabeth, dau. of Joseph Simon dit LaPointe and Marie Foucault - from Bibliotheque Municipale - de la Rochelle - the writing looks so bad but will you try to decipher it for me? I cannot find any connection for our Joseph Simon to the Hubert Simon Family listed in Tanguay, however Jay Higginbotham says it's his family. I have a grant to research this Joseph Simon dit LaPointe but don't know where to turn. Got any ideas? after Jay's research and other "experts" I don't have a clue to find anything they might have missed. I wondered if a clue might be in this Baptismal -

Thanks!

The Blanc/Seymour article is wonderful! It was just now able to read it! Very good. By the way, have you seen the entry on SLC #10 Volume under St. Cyr.? I'm sure you spotted it but will send it along just in case.

Three banns published.

François Barbet dit St. Michel, a soldier in Derneville's company, native of St. Michel Parish[1] in Orléans, son of Jean Barbet, hosiery merchant, and Anne Maloute.

Jeanne Simon, Creole, widow of Pierre Millon,[2] daughter of Joseph Simon (dit Lapointe) and Marie Foucault.

Witnesses named: Krebs; Doussin (Catherine or Pierre Louis?);[3] Melisan; Fievre; Houries; (Joseph Simon), the bride's father.

Witnesses signing: E(tienne) Fievre; (Charles?) De Mouÿ; (Louis) Hourie– (Houriez or Houries); (Louis?) Helot (dit La Necessaire?), a soldier in LeVerrier's company, 1745 (HMLO 299); (Hugo Ernestus) Krebs, the bride's brother-in-law; (François Guillaume) Melisan.

1. St. Michel Church of Orléans was not found in Michelin's Guide to France (1972 edition).

2. Pierre Etienne Millon had died in January, 1744. DeVille, G C C, 50.

3. No connection has been found between these two. Catherine was the bride's stepmother. Pierre Louis Doussin had married Marie Colon in 1740. Mob. mb I:17, 26.

Mob. mb I:23a-1

Baptism.

Marie Joseph, daughter of Pierre (Etienne) Milon[1] and Jeanne (Simon dit) La Pointe, habitant of Louisiana.

Godparents: Pierre Gabriel dit Montélimar and Marie Joseph Simon dit Lapointe.

1. He usually wrote «Millon» when he signed. For baptisms of two other Milon-Simon children, see Mob. mb I:17. For the next marriage of Jeanne Simon dit Lapointe, see Mob. mb I:34-35.

Mob. mb I:17b-2
[December] 4, 1736

The year one thousand seven hundred thirty-six, the fourth of November we, –Jean François, Capucin priest, apostolic missionary, pastor of Fort Condé of Mobile and of the Pascagoulas and dependencies supplied the ceremonies of baptism to a girl born of the legitimate marriage of Pierre Etienne Milon and Jeanne Simon.[1]

Those signing: (Pierre) Millon, father of the child; Pignon, not identified.[2]

1. Pierre Etienne Milon (signed Millon) had married Jeanne Simon dit Lapointe ca. 1730-1734. There were at least two more children born before his death in 1744. Mob. bb I:139, 147.

2. At first glance, the signature looks like «p igron». The same person signed the Gardon-Laÿe marriage (folio 18), where it at first appeared to be Aignon. Although there is a slight possibility that it is Aigron or P. Igron, it is not at all like the «charleegron» signature (folio 17). He may have been the Ensign Pignon who, by 1721, had entered into a marriage considered dishonorable for an officer (Giraud, Histoire, 181), but see the following abstract, note 3.

June 30, 1739

Three banns published.

Jean Maÿer, native of Faigrechesne,[1] Alsace, Diocese of Strasbourg, son of Baptiste Maÿer and Marie Kernine.

Jeanne Finaux, native of this parish (Mobile), daughter of Jacques Fino and Jeanne Lafond of Isle d'Oleron, Diocese of Saintes.

Witnesses signing: The cross of the bride's mother, wife of St. Martin; A(ntoine) Collon, the bride's brother-in-law; Hugo Ernestus Krebs, husband of Marie Joseph Simon; Lorrentz Conrad Wiltz, a soldier in Karrer's Regiment; Blaise St. Martin, stepfather of the bride; Pierre Rochon, husband of Catherine Paux, who was evidently related to the bride. See the Rochon-Paux marriage, Mob. mb I:22.

1. Clearly written, the name begins with «f»; however, the town's name, obviously Germanic, really could begin with «ph» or «v», which in German have a soft sound like «f», and end with «sheim», a common ending for Alsace place names. (Heim means home; heimat means native country.)

November 29, 1739

One bann published; dispensed with two.

Thomas Rachelé or Rachlé, native of Constance,[1] Switzerland, Saint Pierre Parish, son of Martin Rachelé and Anne Marie Meingre.

Jeanne Desorges, native of Mobile, widow of Antoine Marie, daughter of Pierre Desorges and Marguerite Saint Lazare (Salazar?).

Witnesses signing: The cross of Pierre Desorges, father of the bride; Robert Talon, spouse of Jeanne Praux; Lavigne, perhaps Pierre Lavigne, who died in 1746; (Hugo Ernestus) Krebs, spouse of Marie Joseph Simon; Huber(t) de Morue, spouse of Jeanne Elizabeth Boissinot.

1. If Konstanz was meant, it is a German city on Lake Constance.

Mob. mb I:49a-1
March 17, 1766

One bann announced; dispensed with two.

Jean Gradenigo,[1] merchant, native of Venice, Italy, son of Antoine Gradenigo and Marie Bettio.

Marguerite Kreps, native of this parish, daughter of Hugues René Kreps (Krebs),[2] habitant, and Marie Josephe (Simon dit) La Pointe.[3]

Witnesses signing: (Daniel) Jaquéri; Hugo Krebs, father of the bride; Devin, probably a son of the Devin-Chauvin marriage;[4] P. Rochon, not identified; Rochon le cadet, not identified.

1. He and Marguerite were living at the Opelousas post (Louisiana) before 1778.

2. His name was Hugo Ernestus Krebs, as he signed in 1739 (Mob. mb I:25). His testament, dated 1776, is listed at New Orleans (New Orleans Notarial Archives, General Index, 1771-1833).

3. She died in 1751, and Krebs married Marie Anne Chauvin dit Joyeuse.

4. Valentin Devin, engineer, lieutenant reformé, married Marthe Chauvin before 1732. He died in June, 1735. A son named Valentin was baptized in 1734. Mob. bb I:77, 86, 103, 112; fb I:45, 51.

Mob. mb I:52a-3
December 2, (1778)[1]

Three banns announced.

François Krebs, son of deceased Hugues (Ernestus) Krebs and Marie Joseph (Simon dit) Lapointe, deceased.

Dame Helene Maurau (Moreau), widow of Jacques Lamy, deceased, daughter of Joseph Morau (Moreau), deceased, and Marie Jeanne Dauphin, deceased.

Witnesses mentioned: Corneille Macortin, Theodre Benoist.

Witnesses signing:[2] Th(eod)re Benoist, the bride of August 2, 1770; Cornelius McCurtin, the groom of March 24, (1778).

1. Although weddings were usually not allowed during the season of Advent, the couple was permitted to marry because bad weather had prevented an earlier arrival. Note that the three banns had already been published.

2. Salvador de la Esperanza signed the lower edges of this folio, recto and verso, and both sides of the following sheet, so marking the end of an era.

Spanish forces had entered the city of Mobile on March 12, 1780 (Mob. fb I: JDL Holmes transcript). Esperanza, who made the first Spanish entries in the church registers, had arrived with the troops. The British surrendered the fort on March 14.

Mob. mb I:47b-2
October 10, 1765

One bann published; dispensed with two.

Antoine Narbone (Narbonne),[1] habitant, native of Agen in Guyenne, Saint Catherine Parish, son of Louis Narbonne and of Marie Louise.

Marie Jeanne Kreps (Krebs), native of Mobile, daughter of Hugues René Krebs, habitant at Pascagoula, and of Marie Joseph (Simon dit) Lapointe.

Witnesses signing: (Louis) A(ugustin) Rochon; (François Louis) Masuriers or Mazuriers; (François) Daran; Chastang, probably John, younger brother of Joseph; (Joseph) Badon, a merchant, the spouse of Catherine Gabriel dit Montelimard; (Gabriel dit) Montelimard, brother of Madame Joseph Badon and of Madame Joseph Chastang; La––on (Lauson? Lanpis?), not identified.[2]

1. «Narbone» had learned to sign his name since June 14, (1764), when he married Marie Louise Dinant. Mob. mb I:47.

2. This name appears only in this record.

Marie Jeanne

Mob. mb I:49a-2
March 20, 1766

One bann announced; dispensed with two.

Augustin Rochon, habitant, native of this parish (Mobile), widower[1] of Marie Jeanne (Simon dit) La Pointe, son of Charles Rochon and Henriette Colon.

Louis Fievre, native of this parish, daughter of Etienne Fievre and Marie Grise.

Witnesses signing: James Gray (perhaps the surgeon?), a name mentioned in 1768 and 1780;[2] Devin, same who signed the preceding record; Paul Miller, Jun(ior); John (Obrien?);[3] Jean (Lennox?);[4] (Louis Valentin) Dubroca, spouse of Marie Marthe Fievre; (Joseph) Badon; Joseph (?), surname not decipherable; P. Rochon, identity uncertain; W. Richardson, not identified; (A[r]?) Solomon, almost certainly Alexander Solomon; Hugo Krebs, probably Hugo Ernestus Krebs; Pat(rick) Murphy, surely the Irishman from Pensacola, whose death was recorded at Mobile in 1767.

1. The priest wrote the feminine form, veuve.

2. Hamilton, Colonial Mobile, 265; Deville, «Early Anglo . . . ,» Geneal. Helper, XXXVII (1983), 12.

3. Two O'Brian deaths were recorded at Mobile in that period: Jacques O'Brian, an Irishman, on April 16, 1766; and Marie O'Brian, August 9, 1766.

4. The only similar name found was that of Sir John Lennox, biographer of Johnstone.

Mob. mb I:50b-1[1]
July 25, (1770?)

One bann announced; dispensed with two.

Charles Orbanne Demouy,[2] native of New Orleans, son of François de Mouy, deceased, and Charlotte (Duval).

Marie Louise Rochon, native of this parish, daughter of Augustin Rochon and Marie Jeanne Simon dit Lapointe.[3]

Witnesses signing: (Joseph) Badon, merchant, husband of Catherine Gabriel dit Montelinart; P(ierre) Rochon, paternal uncle of the bride; (Joseph) Chastang l'ainé, husband of Jeanne Gabriel dit Montelimart; R(ené) Roi, interpreter of Indian languages; (Louis) Aug(uste) Rochon, father of the bride.

1. The faded year looks as much like «soixante six» as «soixante dix».

2. Charles Orbanne Demouy, born circa 1735, was a Mobile habitant in 1764. LHML, SCR, May 4, 5, 1735; Oath, 1764. His sister Charlotte was baptized in New Orleans in 1730. AC, G 1, 412:110-113. No proof has been found of a relationship to Jean Charles Demouy, the 1739 bridegroom of Augustin Rochon's sister. Mob. mb I:25.

3. Marie Jeanne Lapointe had died in 1764. Mob. fb I:67. The bride's stepmother was Louise Fievre. Mob. mb I:49; ASP, I, 828-829.

MARRIAGE BETWEEN JEAN BAPTISTE LAPRADE
and ELIZABETH SIMON
MARRIAGE BOOK A, p. 73, Act 177
November 8, 1724

On October 28, 1724, the nuptial ceremonies were administered to Jean Baptiste Laprade, a native of Chateau Richer, diocese of Quebec, son of majority age of JEAN BAPTISTE LAPRADE and MARIE MAGDELEINE CLOUTIER, and ELIZABETH SIMON, native of the parish of St. John of La Rochelle, the daughter of JOSEPH SIMON, native of Quebec and presently a resident of this colony, and MARIE FOUCAULT, her father and mother, by me, Rev. Baston, religious chaplain of the vessel, Le Profond, there not being a chaplain in the place or at Fort Louis in Biloxi. The minutes were sent to Rev. Father Raphael De Luxembourg, Cure of New Orleans, grand vicar of Monseigneur, L'Eveque de Quebec. The present marriage, after one published bann and with the consent of Mr. Simon, father of the said girl and in the presence of the undersigned parents and friends took place at the home of Mr. Joseph LaPointe, on the Pascagoula River in the Province of Louisiana. Signing were Beaudreau, Rev. Baston and the others, parents and friends to the marriage, said that they could not write to sign, so they made their ordinary marks. Fleuriau signed in faith.

November 27, 1995

Dear Betty:

I have written to the Biblioteque Municipale de La Rochelle concerning the baptismal records of Elisabeth the daughter of your friend and mine Joseph Simon dit La Pointe and Marie Foucault. They promptly replied with a copy of the original. I find it impossible to read, but I will work on it. I am enclosing a copy for you. The girl was baptised on April 16, 1709 at St. Jean Parish. According to Higginbotham's book, they all sailed on the Marguerite to Mobile in July 1709. I did not get a copy of the marriage of Joseph and Marie, but I was given an address to write to concerning that.

Now, it seems like there must be a problem here. Marie Joseph Simon dit La Pointe who married Hugo Ernestus Krebs about 1740 should have been born about 1720. This is eleven years after her older sister Elisabeth was born. The La Pointe genealogy in the Pascagoula Library says that Marie Joseph was born in La Rochelle. Could it have been that the whole family got on a boat and went back to La Rochelle in 1720, and Marie Joseph was born there. Seems hard to imagine.

In the Krebs family book by Ellen Foster there is an actual death date for Marie Joseph of July 11, 1751. However, the Brother Jerome translation I received from the Mobile Cathedral says that she died on the same day she was buried on 7 November 1751, in the parish cemetery in Mobile.

There is yet another problem as there is yet another daughter with the same name as the later daughter. Apparently, there is as a result of Joseph Simon dit La Pointe's marriage to Catherine Doucin, a Marie Jeanne Simon dit La Pointe. She was married to Louis August Rochon about 1750 and died in Mobile on February 4, 1764. There is another Jeanne Simon listed in the letter you sent me and also in the Rochon family book. What you wrote to me was:

February 21, 1747
Marriage of ... "Francoise Barbet dit St. Michel . . . and JEANNE SIMON, Creole, widow of Pierre Millon, and daughter of JOSEPH SIMON DIT LA POINTE and MARIE FOUCAULT." (deceased).

She is also mentioned in the Rochon family book by David Sprinkle as her daughter married Jean Rochon. How can there be this Jeanne Simon with Joseph and Marie as parents, and Marie Jeanne with Joseph and Catherine as parents. This Jeanne is not listed on the big La Pointe genealogy from the Pascagoula Library.

I will write back to La Rochelle and attempt to get the baptismal record of Marie Joseph and the marriage record of Joseph and Marie Foucault.

In case you are interested in addresses in La Rochelle, here they are:

Biblioteque municipale de La Rochelle

This is an address for a man with the Cercle de Genealogie d'Aunis et Saintonge which is probably a genealogical society. I am writing him to ask for information on Marie Joseph and the entire Foucault family.

Monsieur Denis PROVOST
10, Avenue de Metz
1700 - LA ROCHELLE
FRANCE

Finally, in reply to your letter of September 5, 1995. It seems to me that anything from the Bienville Historical Society must be suspect. Surely, there must be a duplicate official record of the Land Grant that he had in France. It must have been in the official records sent back there. I would think that they gave him a copy and kept a copy. As to the possible mistake about direction in the grant (if you substitute north for south relative to the Fish River), the exact mistake was made in 1860 about land of my great great grandfather in Texas. It is possible to make such a directional mistake and could have been very likely in those days. On the other hand the only other copy I have seen is reproduced in Hamilton's book, and it is only the bottom half. Maybe he translated it incorrectly and Johnny's is actually a fake with the wrong translation.

I am trying to find out how to get the records from the Mobile Cathedral without paying $5.00 apiece. Do you know any way to do it? Did you say there was an index to those records published. Also, I would like to get Xerox copies of the original rather than Brother Jerome's translations.

Sincerely,

Susie

Dear Professor Cain:

Thank you for your letter of April 30th and order for two copies of MUSIC IN MOURNING, enclosed herewith.

You have caught me in an error in the death date of Hugo Ernestus Krebs -- I did intend to follow Deiler in the 1776 date as I too have been unable to locate the will independently of his mention of it. If my book is reprinted, I intend to correct that and several other typographical errors which you have probably noted. The Krebs will must be on file somewhere or Deiler could not have located it. And I am curious to see it because the fourteen children he mentions are more than appear on any of the genealogies which have come down to us.

As to the Chaumont-Dupont relationship I had to depend on tradition that Madame Dupont was Madame de Chaumont's daughter, and that LaPoint was her nephew. Some traditions have made LaPoint the brother of Madame de Chaumont but that seems impossible both chronologically and because I could find no connection between the Barre and LaPoint families. Of course, it is always possible that a widow married a second time and had children of a different name who were half brothers and sisters. The genealogies of the Chaumont family which I found in France indicated that Madame de Chaumont had several daughters but, unfortunately, did not give their names, so I have no proof one way or the other that Mme. Dupont was one of them. The same situation is true of the marriage of LaPointe and Marie Louise de Belleisle. Traditions indicate that she married LaPointe, or someone at the early Pascagoula settlement, but Craighead makes her the wife of Francis Krebs, and gives a Jeanne Poluit as LaPointe's wife. I find in Tanguay's Canadian families that a Joseph LaPointe married a Marie Chaudrillon. It is possible that he married twice and that his second child, Marie Jeanne, was by a different wife but since I had no ... of this it was simpler from the standpoint of my story to give them both the same mother. As for Jean Baptiste de la Prade, I found ample records of his marriage to Angelique Girardy, his death, and her remarriage. But I did not find a record of what his relationship was to Madame Dupont. I could only assume that he was a son of her first marriage, because she married Dupont about 1723 and the record of the death of one of their children, Catherine Dupont, is found in 1733. The name Catherine, of course, could indicate that the child was named for her grandmother. I shall send a copy

LaPOINTE

-oOo-

We can trace our LaPointe line as far back as any other with reasonable certainty. Not only that: but we know that the first one we list below is a third generation Québecois and believe we can, if we wish to spend the time, go to Québec and get further information.

IN ADDITION TO THE ABOVE, WE BELIEVE THIS IS THE FIRST OF OUR ANCESTORS TO COME TO WHAT WAS LATER NAMED "WEST FLORIDA" AND OUR EARLIEST ANCESTOR IN THESE PARTS.

-oOo-

This is your great-great-great-great-great-great-grandfather, from whom you have derived 1/256 of your blood.

JOSEPH SIMON,
Sieur de
LaPOINTE

Native of Québec in the Province of New France (which is now called the 'Dominion of Canada'), he was a 3rd generation Québecois. He was also a nephew of the famous Catherine Barré of Mons, known in history as Madame de Chaumont. Both Chaumont and his wife were from Flanders, which was not originally part of France, but he had taken the 'oath of allegiance' and is officially recorded in history as Secretary to the King.

The Chaumonts owned a castle on the Loire - that river south of the Seine that passes Tours and is the valley of castles. In fact, just a few months ago Pan-American Airways showed a picture of the Chaumont castle in a full-page advertisement in the National Geographic magazine.

As a very young man, our Joseph Simon, Sieur de LaPointe, went from Québec, New France, to France, probably with Iberville and his young brother Bienville, in order to join the expedition to settle a colony at or near the mouth of the Mississippi. A feverish race was them going on, ever since Robert Cavelier, Sieur de LaSalle, had discovered its mouth, to control that river. This was a bit before the master-promoter John Law became so prominent in French and in fact worldwide history.

Iberville's small party sailed from France direct to San Domingo (now called Haiti) and landed first at Cap Français. That part of this island had recently been captured from Spain by French pirates. Iberville inqured as to whether the Spanish had established a colony west of the Apalachicola river, and, being misinformed to the effect that the Spanish had not, he sailed direct to where Pensacola now is. To his chagrin, he found a Spanish colony, and immediately turned Westward to where Ocean Springs now is, and established the first "Biloxi".

Joseph Simon, Sieur de LaPointe was in this expedition and this was 1699 - just two hundred and sixty-eight years ago! and this is the first we know of of our blood entering this territory.

JOSEPH SIMON,
Sieur de
LaPOINTE

For a few years we are not entirely certain as to the whereabouts of LaPointe. We do know from many historical works, that Iberville explored Dauphin Island before going to the first Biloxi, and that he also made friends with the Choctaw Indians, went through Bayou Manchac and finally out into the Gulf and up the mouth of the Mississippi to where New Orleans now is. In fact, the oldest place name given by White people in what is now Louisiana was Bayou Mardi Gras and Mardi Gras Point, adjoining what is now known as Fort St. Philip, which name was given by Iberville and his party on Mardi Gras Day in 1699. What we do not know is whether LaPointe stayed at Fort Biloxi or continued on the trip.

Neither do we know whether he continued in this area as a settler or returned to Québec. But we do know that LaPointe secured a grant from Governor Cadillac for one square league of land on Dauphin Island, in order to raise cattle, when Mobile was on that island, was called "Mauvilla" and was the capital of Louisiana.

A terrific hurricane struck Dauphin Island in 1717, destroyed everything on the island and almost destroyed the island itself. Regardless of which definition of a "league" you take, the island at its widest point is not a league wide. Moreover, we also know that that hurricane created Sand Island and bottled up the port of Mobile for the following two hundred years (see Grant's Pass under the Chapter on Unruh).

We do not know whether LaPointe was married two or three times, nor whether our ancestress was his first or second wife. Official records do show clearly that his home was the center of Catholic activity in the Pascagoula area. The 1725 census gives him 3 children, and the 1726 census only two. He seems, too, to have had a great deal to do with the conduct of the concession granted to his aunt, Mme. de Chaumont, although her concession seems to have been a little further up the Pascagoula River than the so-called Old Spanish Fort, which he built with Indian labor and crushed oyster shells (see the chapter on Krebs). In fact, my story about the fort should be in this chapter instead of the Krebs chapter, but the Pascagoula Historical society emphasizes the Krebs name more than the LaPointe name.

I find a very interesting document in the St. Louis Cathedral. I will not give it to you entirely in French, because some of the words, and all of the construction are archaic to the extent that I cannot make them all out. But I can read enough of it to give you the sense in modern English, as follows:

> "In the year 1723, the 13th day of June, I have received the mutual consent of Mr. Joseph Simon, Sieur de LaPointe, a widower & a resident, and of Catherine Doucin, also a widow, and after the ceremonies of the Church and other formailties were duly observed, I, the undersigned priest, curé of Fort Louis, called the Biloxi, have given to them the Nuptial Benediction in marriage.
> "The Sieur de LaPointe recognizes a little girl about two years old of Catherine Doucin, born after a promise of marriage, whom he has legitimized by a contract to marry, and whom he legitimizes again through the present ceremony, to the end that she will be treated equally in succession with the other children. Thus done in the presence of Charles Argron, Sieur de LaMothe, Louis L. Vergne, Charles Veillard, Jean Veillard and several other witnesses as well as J. S. LaPointe and some who declared they were unable to sign their names and made their marks. In faith of which I have signed, J. Vorez, Priest."

Now, don't get too badly shocked by the above document. There was a period of eight years that no priest visited Pascagoula or Mobile and it was an approved practice of the Church for a couple to meet with witnesses, sign a contract to marry as soon as a priest was available, and the ceremony was accepted. In fact, after more priests were available, the LaPointe home in Pascagoula was for years the meeting place for baptisms and marriages as well as the saying of Mass.

This document is just a resume of the original contract and church ceremony. The original may still be somewhere in the New Orleans archives, and the Presbytere is about to give the Genealogical Research Society of N. O., of which I am now a trustee, access to the ancient "Black Boxes." These are boxes painted black with ancient documents in them, and which are so old the authorities do not allow anybody to open them. If I find the original document we will know more about this famous man and his ancestors.

MOBILE BAY AND COAST, ABOUT 1732

JOSEPH SIMON, Sieur de LaPOINTE (Concluded)

On the map reproduced on the preceding page, note that LaPointe is the only individual's home identified by the owner's name, although the towns of Mobile and Pensacola are clearly shown.

So, you can truthfully say that several years before the government brought 30 convicts from France to clear the forest to build New Orleans our folks were living, first in Ocean Springs, then on Dauphin Island and finally at Pascagoula. (The convicts were salt bootleggers.)

I have guessed his death to have occurred in the 1740's.

JOSEPHE SIMON de LaPOINTE

This is your great-great-great-great-great-grandmother, from whom you have received 1/128 of your blood.

It would appear from the records (see p. 39) that she was the daughter of LaPointe's first wife, and not the second, the widow Doucin mentioned above. She must have been born about 1715, and thus I am supposing that it may have been on Dauphin Island.

In 1735 she married Hugo Ernestus von Krebs, at Pascagoula, and they had the following children:

Joseph Simon Krebs, born 1741 or 1742, married Marie Louise Dupont.

François Krebs, born 1742 or 1743, married Helene Maurau de Belleisle.

Pierre Krebs, born 1743, our ancestor, see chapter on Krebs.

Marie Josephe, born 1745, married Antoine Narbonne.

Matthias Krebs, Born 1745, died young.

Marie Marguerite, born 1749, married Juan deGradenigo of Venice.

Louis Augustin Krebs, born 1750, married Magdalina Durif.

She died at Pascagoula November 7, 1751.

And thus, 215 years ago, the name of the first of your ancestors to settle in this country disappears from your genealogy.

THE LAPOINTES

Lawrence A. Lapointe is a descendant of Nicholas Audet-Lapointe, a man of importance in Canada in the early 1700's. Nicholas Audet, born 1670, and Hubert Simon Lapointe, born 1626, came to the New world at abount the same time from France ~~and may be related.~~

Hubert's son, Joseph Simon Lapointe, was among hte men who came to the Gulf Coast with Pierre LeMoyne Sieur d'Iberville. Joseph lived in Mobile, but later headed westward to present day Pascagoula, where he had a land grant from Madame de Chaumont. The Old Spanish Fort is a vestige of the Lapointe settlement of 1721.

In the meanwhile, Nicholas Audet was working as assistant for Msgr. de Laval, the first French Bishop in America.
Nicholas married Madeleine Depres and among their children was Joseph Lapointe, born in 1703, who married Jeanne Pouliot.

Their son, Joseph Antoine, born in 1732, married M. Josephte Pepin.

Their son, Louis Lapointe, born in Yamachiche in 1770, married Theresa Langlois. Jean Lapointe, born in 1829, married Seraphine Pothier.

Their son, Hilaire Lapointe, was born in 1860. He married Elise Gagnon and their son was Adelard Lapointe, the grandfather of Larry Lapointe. Adelard, born in Yamachiche in 1888, married Euphemie Rivard.

Their son was Joseph A. Lapointe, born in 1895, who married Alice Derocher, also born in 1895. They were the parents of Lawrence A. Lapointe, who was born in Trois Rivieres, Quebec, Canada on April 8, 1915 and christened Laurent Audet dit Lapointe. He was naturalized as an American citizen after coming to Watertown, N.Y. in the early 1920's and took the name Lawrence Anthony Lapointe.

He married Rita Coseo, a native of Watertown, and they had six children.
Yvonne Marie, born June 15, 1939, who married Richard L. Behiel, lives in Pleasanton, Calif. They have four children: Scott, Arthur, David and Nanette.

Joseph, born March 23, 1942, married Ellen Canton. Their children are Christine, Ronald, James and Janette. They live in Newcomb, N.Y.

Mary Alice, who married Joseph Perrielo, was born on Aug. 19, 1945. Their children are Bradley and Benjamin Coseo.
They live in Weston, Mass.

David G., born on May 8, 1949, who lives in Ocean Springs, was first married to Janice Smith and second to Belynda Merritt. David's children are David Audet dit Lapointe, Aaron and Rachel Audet dit Lapointe.

Stephen, who lives in Cali, Columbia, South America, married Erica Polakoff. He was born on Oct. 17, 1953.

The youngest child is Jane Irene, born March 13, 1959, who lives in Waltham, Mass.

Dear Ms. Buzhardt:

I am in receipt of your March 8, 1994 letter and the enclosed translation.

Thank you so very much! This is indeed an interesting project and the documents we are reviewing are even more interesting. We hope to be able to find all of the pieces to the puzzle that is the "Old Spanish Fort" and be able to reasonably ascertain its construction date as well as the truth about its early inhabitants.

At this point, we have a new roof, parts of the chimneys above the roof have been stuccoed and whitewashed, the concrete and wire meshing which had been applied to the bousillage on the interior has been removed, and the basic stabilization has been done.

We are now going to enter into the next phase which will involve the inside of the structure. Please do come and visit the Old Spanish Fort again. Do not hesitate to call and I will be happy to meet you there to give you a tour through it.

Again, we appreciate your efforts and I trust that if in the future we have other documents in French that need to be translated that you will consent to do so.

Sincerely,

Robert P. Krebs

first and only daughter, which Marie-Françoise de Boisrenaud named Marie. But six days later young Marie died and François Le Maire buried the child in the parish cemetery alongside La Salle's first wife, Madelaine Chartroux. Only a few days before, La Salle had lost a young Natchitoche slave and the day before Marie died, Chauvin, dit Léry saw the death of another of his slaves.[50]

In the midst of this summer epidemic, however, came brighter moments. On the same day that La Salle's daughter died, François Le Maire baptized Marie Alain, daughter of Pierre Alain, Canadian taillandier, and Marie-Catherine Philippe. Three weeks later, Alexandre Huvé baptized a young son of Jean Colon, dit La Violette and Marguerite Preau. It was Huvé himself, serving as godfather, who named Colon's son Isaac. And several weeks later, on October 16, Le Maire baptized Hippolyte Mercier's first child by Joseph Chauvin, dit Léry. The infant son (born at seven o'clock the previous evening) was named for his father by his uncle Louis Chauvin, dit Beaulieu, the event being witnessed by close friends Claude Trépanier and his wife Geneviève Burelle (who served as godmother).[51]

There were three Chauvin brothers present in Mobile in mid-1709 when young Joseph was born—Jacques, Joseph and Louis. There was shortly to be a fourth. Nicolas Chauvin, dit La Fresnière, one of the youngest of the eight sons of Pierre Chauvin and Marthe Autreuil of Montreal, had actually been present in the colony before.[52] Following his older brothers and numerous other relatives who had been active in the fur trade in the Great Lakes and upper Louisiana regions (in the days before Iberville's presence on the Gulf Coast), La Fresnière had served in Mobile as a "Canadian" during the years 1702–1706, along with Joseph Simon, dit La Pointe (thirty-seven-year-old native of Quebec and son of Hubert Simon and Marie Viez) and Jean-Baptiste Baudreau

In the port of La Rochelle, France, Briand de la Tuillee awaited the time to hoist the anchor of theDAUPHINE which he commanded and to set sail for the Louisiana colony. Boarding the DAUPHINE were sixty-three colonists, Company employees, soldiers and prisoners. On 21 March 1719, the Dauphine departed La Rochelle together with the ship ST. LOUIS which also carried colonists and soldiers.

On the passenger list of the DAUPHINE, there was "The Toussaint Party" which consisted of Catherine Toussaint, her child Marie Vinconneau, Isabelle, and Suzanne Roy. Catherine's maiden name was Doussin, not Toussaint. That evidently was a misunderstanding of the pronunciation of Doussin. Catherine was also identified on the list as the wife of Louis Vinnconneau. In years to come, Catherine and Marie Vinconneau would be ancestors of thousands on the Gulf Coast.

Louis Vinconnau, a master tailor, was already in Louisiana and must have been most anxious for his family's arrival. Their child, Marie Catherine, was three and a half years old when she left her native France--too young to have later remembered the long hard voyage. But she was just the age to have asked her mother a"blue million" questions during the three months that it took the ship to cross the ocean.

On 26 June 1719 the DAUPHINE and the ST. LOUIS arrived at Pensacola. There was a third ship already in the port. It was loaded with a portion of the recently arrived supplies, food, and the belongings of the colonists from the Dauphine & the St. Louis. This ship sailed to the Mississippi River. The colonists were sent to Dauphin Island while they awaited transportation to New Orleans or to their land.

The Spaniards did not allow this plan to be carried out. The colonists had to remain at Dauphin Island until sometime in July. One group of these colonists was transported to New Orleans earlier, but records do not name them. So, it is not known if Catherine Vinconnau and her daughter were fortunate to leave. As a matter of fact, it is not known whether their destination was Mobile or New Orleans. The rec only says that Louis Vinconnau was in the Louisiana Colony.

Louis must have died shortly after his family joined him. His life ended, and it was the beginning of a new life for Catherine and Marie Catherine. On 13 June 1723 Catherine married widower Joseph Simon dit La Point who owned a plantation on the east side of the Pascagoula River. Marie Catherine Vinconnau grew up as La Point's step-daughter on that mystic Pascagoula River and would spend many of her adult years in the area.

On the west side of the Pascagoula River, Jean Baptiste Baudreau dit Graveline lived on his vast acreage, having moved there in 1718 with his family. La Point and his friend Graveline were among the sixty Canadians to arrive at Fort Maurepas with Pierre Le Moyne d"Iberville on the LA RENOMMEE on 8 January 1700.

Neighbors and friends, it seemed destined that two of their children would one day marry each other. This event took place on 1 March 1734 when Marie Catherine Vinconnau and Jean Baptiste Baudreau, II were married at the La Point home. Most likely it was quite an occasion since the fathers were both prominent colonists.

Marie Catherine and Jean Baptiste settled on the Pascagoula where their first child, Marie Catherine, was born 4 January 1735. A son was the next to bring joy to the household on 11 September 1736. He was named Jean Baptiste III. Both children were baptized 3 November 1736.

Claude was the third child born to the couple in 1737, but a baptismal record has not been found for him. His age was determined by the Louisiana Superior Council Records. Louise Catherine was the last child born to the Baudreaus on 13 January 1742. She was baptized 30 May [1742]

FINAL PROOF OF MARIE LOUISE LAVERGNE'S PARENTAGE

Submitted by Nye Roy Meiner

Preface: This is written to encourage those other searchers for that one fact, that elusive bit of knowledge which will finally come to light. Sometimes, somehow, one knows by instinct or intuition; but no careful student of genealogy can record such findings without proper documentation. Now, two little words on a simple power of attorney have been found; and like a nugget of gold after all that mining, they were that long-sought-after proof. The bridge was made between Marie Louise LAVERGNE of St. Charles and Little Red Church records, the daughter of Louis LAVERGNE and Elizabeth THOMELIN, and Marie Louise LAVERGNE of Opelousas, wife of Joseph CARRIERE (and my grandmother in 3 of 4 major lines:)

LAVERGNE: Louis LAVERGNE II., resident of Pascagoula, was married July 4, 1725 at New Orleans to Elizabeth THOMELIN, the daughter of Pierre THOMELIN and the deceased Elizabeth CUSSONOTE.

Louis II., had been born September 16, 1681 in Quebec, the son of Louis I., a mason, and of Marie Anne SIMON, Louis I., born about 1647 in France, had married in 1676 Marie Anne SIMON, a native of Quebec, born August 29, 1660.

Marie Anne's ancestry may be traced back one more generation. Her father, Hubert SIMON dit La POINTE, born 1626 in France, the son of Guilluame SIMON and Sebastien DOUBLEZ, had married November 27, 1659 at Quebec, Marie VIEZ de la MOTHE, the daughter of Robert VIEZ de la MOTHE, "premier sergent," and of Xainte PAULIN.

Two, or perhaps three, of Marie SIMON dit La POINTE'S brothers were at Mobile very early in its settlement. In Old Mobile Jay HIGGINBOTHAM lists Jacques and Joseph with BIENVILLE in 1704 when the town was laid out in lots. Ignace SIMON was mentioned by Winston DeVille as an early settler at Mobile. HIGGINBOTHAM said, "In 1715 or 1716 Joseph SIMON dit La POINTE built a small residence-workshop near the present town of Pascagoula, Mississippi, to be used while a more elaborate plantation house was being constructed nearby."

An article in Southern Living magazine in February 1971 recounted the history of the house-shop which has been converted into a museum and "has the reputation of being the oldest standing building on the Gulf Coast..... The British came in 1760, taking the land from the French and six years later, the Spanish came and chased the British away. They set up a military outpost at the site and the shop became known as the Old Spanish Fort."

Louis LAVERGNE II. was a resident of Pascagoula at the time of his marriage in 1725. One must speculate that perhaps he was living with his uncle at that very place.

Louis LAVERGNE II. and Elizabeth THOMELIN, sometimes called residents of Cannes Brulees, lived in and near New Orleans; their first two daughters were baptized there. Records of their other children's baptisms have not been found. (St. Louis Cathedral baptismal records are missing from 1733 until 1744, making it impossible to establish exact dates.) A tentative list of their children would be:

1. Francoise, born December 25, 1729 (NO); married July 1, 1745 to Jean Le BORNE (Sup C, Marr. Cont.); and July 13, 1749 (St C) to George IMGUIMBERTY; her succession at NO in 1802 (LSAR).

2. Elizabeth, born September 19, 1731 (NO); married to Pierre CLERMONT, November 28, 1752 (St C); died about 1765 when he remarried Marianne MONCHERVAUX.

3. Marie Louise, born about 1733 (census age); married Jean BAR II., on November 28, 1752 (St C); and Joseph CARRIERE II., in about 1755-56; died August 24, 1822(Op).

4. Michel, probably a bachelor; died at Opelousas March, 1820, Marie Louise, his sister, as heir.

5. Louis III., born about 1743 (see death age); married to Marianne La CAZE, lived near NO, then Opelousas; died at age 71 on February 14, 1814 (Op).

There could have been another son. A Pierre Louis LaVERGNE signed many documents at St. Charles as a witness. He was a witness and "her brother" on Francoise's marriage contract in 1745. The Louis III. above would have been too young, of course. An older son was not included in the settlement of the estate when Louis LAVERGNE II. died at St. Charles on April 7, 1750. His widow, Elizabeth THOMELIN remarried about two years later, to Jean BAR I.

THOMELIN: Pierre THOMELIN was a "native of Dunkerque" and the widower of Marguerite CUSSONOTE "who died at Dunkerque" when he remarried at New Orleans on March 19, 1727. His bride was Genevieve CARON, widow of Jean de LATRE. Pierre had been listed in the 1721 census as THOMELIN, joiner, with 3 children. One daughter, Elizabeth, married Louis LAVERGNE II.; no further information was found on the other two children. Superior Council records show THOMELIN flooring a large warehouse in 1724 and weatherboarding the church in 1726. In the 1727 census Pierre THOMELIN, carpenter, had a wife and two children. Elizabeth de LATRE, a step-daughter, would have been one of these. The last mention of Pierre THOMELIN in the Superior Council records was an amicable settlement of his second wife's estate, dated June 13, 1739. It listed his daughter, Elizabeth, married to LAVERGNE, and his step-daughter, Elizabeth de LATRE, married to LOITEAU.

Jean BAR I.: On September 18, 1752, before the Superior Council, a marriage contract was signed by Jean BAR dit LIONNAIS, a native of Lyons, son of the late Mathieu BARRE and the late Marguerite BARBIER, and the widower of Perrine DAVID, and Elizabeth THOMELIN, widow of Louis LAVERGNE. The couple were married at the St. Charles Little Red Church, September 26, 1752. Final settlement of the Louis LAVERGN estate was not entered into the Superior Council records until December 22, 1752. Provisions were made for the three sons-in-law and 2 minor sons of LAVERGNE. Addition entries followed in July and in September of 1762 concerning the joint property of the Widow LaVERGNE and her second husband. Sometime before September 1, 1765, Jean BAR I. died; his property was divided between the widow and two daughters of BAR: Marie Elizabeth BAR, the widow of Francois TREPAGNIER; and Julie BAR, represented by her tutor, Pierre CLERMONT. (CLERMONT'S life was intertwined with these families. He married four times: (1) Marie Anne VIGER; (2) Perrine BAR, daughter of Jean BAR I., and Perrine DAVID; (3) Elizabeth LaVERGNE, daughter of Louis LAVERGNE and Elizabeth THOMELIN; and finally (4) Marianne MONCHERVAUX. He was godfather in the 1764 baptism of Francoise CARRIERE, daughter of Joseph CARRIERE and Marie Louise LAVERGNE.)

It is not known when Elizabeth THOMELIN LAVERGNE BAR died; she was involved in a law suit against Pierre CLERMONT in 1782 concerning some property in New Orleans which she contended belonged to her deceased daughter. Settlement was reached when CLERMONT paid a nominal amount for a quit claim.

Jean BAR II.: The BAR name was written several ways in the early records: BAR, BARA, BARRE, BARTHE, and sometimes not even included; instead, the dit name of LIONNAIS was used.

About two months after the marriage of Jean BAR I. and Elizabeth THOMELIN LAVERGNE, a double wedding was performed at the Little Red Church at St. Charles. On November 28, 1752, two daughters of the Widow LaVERGNE were married: Pierre CLERMONT married Francoise, and Jean BAR II. married Marie Louise, his newly acquired step-sister.

Two children were born to the brief marriage of Marie Louise LAVERGNE and Jean BAR II.:

1. Julienne BAR, born September 1753; Jean BAR I., her grandfather, and Francoise LaVERGNE IMGUIMBERT, her aunt, were sponsors. Julie married Louis LATOILAIS; her succession was dated May 2, 1794 at Opelousas.

2. Elizabeth, born February 5, 1755. Her sponsors were Elizabeth BAR TREPAGNIER, her aunt and P. LaVERGNE, fils, uncle. No further information was found for her. She probably died young.

Jean BAR II. died July 23, 1754, before the birth of the second child; but through an oversignt, Fr. Prosper did not record his death until after the birth of Elizabeth.

CARRIERE: The record has not been found for the second marriage of Marie Louis LAVERGNE, widow of Jean BAR II., to Joseph CARRIERE. (THAT was the missing link for proof of her parentage.)

Joseph CARRIERE I.: One of ten children of Andre CARRIERE and Cecile JANOT, Joseph I. was born April 24, 1682 at Montreal. He came to Mobile in 1708 as a young engaged with the BABIN LASOURCE-BAUDREAU GRAVELINE party. (See Old Mobile, Jay Higginbotham.) All five sons of the family migrated southward. Antoine settled in the Illinois region and married Marie Madeleine QUESNEL; their daughter married Louis BORE, whose name is often found in the history of Louisiana. The other four CARRIERE brothers, Andre II., Francois, Joseph I. and Jacques, came to the coastal region, settling first at Mobile, then moving to New Orleans when BIENVILLE established the colony there.

Andre CARRIERE, father of the clan, was born in France in about 1640, the son of Francois CARRIERE and Elizabeth MALAZOT. He married at Montreal on November 17, 1670 Cecile JANOT, born June 11, 1656, and the daughter of Marin JANOT dit La CHAPELLE, a carpenter. JANOT had come to Canada in "le Gran recrue" of 1653 and married at Montreal August 30, 1655, a native of Pourray, Francoise BERNARD, the daughter of Pierre BERNARD and Catherine RIVERIN.

Joseph CARRIERE I., married at New Orleans in about 1721, shortly after moving there. The bride's family had also recently moved from Mobile. Marguerite TREPAGNIER was the daughter of Claude TREPAGNIER and Genevieve BURELLE.

Joseph I. and Marguerite became the parents of ten children:

1. Joseph II., born about 1722, married Marie Louise LAVERGNE about 1755-56; lived on the German Coast, then Opelousas; died February 18, 1790 (Op).

2. Andre (called MONTBRUN in some records), born about 1730; married Louise Margueri DUBOIS on April 16, 1762.

3. Louis

4. Jacques

5. Marguerite, born 1729; married February 8, 1745 to Antoine FOUCHER; died August 1, 1801 at 72.

6. Therese, married Antoine de DALONGE; died April 4, 1800

7. Noel (Gerard), born about 1739

8. Mathurin, born about 1740

9. Francois, born about 1742

10. Francoise, born November 29, 1748; married Antoine Dauphin CAVELIER; died Decem ber 24, 1836.

The list above was compiled primarily from material in the Superior Council records concerning the settlement of the estate of Joseph CARRIERE I. He died in New Orleans, May 9, 1762. (Note: Much earlier in this research, another break-through came about when two signatures written some twenty years apart proved identical for Joseph CARRIERE II. The first was on the 1762 estate papers of his father in New Orleans, the second on the Opelousas marriage contract of his daughter, Francoise CARRIERE, and Antoine LANGLOIS, in 1781.)

No record was found for the death of Marguerite TREPAGNIER CARRIERE. She died before her husband and was not mentioned in the estate settlement.

TREPAGNIER: Canadian records spelled the family name as de TREPAGNY; some members of the Louisiana family signed as TREPANIE, some as TREPANIER. Most reference guides use the spelling TREPAGNIER.

The Canadian progenitor of the family was Romain de TREPAGNY, born about 1627 near Dieppe, the son of Charles de TREPAGNY and Marie MAILLET. On April 24, 1656 at Quebec, Romain was married to Genevieve DROUIN, daughter of Robert II., and of Anne CLOUTIER. His bride was almost 13, having been born October 19, 1643 at Quebec. Born about 1606 in Perche, Robert II., the son of Robert I., and Marie DUBOIS, had married on July 12, 1637 the young daughter of Zacharie CLOUTIER, a master carpenter. The CLOUTIER family had come to Canada with a group of tradesmen recruited by Robert GIFFARD for the settlement at Beauport. Zacharie was responsible for construction of the residence of the siegneur and for some buildings at the parish church at Quebec. The marriage contract of Robert DROUIN II., and Anne CLOUTIER is credited as being the oldest contract preserved in the original in Canada. Genevieve DROUIN and Romain TREPAGNY were the parents of 12 children, the ninth was a son Claude, born at St. Anne April 13, 1671.

Claude TREPAGNY was among the young Canadians sent with BIENVILLE to Fort Louis near Mobile as early as 1702. In August of 1704, he was married there to Genevieve BURELLE. She had been born in Canada February 10, 1686, the daughter of Etienne BURELLE and Marguerite ROUSSEL, journeyed back to Paris with her family; then embarked with her parents, two sisters and a brother for Mobile. BURELLE was a pastry cook and tavern owner, his wife does not appear in the census records after 1708. Their three daughters were married soon after they arrived: Genevieve to Claude TREPAGNY, Marguerite to Gilbert DARDANNE, and Jeanne to Francois TRUDEAU. Etienne BURELLE, born about 1656 in France, returned to his homeland in June of 1723 and died there in 1724, as related in two documents filed with the Superior Council in May of 1737 concerning the settlement of his estate.

Claude TREPAGNY and Genevieve BURELLE lived at Mobile until shortly after the 1721 census. They were counted there with their 7 children, then moved near New Orleans. According to tradition, Claude TREPAGNY was killed by an Indian while visiting the CHAUVIN DELERYS at their plantation, near the present town of Kenner. He died November 21, 1724, leaving a large family.

1. Marguerite, born early in 1708, married Joseph CARRIERE I., about 1721.

2. Genevieve, born February 5, 1709; married at NO May 12, 1725 to Nicolas HUOT, Captain of La DROMEDAIRE.

3. Ignace, born about 1712; did not marry; died in 1752 at about 40 years of age.

4. Marie Francoise, born March 25, 1715 (called Francoise Barbe in some accounts, while her sister Barbe Ursule became just Ursule); married May 7, 1731 at NO Francois DAMARON, King's Apothecary, who died enroute to San Domingo; she left a widow with a 3 year old daughter, as well as a 7 year old daughter of DAMARON. Francoise remarried on July 9, 1735 to Noble Jean de MACARTY, Aide Major at New Orleans.

A son of this marriage went to France, according to the FORTIER family history, and became a member of the King's Musketeers.

5. Francois, born February 26, 1717; married July 18, 1740 at St. Charles, to Marie Elizabeth BAR, daughter of Jean BAR I. and Perrine DAVID. Francois was witness in 1752 to three marriages of family members: his father-in-law and Elizabeth THOMELIN LAVERGNE; and Pierre CLERMONT and Elizabeth LaVERGNE.

6. Barbe Ursule, born October 28, 1720; as noted above, she was known as Ursule; married Guilluame DuBUISSON.

7. Marie Anne, no date found for her birth, the FORTIER family history places her earlier in the order; married at New Orleans March 18, 1735 to Dr. Bernard Alexander VIELLE, a "physician and botanist" or "surgeon and apothecary," according to different sources. Besides the bridal couple, signers of the marriage record included BIENVILLE, DENOVAN, SALMON, FLEURIAU, DUMANOIR, as well as family members, Francois TREPANIER veuve DAMARON, Genevieve BURELLE, and LASSUS-MARSILLY.

Genevieve BURELLE TREPAGNIER had remarried on July 16, 1726 to the Surveyor of the Company of the Indies, Joseph de LASSUS from Marsilly, who often signed as LASSUS-MARSILLY. She died four years after the marriage of her daughter Marie Anne, at about 53 years of age, on April 6, 1739.

Joseph CARRIERE II. and Marie Louise LAVERGNE: Joseph CARRIERE II., son of Joseph, and of Marguerite TREPGANIER, and Marie Louise LAVERGNE, daughter of Louis LAVERGNE II. and Elizabeth THOMELIN, and the widow of Jean BAR II., were married about 1755, probably at St. Charles. They lived there some twenty years before moving with their family to Opelousas. Records indicated that they had 7 children: although only one baptism was found, that of Francoise in 1764 at the St. Louis Cathedral. However, the 1777 census at Opelousas gave a complete list of the family, with only one minor error, Joseph was listed as Jacques, while all other records corroborated that it was indeed Joseph. Other allied families were listed, indicating a mass migration of the relatives. Louis LAVERGNE, Louis LATOILAIS, and Pierre CLERMONT were also living in the Opelousas area.

A composite listing of the children of Joseph CARRIERE II. and Marie Louis LAVERGNE was drawn from various census, church and civil records at New Orleans and Opelousas:

1. Pierre, born about 1757; his six children baptized as natural at Opelousas from 1788 through 1799; married there February 8, 1804, to Marie Louise VIVARET, mother of the children, and formerly the wife of Jean ORTALAN.

2. Michel, born about 1760, called "a native of St. Charles" on some records; his children also baptized at Opelousas as natural, three in 1792 on the same date, two more in 1797, and the last one in 1801. He married October 8, 1810 the mother of the children, Julia MARCANTEL, in a civil ceremony (Op). He died October 15, 1815 "at 60," which does not check with his census age as a child.

3. Francoise, born October 23, 1764 at New Orleans; married at Opelousas January 16, 1781 to Antoine LANGLOIS; they had 8 children. (Two daughters became grandmothers in my family; Sophie married Isodore HOLLIER, and Divine married Clement HOLLIER, their husbands were first cousins.) Francoise died at Opelousas; her succession was dated August 22, 1823.

4. Catherine, born about 1766; not mentioned after the 1777 census when she was 11; probably died young.

5. Genevieve, born about 1770; married September 17, 1793 at Opelousas to Philippe LaCAZE; they had 7 children; she died April 18, 1830.

6. Euphrosine, born about 1772; married at Opelousas November 27, 1794 to Joseph ROY III.; they had 8 children. (One of whom was Valiere, who became my grandfather, thus, making the third of four major lines descending from the CARRIERE-LAVERGNE marriage.) She died March 13, 1834 at Opelousas.

7. Joseph III., born about 1774; probably the Joseph CARRIERE who died September 22, 1795 as "a young man."

Joseph CARRIERE II. died at Opelousas February 18, 1790, at about 68 years of age. Marie Louise LAVERGNE survived her spouse for many years; her succession was dated August 24, 1822. But during those intervening years, several events were recorded concerning Marie Louise. She was godmother in baptisms and an heir in the 1820 settlement of Michel LaVERGNE'S estate. He was her brother and seemingly a bachelor.

On March 8, 1802, the Widow CARRIERE, Marie Louise LAVERGNE, gave power of attorney to Louis LaVERGNE. That innocuous item in the Louisiana State Archives and Records catalog did not reveal the hidden clue. That was only discovered after translating the original document. The procuration was to be used in New Orleans concerning the estate of the deceased "veuve INGUIMBERTY, sa soeur" (widow INGUIMBERTY, her sister:) Francoise LaVERGNE, daughter of Louis LAVERGNE and Elizabeth THOMELIN, married at St. Charles Little Red Church to George INGUIMBERTY was "HER SISTER:" Marie Louise LAVERGNE, Widow CARRIERE, was the daughter of Louis LAVERGNE and Elizabeth THOMELIN.

As stated at the beginning of this article, careful documentation must accompany genealogical research. If there are errors in any of the above, or if readers have additional information; any corrections or contributions would be appreciated.

Unless specified otherwise, data was gathered from the following sources: Dictionnaire Genealogique des Familles Canadiennes, Tanguay; original documents, Louisiana Archives, Baton Rouge; copies of baptisms and marriages, St. Louis Cathedral, New Orleans; photocopy, Little Red Church Records, Louisiana Historical Center, New Orleans; Superior Council records, the summaries, Louisiana Historical Society Quarterly; originals, Superior Council Records, Louisiana Historical Center, New Orleans; certificates of baptisms and marriages, St. Landry Catholic Church, Opelousas; original successions, St. Landry Court House, Opelousas; Southwest Louisiana Records, Rev. MORE NOTES ON THE CHENET FAMILY

Submitted by: Mrs. Rosario Centanni (Irna Elizabeth Adams)

On page 281 - Volume 5 - No. 20, September 1966 issue of the NEW ORLEANS GENESIS, I had compiled a family history on the CHENET family. In this article I had posed a problem about Francois CHENET and Vincent Alexander CHENET. Since then I have been able to sort these two men out as follows:

Vincent Alexander CHENET was the one who married Marguerite PANQUERNE, the widow JOLY, on 27 December 1770 at St. James Church, St. James Parish, Louisiana, and his brother Francois was the one who evidently signed as witness to this marriage, as F. Alexander CHENET.

Francois CHENET's death certificate reads, "died 15 July 1789" at St. John the Baptist Church, St. John the Baptist Parish, Louisiana, and gives his age as 70 years, and states he was married to Elizabeth, no last name given, but we know he was married to Elizabeth HERY. They were the parents of Pierre CHENET.

Vincent Alexander CHENET died 21 October 1790 and was buried on the 22nd. His name is given as Alexander YENETE, age 80 years and married to Margarita PANQUERNA.

Marguerite PANKERNE died at 10 o'clock p.m. on 24 January 1818 and buried on the 25th at St. John the Baptist Church, age 72 years, widow of Alexander SCHENET.

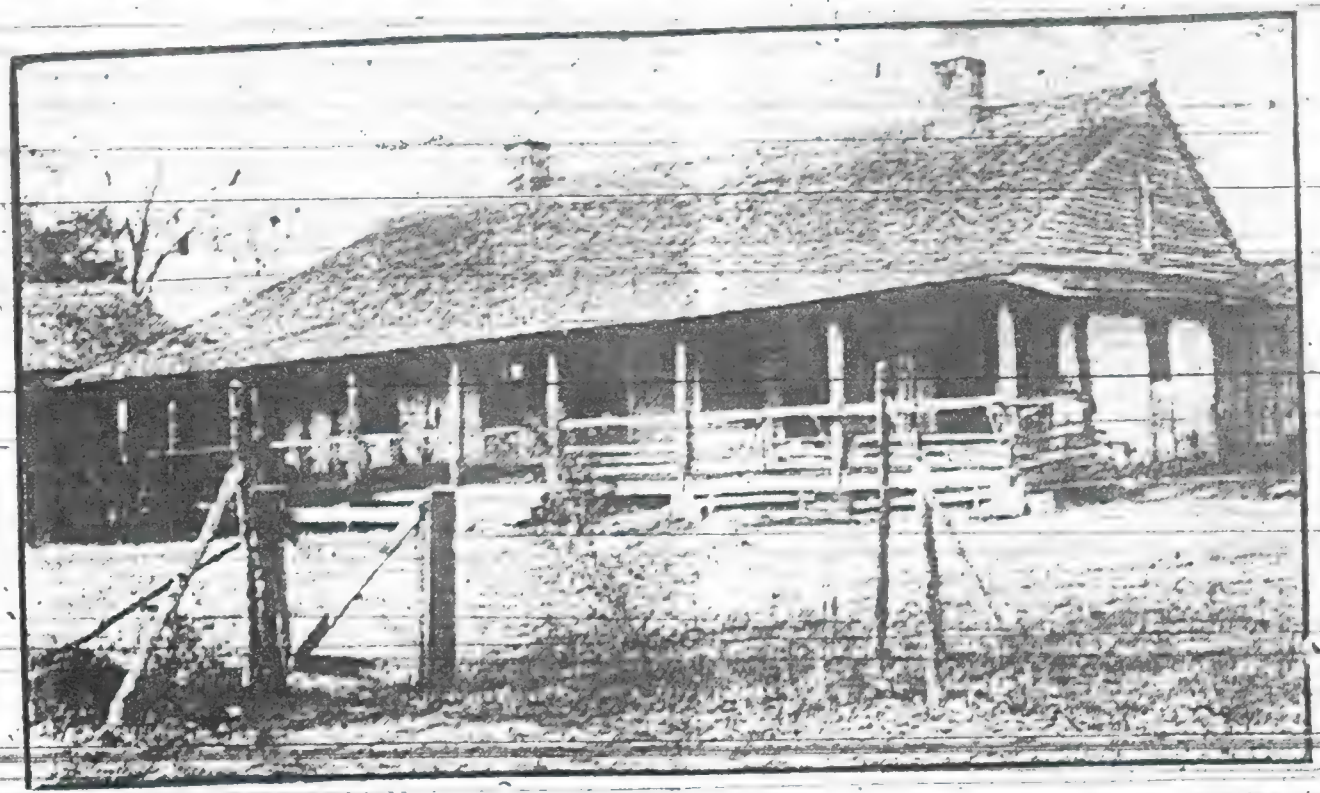
PASCAGOULA (MISS.) CHRONICLE-STAR

Fire Threatened Destruction of Historic Building



The Old Spanish Fort, Built in 1721, Threatened by a Fire Which Did Damage Tuesday Morning.

The Fire Department was called out Tuesday morning to extinguish a roof fire on the Old Spanish Fort, the oldest structure in Pascagoula, and one of the oldest buildings on the Gulf Coast of Mississippi. The fire was discovered on the roof of the kitchen, thought to have been caused by sparks from the kitchen stove falling on the roof. Fortunately the firemen arrived in time to stop the blaze before it had done any damage, except to burn a small hole in the shingle roof of the kitchen part of the building, which is an annex to the main building. The loss is estimated at about ten dollars.

The Old Spanish Fort is now owned by Father O'Reilly, having come into his possession this year. It is occupied by a family of negroes who are caretakers for Father O'Reilly.

This old building was erected in 1721 by French troops under Sieur Joseph de la Pointe, an admiral under Bienville, who maintained a fleet on Chatahoula Lake, now Krebs Lake, for the protection against the Spaniards and the Indians of the royal concessions of the Duchess de Chaumont at Pascagoula. The name "Spanish Fort" is a misnomer, as it was built by the French. It may have gotten the name on account of being built as a protection against the Spanish troops.

Some time later, about 1790, the fort came into possession Baron Hugh Von Krebs, the first white permanent settler, who had a large plantation on Krebs Lake, in the upper section of the present city of Pascagoula. He used the old fort for a residence until he moved to Mobile, as has been stated in these columns before. Baron Krebs was the progenitor of the long line of Krebs that have lived in this section for the past two hundred years, and until very recently the Old Spanish Fort has been occupied by descendents of Baron Krebs as a residence.

The old fort stands on Krebs Lake, in the northern part of the city, almost as it was built two hundred and eleven years ago, and is in a fair state of preservation. A porch or two and a kitchen wing have been added, giving it a more home like appearance, but the original building still stands as a testimonial of the thoroughness with which buildings were erected by the hardy pioneers of those early days.

Those who revere the memory of the first settlers of this section, and have a lively interest in the history of Pascagoula and the Gulf Coast, will be gratified to know that the old building has been spared to stand, perhaps another two hundred years, as a monument to those who have made this coast country the land of legend and romance.

and send their young children to catechism. Within a few years they will all be Catholics.

But in this capital, in what condition is divine worship? Its temple is nothing more than a guardhouse transformed into a church. It holds no more than a twentieth part of the faithful to hear the few Masses which are said. It is without proper adornment or shelter against the cold, an oven in hot weather, without confessors, it may be said, because there are only two who understand French at all, despite the fact that three-fourths of the city do not speak Spanish. There is no other preacher than Father Portillo, whom very few understand for the same reason. Few attend church, fewer approach the sacraments. The Capuchin Fathers cry out against heresy, while they themselves are the greatest obstacles our Holy Faith has in propagating itself.

May His Majesty be pleased to allot twenty thousand pesos from this royal treasury to complete and adorn the parish church, begun but badly constructed by a certain Don Andrés Almonaster, who from notary, has risen to be the colonel of militia through the intrigues of these same fathers and the great kindness of my predecessor. He is a man despised and hated by the militiamen, and under whose orders they do not wish to serve. This fact exposes me to a thousand perils so that I dare not call them up on various occasions.

May His Majesty be pleased to appoint secular clergymen to the parishes, as is done in the Kingdom of Guatemala, by virtue of royal order which banished all the friars from there for reasons much less weighty than those which militate against these provinces. May he select a preacher of the eloquence of Father Portillo, who will preach in the French language alternating with the Spanish preacher; that is, the sermon should be given on two Sundays, one in French and the other in Spanish, for a period of several years, etc. I claim that our religion then will be loved, respected, and generally followed in these provinces, and be the strongest support of the Spanish regime.

I hope that Your Excellency will please take everything into consideration and beg of His Majesty on behalf of the inhabitants of the settlement of New Madrid and new settlements of San Fernando and San Carlos in Ilinueses, the favor of giving the first named priest, Don Pierre Gibault, a stipend of two hundred and forty pesos, as is enjoyed by the parish priest of Ste. Geneviève; and those of San Fernando and San Carlos, Don Juan Bautista Didier, with the same stipend as the former.

May Our Lord preserve Your Excellency many years.

Lanzos to Carondelet

August 1, 1792 [45]

No. 148.

I am placing in the hands of Your Lordship the accompanying memorial from the inhabitants of Pascagoula. They consider it certain that, if the presents which the Indians now go to get at Orleans (which is their reason for passing along those roads) were given to them here or in Pensacola, the injuries from which the inhabitants suffer would cease. I replied to them that the government could do no less than give the presents to the Indians in the place which would be most favorable to the royal interests. This undoubtedly is that of Orleans, and I would petition Your Lordship to charge the interpreter Tornaret to tell the Indians, on behalf of Your Lordship, not to commit those offenses.

God keep Your Lordship many years.
Mobile, August 1, 1792.

Indian Commissions Issued by Blount

August 10, 1792 [46]

[Seal]

William Blount, governor in and over the Territory of the united states of america south of the river ohio, & superintendent of Indian affairs for the southern District:

To all who shall see these presents, greeting.

Know ye that in consideration of the proofs of fidelity & friendship which we have had of the Indian called Tussunacooboyè of the choctaw nation, maintaining close unity with the united states; of his valour and consequence with the neighbouring nations and of his good disposition & knowledge to command; desiring to recommend such good qualities, I do appoint him Gorget Captain admonishing him of the value he ought to put thereon, the obligation to govern his people well, and the respect he is to bear to the United States; venerating the name of the president.

For these reasons, we require all citizens of the united states to acknowledge him Gorget Captain as aforesaid; the same to the indians of his nation, that they respect and obey him.

Given under my hand and seal in the said Territory this tenth day of Augt—one thousand Seven Hundred & ninety two hostility of the Indians and the treachery of the Spaniards. At length, yielding to their urgent desires, he resolved to take formal possession of the country on the Colorado, and near the Bay of St. Bernard.

Accordingly, on the 10th of August, 1721, he issued the following order to M. de la Harpe, viz.:*

"ORDER.

"We, Jean Baptiste de Bienville, chevalier of the military order of St. Louis, and commandant-general for the king in the province of Louisiana:

"It is hereby decreed that M. de la Harpe, commandant of the Bay of St. Bernard, shall embark in the packet, the 'Subtile,' commanded by Beranger, with a detachment of twenty soldiers, under M. de Belile, and shall proceed forthwith to the Bay of St. Bernard, belonging to this province, and take possession in the name of the king; and the Western Company shall plant the arms of the king in the ground, and build a fort upon whatsoever spot appears most advantageous for the defense of the place.

"If the Spaniards or any other nation have taken possession, M. de la Harpe will signify to them that they have no right to the country, it being known that possession was taken in 1685 by M. de la Salle, in the name of the King of France, &c. "BIENVILLE.

"August 10th, 1721."

La Harpe proceeded upon the hazardous enterprise, and established the post agreeably to his orders; but the Indians were in alliance with the Spaniards, and strongly opposed the settlement. Unwilling to expose his colony to savage massacre, he determined to abandon so perilous a place. In October following he returned to New Orleans, and reported to the commandant-general that he had coasted three hundred leagues west of the Mississippi, and that on the 27th of August he had entered a fine bay, with eleven feet water at half tide; that his weak force and the hostility of the savages prevented him from making a permanent establishment; that the bay known to the French as the Bay of St. Bernard was the same known to the Spaniards as the bay of Espiritu Santo, and is in latitude 29° 12′ north, and in longitude 282° east from Ferro. He also gave the extent of Louisiana upon the Gulf of Mexico, from this bay eastward, at about one hundred and sixty leagues.*

The colonial government continued to claim the territory westward to the Colorado and beyond, and several attempts were subsequently made to establish settlements west of the Sabine. Settlements were also attempted, with subsequent failure, high up Red River, and upon the Upper Arkansas.

The Spaniards, in the mean time, pushed their settlements and missions eastward to the Colorado; and parties of Spanish cavalry from Santa Fé had infested the region west of the Sabine, until the French were compelled to retire toward the Mississippi.

In the mean time, forts and trading-posts were extended eastward upon the waters of the Tombigby and Alabama Rivers. The fort at Mobile was removed to the west shore of the Mobile Bay, and, being strongly fortified, was called "Fort Condé." The fort on Biloxi Bay was enlarged, and called "Fort St. Louis." Another fort was advanced into the Indian country to the head of navigation on the Alabama River, two leagues above the mouth of the Tallapoosa; this was called "Fort Toulouse."†

In each of these were placed suitable garrisons to defend them against Indian hostility, and to protect the agents of the company from the depredations of the savages, instigated by British traders from Carolina. Trading-posts were established with the friendly Choctâs upon the Tombigby, and upon the Pearl and Pascagoula Rivers.

In the mean time, during the war, which had now terminated, between the French and Spanish kings, the colonies of Louisiana had suffered much, and the company had become greatly embarrassed by the interruption of trade and the hostilities of the Indians; yet they had exerted themselves with energy to sustain the colonies in the province. The population had been gradually augmented by emigrants introduced by the company's ships, besides convicts and indigent females from the houses of correction in Paris, introduced by the king's vessels. But the former of these classes were not desirable emigrants for a new colony, and, upon the petition of the directory, the king had interdicted the transportation of convicts to Louisiana after the 9th day of May, 1720.* The latter were not so objectionable; for, although they would add but little to the good morals of the colonists, they were a valuable acquisition to a new and growing colony. Several hundred of these indigent females, taken from the hospital-general and the houses of correction, were subsequently introduced into Louisiana, and contributed largely to the future population.

Emigrants for the different colonies had arrived during the past year. Early in January, one of the company's ships had arrived at Mobile with three hundred settlers for Madame Chaumonot's grant on the Pascagoula River. In February, another vessel had arrived with one hundred emigrants and passengers for different colonies and grants on the Mississippi; also with them came eighty girls from the Salpétrière, a house of correction in Paris. Early in March, one of the company's vessels had arrived at Mobile, with two hundred emigrants for John Law's grant on the Arkansas. They proceeded from Mobile, by way of the lakes and Iberville Bayou, to the Mississippi, and thence to the Arkansas. A portion of them settled about sixty miles above the mouth of that river, at a point long afterward known as the "Post of Arkansas." Others advanced further up the river, and settled upon the margins of the great prairies which lie southeast of Little Rock.

[A.D. 1722.] The numerous arrivals of colonists and emigrants during the last two years had increased the population so rapidly in the new and uncultivated country, which had not yet developed its agricultural resources, that the supply of grain and breadstuffs was insufficient for their supply. A scarcity, bordering on famine, was the consequence. Supplies from France were irregular and insufficient; and the troops and many of the colonists were compelled to disperse among the friendly tribes of Indians, in order to procure food and sustenance. Others were compelled to sustain themselves and their families by the precarious supplies derived from fishing and hunting. Distress and gloom overspread the settlements; many sickened and died for want of wholesome food, added to the influence of a new and unhealthy climate. Yet emigrants from France continued to arrive. Near the first of June, one vessel arrived at Mobile with two hundred and fifty emigrants for the different settlements.

Natchitoches, Rapide, Illinois, Mobile, New Orleans, and even on the galleys. The Battalion of negro Militia included a company of grenadiers and a company of infantry. The mulattoes had a company of grenadiers and three companies of infantry militia.[129]

In order to provide the colored militia with an ordinance governing organization, discipline, rights and privileges, marriages, promotions, crimes and punishments, and standard rules for submitting reports, it was drafted by the sub-inspector of the colored militia, Lieutenant Luis DeClouet. It followed the orders of the Havana colored militia units, which generally conformed to other disciplined militia units.[130]

By 1802, there was also a company of negro and mulatto infantry militia stationed in the Mobile District under Captain Carlos Lalanda, which included 2 officers, a sergeant and 21 men.[131]

Following the retrocession of Louisiana to France and its subsequent transfer to the United States in 1803, Luis Dessalles, sub-inspector of colored militia, transferred his units to Pensacola, but he ceased to carry out his functions when he returned to his veteran regiment.[132] Within a decade the urban mulatto and negro militia units at Pensacola commanded by Salvador Ruby included 50 of the former and 67 of the latter, but they were soon mustered into the Havana battalion.[133] According to most reports, this was one of the most undisciplined, rowdy and insubordinate militia units ever to serve in America! Pablo Martínez killed a fellow soldier named Juan Marcos on February 7, 1817, and various reports for 1817 list discipline problems.[134]

Meanwhile, back in New Orleans, the negroes and mulattoes who had formerly comprised the Spanish militia units, were being organized into U.S. militia units. Governor W.C.C. Claiborne wrote that the colored militia was resented by the creole whites of Louisiana during the Spanish period and so the General Militia Law did not include the colored people. "This neglect," he wrote, "has soured them considerably with the American Government, and it is questionable how far they would in time of danger, prove faithful to the American standard."[135] The Spanish minister to the United States echoed this belief: "There are in New Orleans more than two thousand mulattoes and negroes who composed a corps of mixed troops when that province belonged to the King, and inasmuch as all of them love our government, they could easily be persuaded to move to Florida where they could form two Regiments."[136]

Another group of militia not generally included in Carondelet's listing was organized in the Natchez District by Governor Manuel Gayoso de Lemos. Francisco Bouligny had first suggested a quasi-military mounted police force to preserve order in Natchez during 1785.[137] Three years later Miró ordered the commandant, Carlos de Grand-Pré, to draw up a paper militia organization without letting the inhabitants know. Grand-Pré complied and sent in lists of appropriate inhabitants to exercise command in the four companies of Natchez Militia.[138] By the time Gayoso arrived to take command as first governor of the district in 1789, however, there was no militia force in the district.

Gayoso set about proposing the establishment of free companies of volunteers in each of the sections of the district under the general command of the governor.[139] Because Carondelet had little confidence in the loyalty of the Natchez settlers, he declined to approve the suggestions. Acting under his extraordinary powers, Gayoso called thirty young men together and offered them land grants if they would serve in a mounted police force. Under Richard King, the Natchez "mounties" moved against a murderer who had killed a sheriff in 1792 and apprehended him. Soon they had made the Natchez District reasonably free from crime.[140]

Gayoso's adjutant, Stephen Minor, who held a commission in the Spanish army as well, suggested in 1792 that he create a company of cavalry militia to be called the "Monteros of Natchez." He agreed to provide at his own cost sixty horses for the men and proposed a jaunty uniform with a round cap.[141] Gayoso believed the district could furnish at least 800 militiamen and in his census reports he listed those capable of bearing arms. In order to maintain their loyalty and cooperation, Gayoso suggested that the militia be organized along American traditions of "minute-men" not to be used except in emergencies and led by officers of their own choosing.[142]

By the fall of 1793 Gayoso had organized two companies of furnishing militiamen with less ability than those of French origin.[41]

The descendants of the Germans rapidly became assimilated into French-Louisiana society. They quickly forgot their German dialects, particularly those born to linguistically mixed parentage. As early as the eighteenth century, German family names were becoming Gallicized. For example, "Rommel" became "Romme," "Scheckschneider" became "Cheznaidre," "Shaf" became "Chauffe," "Shantz" became "Chance," "Zweig" was translated "La Branche," and "Schneider" became "La Taille." Later in the nineteenth century many of these same names became Anglicized. Deiler's work presents a long list of Gallicized creole names that were originally German. Today, the descendants of these early emigrants speak English; but often French, or at least the Louisiana dialect, is spoken in the family circle. There is very little to differentiate them from other French Louisianians.

The linguistic assimilation of the Germans on the German Coast proceeded apace a bit slower than that of their brethern isolated in French communities. However, one does not find in Louisiana a Franco-German patois comparable to that of the Pennsylvania Dutch, who speak a patois composed of German, English, and Dutch.[42]

Beyond the German Coast there were some secondary centers of German population in Louisiana. One of these grouped around a certain Hugo Ernestus Krebs, originally from Neumagen in the Moselle Valley, who married Marie de la Pointe and owned a plantation on the Pascagoula River. Still another German proprietor was the Swiss Jean-Daniel Koly, the one-time financial adviser to the elector of Bavaria, who founded the concession of St. Catherine near Natchez. This settlement, however, disappeared during the Indian massacre of 1729.

[41] This is an unlikely statement after one reflects on the part played by the German settlers in the rebellion of 1768, and their participation in Galvez's expedition to the Floridas during the American war for independence.

[42] This patois is spoken by some 300,000 persons in Pennsylvania as indicated in the recent study by Edwin Miller Fogger, Reliefs and Superstitions of the Pennsylvania Germans (Philadelphia, 1915).

missary of the marine made the cession, but, for some reason, it was thought proper to obtain Cadillac's ratification September 15, 1718. The papers were duly deposited later in the archives of the Superior Council, and were to survive at least until 1783.

This property was of more importance when Dauphine Island was the port of Mobile than after that harbor was practically abandoned. It may be that to this fact it is due that the Baudins never alienated the property. It was to remain theirs under the English and Spanish régimes, and be finally confirmed by the United States to the descendants of the Sieur de Miragouine in 1829.[1]

The concession of land on Fish River to Joseph Simon de la Pointe, whose name occurs often in the church registers as father of Madame Krebs, was made November 12, 1715, by Antoine de la Motte Cadillac, governor of the province of Louisiana, and Jean Baptiste Duclos, royal councilor and marine commissary. They certify that they are vested by his Majesty the king, their lord, with the power to grant lands. It recites La Pointe's application, and was executed on Dauphine Island, and registered, as ordered, the same day by greffier en chef Raguet in the office of the Supreme Council of Louisiana, — which would indicate that this office was at the time also on Dauphine Island. The description possibly admits of modern identification. The line seems to run north and south a league, the land bounded south on Fish River, and has a west front of a league on the sea, facing the Grand Bay (faisant face à la grande Baye). This concession is one of the many instances of the good judgment of the French in selecting lands; for Grand Bay is the beautiful sheet of water known as Weekes' Bay, and Fish River country is a pleasure resort as well as colonization centre.

The instrument is also valuable as throwing early light on land tenure in the young colony. It is quite unlike the French seigneuries and almost amounts to franc aleu.

The grant was for the purpose of enabling La Pointe to raise cattle, and was careful to except a cedar grove said to be near Fish River. The title was to be absolute, provided he cultivated the land for two successive years, but was subject heard from the waters of this coast is attributed by tradition to the suicide of its native races by plunging into Portersville Bay, — a story something like that of Pascagoula.

CADILLAC'S FISH RIVER GRANT

Pascagoula, too, was early settled by the French. On the 1732 map of Danville, Sr. La Pointe's place is shown about the fine oaks above the present railroad bridge, although of course the plan is not in sufficient detail to identify the exact spot. Across the river and bay, somewhat higher up, is marked the village of the Pascagoulas (Bread-eaters), and near the great bend, where now is busy Moss Point, we find the famous Chaumont concession. But the French settlement is also shown prominently on the earlier map of the Western Company, and may even have existed before then.

Tradition goes even back of the French, and Gayarré tells the weird legend of a Spanish priest who came there after De Soto's battle at Mauvilla and established a mission among the mild Indians of that day. The cross, the bell, the mysterious box gradually weaned them from their worship of a mermaid, until once at midnight the sea and river rose in tidal waves under the light of the full moon, and on their crest appeared the maid pleading with irresistible music for her deluded children to come back to her. And come back they did, plunging one after the other into the water, leaving the distracted priest alone upon the shore. Laughing then, she disappeared, and the waters with her.

The father declared a crucifix, dropped in the river at full moon, would break the spell, but that the priest who did it would also die, and no one has ever dared to verify the prediction. But her music may still be heard, even in these prosaic days, coming up from under boats of fishermen. For the charm has never been broken.

The first entry in the Mobile records, curiously enough in view of the legend, is the certificate of burial, in 1726, of several people found drowned in Fish River at Pascagoula, for this settlement, too, was long dependent on the Mobile parish. Then comes the baptism of the child of François Rilieu, of Pascagoula, and, in 1734, we notice the marriage there of Baudrau, of Dauphine Island, at the house of La Pointe. This is written on a loose slip of paper and announces that one ban only was published after Sunday mass, the other two being dispensed with. The reason of this doubtless was that Mathieu visited the place so infrequently.

Not until 1758 do we hear of Pascagoula again, except a casual mention of Rilieu and wife and child as resident there. There was once the baptism of the daughter of a Pascagoula Indian woman, but this was possibly at Mobile. In the year 1758 was baptized Joseph, son of Maturin Christian Cadner, an inhabitant of Pascagoula; but this seems to be the last church record of the place.

There is, in the registers, a mention or so of the death of sailors for the great company or the king, but the navigation between Dauphine Island and Mobile, and between the city and the river forts, was not managed by these matelots. In 1728 is mentioned the widow of Branquinier, late captain of traversier, and the next year we find Boudignon with the usual title for captain of small boats, — patron. He acted as late as 1746, when his wife is named as Anne Poirié. In 1731, Sr. François Harmon was master pilot, and next year "Theodore Robin dit Lanois" patron for the king.

A few years later the death of J. L. Vinant is mentioned, captain of a boat in the service of the king. In 1737, we first notice Francis Girard as patron, and three years later Jean Girard, his father, who was to act as such for so long a time. His print signature is very frequent in the registers. His wife was Marie Anne Daniau, creole of Mobile, whose death was to be subsequently noted. In the year 1737 we have the first name of a local boat, — La Marguerite, — whose "second captain" was Louis Pierre Sevet, and later is named Mr. Ællon as captain of the boat (bateau), but her name is not given. In 1758 was buried in the hospital cemetery André Miot, patron for the king, and in the same year died Jean Girard also, while a few years afterwards is mentioned a new patron, — J. B. Nicaise, called Vade Bon Cœur; the last of the French boat captains.

Pascagoula river plantations in which he illustrates in some detail the plantation of the Sr. De la Pointe and the Chaumont Concession (see figure 17).[31] This drawing is somewhat earlier than the one of the Chouachas, for a notation on the back records that it "came with the letter of M. de La Chaise of the 30 October, 1726." The Krebs house at Pascagoula, already mentioned, is said to have been part of this De la Pointe plantation (see figure 18), but it is not readily identifiable from Dumont's sketch. It is significant that in both the properties illustrated here, two-storied, galleried buildings are shown as had been shown in the 1719 sketch of Dauphin Island whereas such buildings did not at first appear in New Orleans.

In New Orleans, building techniques advanced through the various forms of wood construction to half-timbered structures with brick-between-posts. Not until 1730, when Pierre Baron built a new prison on the Place d'Armes was the first all-brick building constructed.[32]

This was followed in 1732 by great brick barracks buildings flanking the public square[33] and other private houses of brick. The heavy weight of these all-masonry structures presented structural difficulties and eventually buildings with a first story of brick and the upper one of brick-between-posts came to be favored.

One of the most significant structures of brick-between-posts was the large, three-story convent built for the Ursuline Nuns when they arrived in the colony in 1727 (See figure 19).[34] Ignace François Broutin, who had become acting engineer-of-the-King after Pauger's death in 1726, designed the building; Pierre Baron re-designed it in his own favorite style, where the handsome timber framing of the brick-between-posts construction was left exposed as a picturesque decorative element. Impractical in the damp climate, the convent soon deteriorated and had to be replaced by a new building. Broutin designed this new all brick building in 1745; Bernard Deverges, engineer-in-chief of Louisiana after Broutin's death in 1751, completed it in 1752. This impressive, dignified, Louis XV style building still stands, the only known building surviving intact from the French colonial period (see figure 20). Inside, the great cypress staircase, constructed of heavy timbers with decorative carvings of acanthus leaves and its wrought iron handrail, was reused from the earlier convent of 1727-1734 (see figure 21). This is perhaps the earliest artifact of French colonial production in Louisiana.[35] The lead weatherboards. These buildings were typical of the structures erected along the Gulf Coast during early years of the French colonial period.

The curiously naïve drawings of François Benjamin Dumont de Montigny form the most extensive corpus of graphic representations of these early years. Although not conspicuous for their accuracy of detail, Dumont's drawings, with their wealth of notations, give information concerning the Gulf Coast architecture found in no other source. Many of them were adapted for the engraved illustrations for his Memoires Historique sur la Louisiane, published in Paris in 1753. Many of them are contained in the long manuscript poem in the Bibliotheque de l'Arcenal in Paris, at the front of which some former owner or editor has noted that "It appears that the author of this poem was a M. Dumont. His verses are detestable but there are some singular things . . . This poem contains 4692 verses in all."

Another important, illustrated, Dumont manuscript is in the Newberry Library in Chicago, and many more of his drawings are preserved in the Bibliotheque Nationale and the Archives Nationales in Paris. Some of these are slightly different versions of the same subject, and although many are unsigned, the distinctive primitive style leaves little doubt as to their authorship.

One of Dumont's drawings (see figure 13) shows the "Lodging of the Author at New Orleans" with the principal house, kitchen, and house for the negroes, pavillion, willow tree serving as a henhouse, trellis for vines, first garden, a sort of pond, large garden, oven, and a "ladder by which the chickens get up to the tree to roost." The gardens are laid out in formal French fashion; the flower garden and trellis all fenced off behind the house and outbuildings and separated by the pond and a bridge from the vegetable garden and orchards in the rear.[26] The entire property, which was probably located on Bourbon Street near Bienville, is surrounded by palisade fences as required by the acts of concession. An engraving in the published memoirs shows a similar development on a smaller, typical town lot and indicates that the buildings were of the simplest posts in the ground construction.[27] Dumont also gives detailed directions for building cabins of this sort, roofed with cypress bark or palmetto leaves. He adds that "in a country so well wooded as is Louisiana, it would not be difficult to lodge one's self, since one can, at so little expense, build a house there in twenty four hours."[28]

Similar in character to his New Orleans house drawing is one that he made of The Chouachas, one of the most important plantations on the lower Mississippi, located on the west bank of the river below New Orleans. (See figure 14).[29] This plantation had been established as part of the extensive concessions made in 1719 by John Law's "Company of the Indies" to the Duc de Belle Isle and several associates, including the Marechal d'Asfeld, director-general of fortifications of France, and successor to the Marechal de Vauban, Louis XIV's great military engineer. Le Blond de La Tour, engineer-in-chief of Louisiana, served as director of these concessions until his death in 1723 and probably designed the principal buildings of the Chouachas plantation. On the levee in front was the large "cross of the missions" to identify the location to missionaries traveling on the river. The principal buildings were enclosed by a large palisade fence. The rather pretentious house for the manager was set off by a typical French pigeon cote and a similarly shaped belfry for the plantation bell. Flanking the manager's house were the service buildings; the barns, indigo works, and negro cabins were in the fields beyond. A formal potager or vegetable garden was enclosed by another palisade fence behind the manager's house. Outside the fence was a hedge, probably of orange trees. All the buildings seem to be of one story. The drawing was probably made about 1736, for in 1737, the plantation had been sold by its absentee owners, and it became known as "Concession Plantation," a name by which the site is still recognized.

Dumont's crude drawings give little detail of the construction of the buildings, but Alexander De Batz's series of drawings made in 1731, at the time of the retrocession of the colony by the Company of the Indies to the King, supplies this deficency.[30] De Batz showed all the buildings of the Company's plantation across the river opposite New Orleans, including the Manager's two-story, brick-between-posts house, occupied by the historian Le Page du Pratz, who served as plantation manager there until his departure from Louisiana in 1734 (see figure 15). Included among De Batz's drawings of the Company's plantation are plans of the water mill (see figure 16), the negro cabins, and hospital. These buildings may have been designed either by Le Page, who claimed to be an architect, or by Pierre Baron, who was then the King's engineer in Louisiana.

Of particular interest and importance to students of early Gulf Coast architecture are Dumont's map and drawings of the

of security to prevent the freed person from becoming a public charge was observed. James Germany, an Indian trader, freed his man, Gloucester, because of long and faithful service.[106] Charles Parent of Mobile, in consideration of faithful service and other good causes, gave freedom to a mulatto woman, Juliet Vilars, who was to receive all of the cattle marked "IVi" in his herd and all of her clothing.[107] Mary Anne, a "creole" Negro of Mobile, purchased her freedom with eighty dollars which she had earned while in her master's service.[108]

Social conditions characteristic of the institution of slavery were bound to exist. Louis Fornent of Mobile freed his Negro woman, Mary, with her three mulatto children and provided thirty head of cattle for their maintenance. He reserved for himself the right to dispose of the cattle for their support and stipulated that the mother and children should live with him and obey him during the remainder of his natural life; "and," the remarkable paper concluded, "should the above named Negro woman hereafter have other mulatto children by me, during my natural lifetime, said children shall be equally entitled to a share of the aforementioned cattle with the mother and children now or then in being."[109] Pierre Rochon of Charlotte County (the district around Mobile), "being moved by paternal affection," freed his six mulatto children and directed that their mother should be free after his death; a heifer was provided for the support of each child. It was specified that the children should remain with him until his death, after which they were to be advised by a certain René Roi.[110] Dunbar mentions the birth of a mulatto baby on his plantation, but he does not give any suggestion as to its paternity.[111]

There is an occasional reference to Indian slaves, but these were the exception and not the rule. The English government was anxious to hold the friendship of the neighboring tribes, and the kidnaping of Indians for the purpose of selling them into slavery, a practice common in the Carolinas during the frontier period in those provinces, would have made impossible the good-will policy of the mother country and would have driven the natives into the hands of the Spaniards, who were constantly suspected of tampering with them.

White servitude existed in the colony but indentured servants were not nearly so numerous as slaves. An early law was entitled "An Act for the Regulation of Servants." It contained a number of provisions calculated to govern the relationship of master and servant and was distinctly mild in character. No servant was to be sold out of the province without his consent, and all sales of servants were to be made in the presence of a justice of the peace. A servant who had served at least four years was to be given a new suit of apparel and thirty shillings sterling on the expiration of his term. A bargain made with a servant during the period of his indenture to increase his term of service was not binding. The master was to provide his servant with sufficient meat and drink, and was not to burden him beyond his strength or immoderately to correct him. Nor was the master to cast adrift a servant who was ill with a disease contracted during his period of servitude.

On the other hand, a servant who absented himself without the consent of his master was to make up the time lost at the rate of five days for one. A servant who clandestinely disposed of the goods of his master was required to restore three-fold. A servant convicted before two justices of the peace for insolence to his master might be whipped by order of the court, but the punishment should not exceed thirty-nine lashes. A dispute between a master and a servant was to be tried in a summary way before two justices, but an appeal was allowed to the court of quarter sessions, though a penalty might be levied on persons who back into the middle ages where the researcher might spend many months and still continue to find new things.

The above information was gleaned from a six page article in the Genealogists' Magazine, published in London, September, 1946.

Regarding printed genealogies the author has this comment: "Finally we have the printed sources, the genealogical works of the judges of arms and kings genealogists, the monks of St. Maur such as Pere Anselme and a number of professional and amateur genealogists who are more or less reliable, not to say more or less honest or trustworthy . . . . . A guide to the printed works on heraldry and genealogy is the Bibliotheque heraldique de la France by Joannis Guigard, published in Paris in 1861. For later works one has to wade through the printed or hand written indexes of the National Library, which from my own experiences is a tedious and not very satisfactory process."

In the closing paragraphs he tells us that the Departmental Archivists are most helpful and also as a rule, are the secretaries of the town halls in the important towns all over France where the old parish registers and the modern vital statistics are kept. At the National Library and the National Archives one must rely entirely on the manuscript and printed indexes. A letter of introduction from the Embassy is required of those who would examine these indexes.

GERMANY

The German people during the past several centuries have been a record keeping people. Some church records have information since early in the sixteenth century. Birth, marriage, and death records are generally available since the nineteenth century. Census records have also been kept for many years, as have parish and Protestant church records. In some provinces the real estate records are among the most valuable. Burger rolls, tax lists, and police registers assist in giving accurate identification. The German police method of keeping track of every individual arriving in any city or locality, is important in tracing individuals or families from one city to another.

To most Americans interested in German genealogy it is necessary to employ researchers in Germany. They can be located in many German cities. Care should be taken to secure

A great deal of information and many records from Germany are now on file in the library of the Genealogical Society of Utah, Salt Lake City, Utah 84111. Those not acquainted with the research situations in Germany may find it advantageous to correspond with that office before employing a researcher.

MILITARY OCCUPATION ZONES OF GERMANY

Some controversy and confusion arises when one attempts to name, locate and establish the capitals of the state and zones of Germany. The accompanying map has the boundaries and capitols similar to those found in "Hammond's Ambassador World Atlas", published by C.S. Hammond & Co., Maplewood, N.J., Third Printing 1956. Memorial of Sieur de Merveilleux Concerning the Establishment of a Fort, On the Pascagoula River for the Trade with the Choctaw Nation, Where There Should Be a Storehouse.

First The said post should not and cannot be established except in the place where the River can carry flat boats or pirogues, in order to transport merchandise there.

According to the reports and testimony of several Canadians, old-traders on said River, among others the Sieurs Carriere old inhabitants of Mobile, who all say that said River can carry flat boats or pirogues up to the villages of the Chickasaws located on the same River, and which is one of the villages of the Choctaw nation, all when the waters are high; and when the waters are low one can only travel easily as far as the village of the Ouanis, also located on the River at 50 leagues lower than the Chickasaws.

(Note in margin): It should be noted that this river has high and low (tides? stages?) like the Mississippi River.

Said Sieur de Merveilleux, in case the Company might wish to honor him with its consideration, promises with the aid of God and that of the Company, to furnish it with what is simply necessary to establish a fort sufficient to provide protection from Indian insults and to carry on trade to the commercial advantage of the Company.

Article 1

To carry this out, he requests a detachment of 30 good men of his choice from the garrison at New Orleans, with a subordinate officer, and a sergeant, said 30 soldiers will live on their usual salary allocation of 9 livres 10 sols a month. The officer and the sergeant to be treated separately as well as 2 men in the number of the 30 who are truly good carpenters, and a good smith.

Article 2

Let there be furnished 6 male Negroes from the Indies and 1 Negress to feed them and all of them to work on the "Eboulement des Terres du fort" (literally, the landslide of the fort) and let there be 2 among them who know how to saw lengthwise. These Negroes and Negress will be sent to wherever the Company considers it appropriate at the end of 3 months, since they will not be needed after this time.

(Note in margin): The Company will allocate the amount it will deem necessary, or trading merchandise, for the 3 months food for these Negroes.

Article 3

He requests 6 cast iron "serviers" (no doubt some piece of heavy artillery) with 300 pounds of powder, and 600 pounds of musket balls and 300 flints, another 100 linstocks. All this is to remain in the storehouse on the Company's account in case of need for the defense of the fort, without forgetting 30 good and especially solid spare rifles for the soldiers.

(Note in margin): It is worthwhile to note that the Choctaw nation must number some 6000 men according to the reports of all the explorers; and that, consequently it is wise to be fortified with arms and war munitions.

Article 4

Tools and hardware necessary for the construction of the fort

First 100 good axes made and designed by the hand of the best master of New Orleans
12 good adzes, 2 bevelling tools, 6 long saws, 6 cross saws, 6 hand saws, 24 "terrieres" (no doubt some type of digging implement) large and small and of all varieties, a completely outfitted forge, 600 pounds of nails, with more large nails than small, 50 shovels, 50 pickaxes, 30 angle irons and 15 iron clubs

(Note in margin): Mortar will suffice.

Article 5

The Company can see what the returns will be for the quantity of tools and hardware necessary according to Article 4 listed above. Merveilleux only requests the sum of 1000 livres payable in suitable trading merchandise, and the said 1000 livres to pay the wages of the soldiers who will work on the construction of the fort. It is understood that the Company will furnish the tools mentioned in Article 4 free of cost, they will remain at the fort for the service of the Company.

Article 6

He requests exclusive trading rights on said river for the entire Choctaw nation, and by preference to others, as much merchandise of his choice from the storehouse as will be necessary for said trade, in return for which Merveilleux binds himself to the Company to furnish it with all the merchandise in skins that he will trade. Without exception at the price that they actually bring at the storehouse which is 30 sols for a deer skin in good condition, etc.

Article 7

He requests that the Company assure him in advance of 4000 livres worth of suitable merchandise that he will be obligated to reimburse to the Company in skins and other commodities that he can get from the Indians. He will reimburse the 4000 livres in thirds at each delivery that he will make. The first at the latest in 6 months from the time he will have received the money, merchandise and other items.

Article 8

He requests likewise that the Company furnish him each year 2 hogsheads of wine, 2 quarts of brandy, 6 quarts of flour, 3 quarts of lard and that the Company give such a positive order about this to the Council to have this delivered to him that there will be no difficulties about it. He requests in addition that his trading merchandise be furnished to him at Mobile as well as his living needs etc. and that he might also send his merchandise in skins to said storehouse at Mobile.

Most Excellent Sir, Don Luis de las Casas

Bundle 1442
Letter #315

Most Excellent Sir:

The captain of this fixed regiment, Don [L.C. 398] Manuel de Lanson, commandant of the post at Mobile, on the 15th of this month tells me the following:

Yesterday the 14th, Antonio Sanchez presented himself, who, according to what he says, comes as a pilot on a sloop [balandra] of the King, named San Luis, which armed eight cannons and a crew of twenty-four men in charge of a marine officer, Don Antonio Robles, left the port of Havana for Pensacola.

This pilot says that after traveling some time, they took shelter on the island called Petit Bois de Massacre having anchored there, he with two marines and the first officer, Don Manuel Ladron de Guevarra, went ashore, and while on the mentioned island, the wind was so [L.C. 399] strong that the anchors would not hold and the sloop made sail for the outside, abandoning the boat and men who were on land, in order to avoid danger of being lost. That after quieting down, those of the boat embarked in order to reach firm land, and in crossing a good distance the wind became very strong again; the boat being very delicate and of bad construction, capsized with the first waves, drowing one marine, the first officer swimming to the mentioned island half dead, and the other two very much fatigued. That after loosing their boat, they found an old canoe, in which they arrived at the house of Francisco Krebs [Kraps], inhabitant of Pascagoula, who with his neighbors received the stranded with the greatest kindness, assisting them with all necessities in order to recuperate from their misfortune, but the mentioned first officer, Don Manuel Ladron de Guevarra, died thirty-six hours after arriving at said house, without leaving a will or testament. The pilot reports that he thinks he is a native of Havana, and a brother of Madam Serrano.

The commandant adds that the pilot and the marine [L.C. 400] were convalescent and expected to send them to Pensacola by the first opportunity. I am informing Your Excellency for the purpose it may serve, and you may inform those to whom it may concern. I should mention to Your Excellency that the sloop, San Luis, has been at the pass of this river since the 6th of this month; that at the urgency of its captain, Don Antonio Robles, a launch of the other crew was furnished him by the chief pilot to sail to search for his boat and people, and that afterwards he sent to Plaquemine [the early designation of what is now Fort St. Philip on the Mississippi] soliciting a pilot in order to sail with four men to lake of Mardi-Gras to be closer to the islands where he believed he had left his boat. The commandant of Plaquemine, Don Felix Trudeau, furnished him a pirogue, and the pilot, Sebastian Buva, who has returned without having encountered [L.C. 401] any sign whatsoever of them on all of the island, Breton, where the captain and marines think they had left their crew.

May God guard Your Excellency many years.

were not, however, woven into the more substantial mats as described by Father du Ru and shown in De Batz's drawing. The constsruction methods described for the early buildings at the first site of Mobile continued in use along the Gulf Coast and along the lower Mississippi for over a century.

The Sr. Chevillot included captions and interesting notes about the buildings and the construction on his plans for the new Fort Louis of Mobile in 1711.[12] He recorded that "the fort is constructed of cedar timbers fourteen inches square and thirteen feet high, of which two and a half feet are driven into the ground, planted closely one against the other. The upper ends of these stakes terminate in a point, like palisades." Inside the fort were only the Governor's house, the King's warehouse, and a corps de garde; the officers, soldiers, and settlers all lived in the town. Their houses, according to Chevillot were:

> constructed of cedar or pine timbers, supported on a foundation of a number of wooden stakes driven a foot into the ground. These might be called piles, for this terrain in some places is inundated in rainy weather, as shown marked on the plan. Some people, to support their houses, use a stone that is like a sort of tufa. It is quite soft and would be marvelous for building fine buildings. This stone is obtained eighteen leagues above the new establishment, along the banks of the Mobile river. The houses are 18, 20 to 25 feet and more in height. Some are lower, constructed with a mortar made of earth and lime.

He then noted that "This lime is made from oyster shells that are found at the entrance of the river on small islands bearing that name." The houses, constructed of earth and lime mortar made from oyster shells, were probably of the same material and construction found in the De la Pointe-Krebs house at Pascagoula, undoubtedly one of the earliest houses on the Gulf Coast (see figure 6).

The stone referred to was probably a form of Alabama limestone, but its use did not become common, for as Chevillot said:

> The stone that is used for the houses is rare and not common for lack of transports that would be needed for it and for which no one wishes to make the expense. This would be of great help, for those whose houses are only supported on wooden stakes are obliged to change them every three to four years because the wood rots in the ground.

Although the buildings of the new Fort Louis were probably more substantial than before, the hope of creating an orderly and well-planned city in the Vauban military tradition failed. The streets, so regularly laid out on Chevillot's plan, soon lost their original definition, and the plans of the French founders have had little influence on the plan of present-day Mobile (see figure 7).

Indian Construction Methods

Father du Ru employed Indian methods of design and construction substantially without change. As time went on, these methods were combined with European and Canadian precedent to produce types of construction which remained in use in Louisiana and along the Gulf Coast for centuries. Many houses of mud and moss construction in wood frames are still found throughout the bayou country and along the river.

Of particular interest when considering the beginnings of Gulf Coast architecture is Le Page du Pratz's excellent description of building an Indian house. Le Page du Pratz, an architect and historian who lived at Natchez and New Orleans between 1718 and 1734, wrote:

> The cabins of the natives are all perfect squares. There are none less than fifteen feet wide in every direction, but there are some that are more than thirty. Let us see their manner of constructing them.
>
> The natives go back into the woods to seek poles from young walnut trees, of four inches in diameter by eighteen to twenty feet long. They plant the thickest ones in the four corners to form its width and the dome. But before placing the others, they prepare the scaffold. It is composed of four poles attached together at the top, and the bottom ends are secured to the four corners. On these four poles others are attached across at a foot apart. This whole makes a four faced ladder or four ladders joined together.
> That done, the other poles are planted in the ground in a straight line between the corner ones. When they are thus planted they are strongly tied to a pole which crosses them inside each face. For this purpose they use thick cane wicker for tying them at the height of five or six feet according to the size of the cabin. This is what forms the walls. These standing poles are distant from each other only around fifteen inches. A young man afterwards mounts to the end of one of the corner poles with a cord in his teeth. He attaches the cord to the poles, and as he climbs on the inside, the pole bends because those who are at the bottom draw the cord in order to make the pole bend as much as is necessary. At the same time another young man does the same to the headquarters to the site of old Fort Maurepas on Biloxi Bay. Here on December 17, 1720, Le Blond de La Tour arrived as engineer-in-chief of Louisiana,[20] accompanied by two of his assistants, the Chevalier de Boispinel and Charles Franquet de Chaville. The engineer in second, Adrien de Pauger, had arrived there a few weeks before. Almost immediately, these first official, trained, military engineers produced plans for a Vauban-type fortified town to be constructed across the bay where the city of Biloxi now stands. These fine drawings, rendered in water color, were presented on January 8, 1721, to the council which selected a plan of medium size and authorized its construction (see figure 10). Not much progress had been made when the project was abandoned, and the capital was moved to New Orleans in 1722.

At the time of de La Tour's arrival, the site of New Biloxi was already being used for the disembarkation of concessions coming from France to develop their large land grants on the Mississippi. They were lured by the glowing accounts of John Law's Company of the West. Here Law's own concession established an elaborate camp where its people were building large shallow-draft boats to move to their sites on the Mississippi. This camp with its tents, buildings, and construction activities is shown in a remarkable drawing dated December 10, 1720, which is in Chicago's Newberry Library. Jean Baptiste Michel Le Buteux, who did the drawing, is little-known except for his skill as an artist and draftsman and as sub-director of the Law concession. Elias St. Huteus, director general of the concession, ordered the drawing made. He died soon afterwards in New Orleans and was the first known to be buried on the site of the parish church, the present St. Louis Cathedral.[21] This large, detailed drawing is undoubtedly an authentic representation of the camp and depicts the earliest types of buildings the French constructed along the Gulf Coast.

Of all the structures shown, only the warehouse, 80 feet long and 25 wide with a steeply pitched, hipped roof, covered with wood shingles, seems to be of anything but temporary construction. This building, typically French or Canadian in mass and form, is of colombage, a wood frame of columns or studs erected on timber sills laid flat on the ground without foundations. Walls and roof trusses were generally assembled on the ground and then raised into position; the exterior walls were then enclosed with horizontal boards.

The first buildings designed by Le Blond de La Tour for erection in New Orleans were also of this same colombage construction, as shown on his drawing dated January 3, 1723.[22] There were four barracks for the workmen sent to build the new city; a small hospital; and La Direction, a splendid house for the local directors of the Company of the Indies. None of these buildings had galleries, although within a few years, Pauger had added them to the front and rear of La Direction and had also added two-story pavillions at its two ends. He boasted of this structure as the finest building yet seen in the colony. In 1724, he designed and wrote a lengthy specification for a wind and horse mill that was built on the levee at the upper end of the town. Adrien Gilbert was the contractor for this elaborate and complex bit of timber construction.[23] The same year Pauger designed the parish church for New Orleans of timber framing enclosed with boards, proposing great timber props or buttresses alongside so that this large structure could better resist hurricane winds (see figure 11). When built, the foundation was done in brick, as a brickyard had by then been established.[24] The buttressing props were omitted and, for stability, the spaces between the wall timbers were filled with brick, resulting in the well known brick-between-posts construction that was to be used in the area until well into the latter half of the nineteenth century. In country areas, bouzillage, a mixture of mud and moss, was often used instead of brick and in some structures like the Krebs house in Pascagoula lime from oyster shells was mixed with the mud to produce a more durable, concrete-like material.

New Orleans and the Gulf Coast, 1721-1763

Perhaps the earliest important view of New Orleans was the large "Veve et Perspective de la Nouvelle Orleans, 1726," drawn by surveyor Jean Pierre Lassus (see figure 12).[25] Lassus with his brother, Joseph Lassus de Marsilly, arrived in New Orleans in 1725 as assistants to the engineer Pauger, who complained that they were better at drawing pretty pictures than at producing accurate surveys. This remarkable drawing, 56 by 17½ inches, shows the developing city emerging from the dense forests along the Mississippi, the new parish church under construction, and Pauger's great windmill at the upper end of the town. For the most part, the other buildings are simple structures of colombage, boarded on the exterior and with hipped roofs covered with split cypress shingles or with long slabs of bark laid on the roofs like weatherboards. These buildings were typical of the structures erected along the Gulf Coast during early years of the French colonial period.

The curiously naïve drawings of François Benjamin Dumont de Montigny form the most extensive corpus of graphic representations of these early years. Although not conspicuous for their accuracy of detail, Dumont's drawings, with their wealth of notations, give information concerning the Gulf Coast architecture found in no other source. Many of them were adapted for the engraved illustrations for his Memoires Historique sur la Louisiane, published in Paris in 1753. Many of them are contained in the long manuscript poem in the Bibliotheque de l'Arcenal in Paris, at the front of which some former owner or editor has noted that "It appears that the author of this poem was a M. Dumont. His verses are detestable but there are some singular things . . . This poem contains 4692 verses in all."

Another important, illustrated, Dumont manuscript is in the Newberry Library in Chicago, and many more of his drawings are preserved in the Bibliotheque Nationale and the Archives Nationales in Paris. Some of these are slightly different versions of the same subject, and although many are unsigned, the distinctive primitive style leaves little doubt as to their authorship.

One of Dumont's drawings (see figure 13) shows the "Lodging of the Author at New Orleans" with the principal house, kitchen, and house for the negroes, pavillion, willow tree serving as a henhouse, trellis for vines, first garden, a sort of pond, large garden, oven, and a "ladder by which the chickens get up to the tree to roost." The gardens are laid out in formal French fashion; the flower garden and trellis all fenced off behind the house and outbuildings and separated by the pond and a bridge from the vegetable garden and orchards in the rear.[26] The entire property, which was probably located on Bourbon Street near Bienville, is surrounded by palisade fences as required by the acts of concession. An engraving in the published memoirs shows a similar development on a smaller, typical town lot and indicates that the buildings were of the simplest posts in the ground construction.[27] Dumont also gives detailed directions for building cabins of this sort, roofed with cypress bark or palmetto leaves. He adds that "in a country so well wooded as is Louisiana, it would not be difficult to lodge one's self, since one can, at so little expense, build a house there in twenty four hours."[28]

Similar in character to his New Orleans house drawing is one that he made of The Chouachas, one of the most important plantations on the lower Mississippi, located on the west bank of the river below New Orleans. (See figure 14).[29] This plantation had been established as part of the extensive concessions made in 1719 by John Law's "Company of the Indies" to the Duc de Belle Isle and several associates, including the Marechal d'Asfeld, director-general of fortifications of France, and successor to the Marechal de Vauban, Louis XIV's great military engineer. Le Blond de La Tour, engineer-in-chief of Louisiana, served as director of these concessions until his death in 1723 and probably designed the principal buildings of the Chouachas plantation. On the levee in front was the large "cross of the missions" to identify the location to missionaries traveling on the river. The principal buildings were enclosed by a large palisade fence. The rather pretentious house for the manager was set off by a typical French pigeon cote and a similarly shaped belfry for the plantation bell. Flanking the manager's house were the service buildings; the barns, indigo works, and negro cabins were in the fields beyond. A formal potager or vegetable garden was enclosed by another palisade fence behind the manager's house. Outside the fence was a hedge, probably of orange trees. All the buildings seem to be of one story. The drawing was probably made about 1736, for in 1737, the plantation had been sold by its absentee owners, and it became known as "Concession Plantation," a name by which the site is still recognized.

Dumont's crude drawings give little detail of the construction of the buildings, but Alexander De Batz's series of drawings made in 1731, at the time of the retrocession of the colony by the Company of the Indies to the King, supplies this deficency.[30] De Batz showed all the buildings of the Company's plantation across the river opposite New Orleans, including the Manager's two-story, brick-between-posts house, occupied by the historian Le Page du Pratz, who served as plantation manager there until his departure from Louisiana in 1734 (see figure 15). Included among De Batz's drawings of the Company's plantation are plans of the water mill (see figure 16), the negro cabins, and hospital. These buildings may have been designed either by Le Page, who claimed to be an architect, or by Pierre Baron, who was then the King's engineer in Louisiana.

Of particular interest and importance to students of early Gulf Coast architecture are Dumont's map and drawings of the Pascagoula river plantations in which he illustrates in some detail the plantation of the Sr. De la Pointe and the Chaumont Concession (see figure 17).[31] This drawing is somewhat earlier than the one of the Chouachas, for a notation on the back records that it "came with the letter of M. de La Chaise of the 30 October, 1726." The Krebs house at Pascagoula, already mentioned, is said to have been part of this De la Pointe plantation (see figure 18), but it is not readily identifiable from Dumont's sketch. It is significant that in both the properties illustrated here, two-storied, galleried buildings are shown as had been shown in the 1719 sketch of Dauphin Island whereas such buildings did not at first appear in New Orleans.

In New Orleans, building techniques advanced through the various forms of wood construction to half-timbered structures with brick-between-posts. Not until 1730, when Pierre Baron built a new prison on the Place d'Armes was the first all-brick building constructed.[32]

This was followed in 1732 by great brick barracks buildings flanking the public square[33] and other private houses of brick. The heavy weight of these all-masonry structures presented structural difficulties and eventually buildings with a first story of brick and the upper one of brick-between-posts came to be favored.

One of the most significant structures of brick-between-posts was the large, three-story convent built for the Ursuline Nuns when they arrived in the colony in 1727 (See figure 19).[34] Ignace François Broutin, who had become acting engineer-of-the-King after Pauger's death in 1726, designed the building; Pierre Baron re-designed it in his own favorite style, where the handsome timber framing of the brick-between-posts construction was left exposed as a picturesque decorative element. Impractical in the damp climate, the convent soon deteriorated and had to be replaced by a new building. Broutin designed this new all brick building in 1745; Bernard Deverges, engineer-in-chief of Louisiana after Broutin's death in 1751, completed it in 1752. This impressive, dignified, Louis XV style building still stands, the only known building surviving intact from the French colonial period (see figure 20). Inside, the great cypress staircase, constructed of heavy timbers with decorative carvings of acanthus leaves and its wrought iron handrail, was reused from the earlier convent of 1727-1734 (see figure 21). This is perhaps the earliest artifact of French colonial production in Louisiana.[35] The lead

His Majesty No. 351
To the Intendant, June 6, 1793

Most Excellent Sir, Don Luis de las Casas

Bundle 1442
Letter #315

Most Excellent Sir:

The captain of this fixed regiment, Don (L.C. 398) Manuel de Lansos, commandant of the post at Mobile, on the 15th of this month tells me the following:

Yesterday the 14th, Antonio Sanchez presented himself, who, according to what he says, comes as a pilot on a sloop (belandre) of the King, named San Luis, which armed eight cannons and a crew of twenty-four men in charge of a marine officer, Don Antonio Robles, left the port of Havana for Pensacola.

This pilot says that after traveling some time, they took shelter on the island called Petit Bois de Massacre having anchored there, he with two marines and the first officer, Don Manuel Ladron de Guevarra, went ashore, and while on the mentioned island, the wind was so (L.C. 399) strong that the anchors would not hold and the sloop made sail for the outside, abandoning the boat and the men who were on land, in order to avoid danger of being lost. That after quieting down, those of the boat embarked in order to reach firm land, and in crossing a good distance the wind became very strong again; the boat being very delicate and of bad construction, capsized with the first waves, drowning one marine, the first officer swimming to the mentioned island half dead, and the other two very much fatigued. That after loosing their boat, they found an old canue, in which they arrived at the house of Francisco Krebs (Kraps), inhabitant of Pascagoula, who with his neighbors received the stranded with the greatest kindness, assisting them with all necessities in order to recuperate from their misfortune, but the mentioned first officer, Don Manuel Ladron de Guevarra, died thirty-six hours after arriving at said house, without leaving a will or testament. The pilot reports that he thinks he is a native of Havana, and a brother of Madam Serrano.

The commandant adds that the pilot and the marine (L.C.400) were convalescent and expected to send them to Pensacola by the first opportunity. I am informing Your Excellency for the purpose it may serve, and you may inform those to whom it may concern. I should mention to Your Excellency that the sloop, San Luis, has been at the pass of this river since the 6th of this month; that at the urgency of its captain, Don Antonio Robles, a launch of the other crew was furnished him by the chief pilot to sail to search for his boat and people, and that afterwards he sent to Plaquemine (the early designation of what is now Fort St. Philip on the Mississippi) soliciting a pilot in order to sail with four men to Lake of Mardi-Gras to be closer to the islands where he believed he had left his boat. The commandant of Plaquemine, Don Felix Trudeau, furnished him a pirogue, and the pilot, Sebastian Buva, who has returned without having encountered (L.C. 401) any sign whatsoever of them on all of the Island, Breton, where the captain and marines think they had left their crew.

May God guard Your Excellency many years.

five leagues east of Fort Biloxi; it is one league across and three leagues in circuit. At the mouth of this bay there is an island about one league away called Isle Ronde [25] because of its shape, but it is barren and uninhabited.

We continued along the mainland, always to the east, and found one league away a little river that is to this day called Rivière-aux-Poissons [26] because of the great quantity of fish found there. One league farther on is Pointe-aux-Chênes,[27] a fine place for hunting and for the great quantity of pheasants, bustards, ducks, and teal found there, half again larger than those in France. As we continued our route eastward, we came upon a river three leagues farther on, called Aderbane,[28] ten leagues distant from Biloxi; it was named Aderbane for one of our Frenchmen that was lost there, and it is so named to this day. Three leagues farther on, there is a point named Pointe-aux-Huîtres [29] on account of the great abundance of oysters found there. This point is opposite an island [30] one league away. We crossed over to this island and landed.

When we disembarked, we became terrified upon find-

26 This river, which should be close to South Pascagoula, Mississippi, does not appear on the maps I have examined; nor does a Fish River, the translation.

27 The southeastern tip of Mississippi is still called Point[e] aux Chenes, which means Oak Point.

28 Bayou LaBatre, in Mobile County, Alabama. Early maps show it as Rivière-à-Derbane. A certain Sieur d'Herbanne was the keeper of the warehouse on Dauphin Island, nearby, on October 12, 1713, but I do not know that he was drowned or lost at Bayou LaBatre. See Hamilton, Colonial Mobile, p. 36, and Rowland and Sanders, MPA, II, 144.

29 Oyster Point, which is now called Cedar Point, is on the southwest shore of Mobile Bay, on Mon Louis Island. Hamilton mentions a nearby pass called Pass Sweet, which was developed by the folk from Passe-aux-Huîtres. (Colonial Mobile, p. 325.)

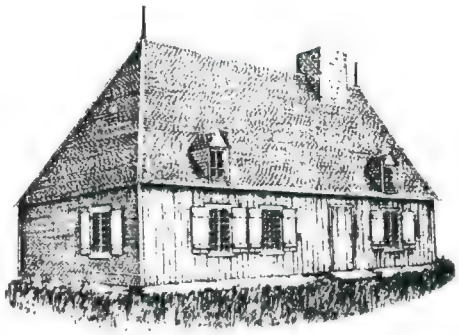
"OBSERVATIONS ON THE Colony of LA. 1796-1802 by PITOT



16. *The Paradise House, Charlesbourg, French Canada, as drawn by Carole Richards for Peter N. 17. A primitive Guatemalan house. This structure continues an early style developed by the colonials of the semitropical regions. (Photograph by Dr. Eugene Wilson, University of South Alabama. Used by permission.)

Here are more than thirty buildings, most of which bear witness to their French Colonial origin. The most famous of these buildings is the Bolduc House, restored in 1956–1957 (figure 18). An example of the early French construction can be seen at Pascagoula, in the so-called Old Spanish Fort, which was not a fort and was not Spanish (figure 19). The heavy timbers, poteaux sur sole, have an infilling of mud, clay, and moss fibers. The walls were originally plastered over, but large areas are now exposed, and the construction is visible. According to the bulletin published by the Old Spanish Fort Museum and the Mississippi Agricultural and Industrial Board, the land was granted to Joseph Simon de La Pointe, who is thought to have built a home there by 1726. The house and most of the outbuildings were destroyed in the 1772 hurricane that is described in Albert J. Pickett's History of Alabama. At the time, the property was owned by the daughter of La Pointe and her husband, Hugo E. Krebs. One building is believed to have survived, the old carpenter's shop, which has been called the Old Spanish Fort. It is not known whether it was built by La Pointe or by Krebs, but it is certainly in the French Colonial style.[11]

The same hurricane that destroyed the Krebs property did much damage to Mobile. According to Pickett, "Vessels, boats and logs were driven up into the heart of the town,—salt water overran the gardens—spray rose in the air and fell at the distance of half a mile—houses filled with water several feet deep."[12]

In 1760, toward the end of the French period, Phelypeaux drew a map of Mobile (figure 20). There is a second signature in the lower right corner of the map. After the English territory fell to the Spanish in 1780, Carlos Trudeau, a surveyor, fortunately found the French map and signed his name, adding the line, "Plano que je ha hallado en la tomado de la Mobile, 4 Mayo, 1780." The crown properties are indicated in red on the original. The palisade is outlined in yellow dots, as explained in the title of the map. These two colored areas obviously included most of the town. The main function of the settlement was still to serve the needs of the Fort. The main buildings were labeled: the Commissariat, the Magazine of the king, the Fort, and the Hospital. Barracks occupied the blocks to the north of the Fort as they did on the maps of 1723–1734.

The surface treatment of the buildings has been changed from that of the earlier half-timber construction. Years of experience with the torrential rains had led builders to alter the siding of the buildings. Three years after the Phelypeaux map had been drawn, the "Magazine for the reception of Provisions Constructed in Columbage of Brick [was] surrounded without with Planks, and covered with Shingles."[13] The older exterior plaster had been replaced by wood siding and the bark roof by shingles.

19. The Old Spanish Fort, Pascagoula, Mississippi, ca. 1726. The building is believed to be the surviving carpenter's shop of the La Pointe–Krebs estate. The construction is French in the roof trussing and has the roof extended over the galleries. The half-timber framing is made of heavy vertical posts infilled with a nogging of oyster shells, mud, and bits of organic material, all covered with a coat of plaster.

The few private dwellings indicated on the map were located either close to the Fort or within the palisaded square to the north, suggesting the continued need for protection in the still untamed wilderness of the mid-eighteenth century. The situation in early Jamestown, Virginia, was similar; the fortified settlement was without the comforts and amenities of the homeland.

The street orientation remained essentially the same as in the early days of the French occupation. While only one street name appears on the 1760 map (figure 20), others must have been adopted, for several of the modern streets have French names: Royal, Dauphin, St. Louis, Conti, and so forth. Where Conti now extends from Water west to Broad, the map shows the Rue de Tournée (not legible in figure 20). It was not uniform in width, like the other and moderate winds, allowing Gauld to set out in the cutter with a crew of sixteen men to resume his work. Taking up where he had left off, near the eastern end of Mississippi Sound, he surveyed and drafted on his field sheets the coastline as far as the west arm of the river known then as now by the name Pascagoula. Gauld's working drawings indicate that he ascended the east branch of the river some eight miles to "Pt. de l'auvergue" and the west branch about an equal distance. The coastal examination took him into the "Bay de Baros" (Portersville Bay, into which Bayou Le Batre flows), past "Pt. aux Herbes," along the shoreline of a large bay unnamed by him but now known as Grand Bay, around and over "Grande Batture or The Great Bank," and into "L'ance de Grande Bature," now known as Pointe aux Chênes Bay. From this bay Gauld rounded the Pointe aux Chênes, briefly examined part of the "Bay de Coussot" (Bayou Casotte), passed Pascagoula Bluff, and finally made his way into the west arm of the river and proceeded through a navigable cutoff to the east branch and thence to Hugo Krebs's plantation. Here the cutter anchored while Gauld enjoyed the hospitality of the most prominent planter on the coast. Krebs's plantation is now part of the city of Pascagoula, but his name is perpetuated in the nearby cove known as Krebs Lake.[16]

In describing the Pascagoula River, Gauld remarked that it emptied "through several mouths" and between the easternmost and westernmost, a distance of about four miles, was a continuous bed of oyster shells showing only sufficient depths for a boat. The sole navigable channel was in the westernmost branch, which had a depth of four feet. About twenty miles above its mouth this large river divided into two branches which descended southward about five or six miles apart with "nothing but low marshes, lagoons and intersections from one to the other" for several miles before they reached the sea. Inside the entrances, both branches deepened to three to six fathoms and were reported "to be navigable for upwards of 50 leagues to the heart of the Choctaw Nation." The soil along the river improved as one ascended; there were good plantations on the east side of the river, but

The alphabetical labeling and sequential numbering on Gauld's field sheets, when considered with the movements of the base vessel as reflected in the captain's journal, indicate the geographical order of this phase of his surveys.

CHAPTER 28

LaPOINTE

- o O o -

We can trace our LaPointe line as far back as any other with reasonable certainty. Not only that: but we know that the first one we list below is a third generation Québecois and believe we can, if we wish to spend the time, go to Québec and get further information.

IN ADDITION TO THE ABOVE, WE BELIEVE THIS IS THE FIRST OF OUR ANCESTORS TO COME TO WHAT WAS LATER NAMED "WEST FLORIDA" AND OUR EARLIEST ANCESTOR IN THESE PARTS.

- o O o -

JOSEPH SIMON, Sieur de LaPOINTE

This is your great-great-great-great-great-great-grandfather, from whom you have derived 1/256 of your blood.

Native of Québec in the Province of New France (which is now called the 'Dominion of Canada'), he was a 3rd generation Québecois. He was also a nephew of the famous Catherine Barré of Mons, known in history as Madame de Chaumont. Both Chaumont and his wife were from Flanders, which was not originally part of France, but he had taken the 'oath of allegiance' and is officially recorded in history as Secretary to the King.

The Chaumonts owned a castle on the Loire - that river south of the Seine that passes Tours and is the valley of castles. In fact, just a few months ago Pan-American Airways showed a picture of the Chaumont castle in a full-page advertisement in the National Geographic magazine.

As a very young man, our Joseph Simon, Sieur de LaPointe, went from Québec, New France, to France, probably with Iberville and his young brother Bienville, in order to join the expedition to settle a colony at or near the mouth of the Mississippi. A feverish race was then going on, ever since Robert Cavelier, Sieur de LaSalle, had discovered its mouth, to control that river. This was a bit before the master-promoter John Law became so prominent in French and in fact worldwide history.

Iberville's small party sailed from France direct to San Domingo (now called Haiti) and landed first at Cap Français. That part of this island had recently been captured from Spain by French pirates. Iberville inqured as to whether the Spanish had established a colony west of the Apalachicola river, and, being misinformed to the effect that the Spanish had not, he sailed direct to where Pensacola now is. To his chagrin, he found a Spanish colony, and immediately turned Westward to where Ocean Springs now is, and established the first "Biloxi".

Joseph Simon, Sieur de LaPointe was in this expedition and this was 1699 - just two hundred and sixty-eight years ago! and this is the first we know of of our blood entering this territory.

JOSEPH SIMON,
Sieur de
LaPOINTE

For a few years we are not entirely certain as to the whereabouts of LaPointe. We do know from many historical works, that Iberville explored Dauphin Island before going to the first Biloxi, and that he also made friends with the Choctaw Indians, went through Bayou Manchac and finally out into the Gulf and up the mouth of the Mississippi to where New Orleans now is. In fact, the oldest place name given by White people in what is now Louisiana was Bayou Mardi Gras and Mardi Gras Point, adjoining what is now known as Fort St. Philip, which name was given by Iberville and his party on Mardi Gras Day in 1699. What we do not know is whether LaPointe stayed at Fort Biloxi or continued on the trip.

Neither do we know whether he continued in this area as a settler or returned to Québec. But we do know that LaPointe secured a grant from Governor Cadillac for one square league of land on Dauphin Island, in order to raise cattle, when Mobile was on that island, was called "Mauvilla" and was the capital of Louisiana.

A terrific hurricane struck Dauphin Island in 1717, destroyed everything on the island and almost destroyed the island itself. Regardless of which definition of a "league" you take, the island at its widest point is not a league wide. Moreover, we also know that that hurricane created Sand Island and bottled up the port of Mobile for the following two hundred years (see Grant's Pass under the Chapter on Unruh).

We do not know whether LaPointe was married two or three times, nor whether our ancestress was his first or second wife. Official records do show clearly that his home was the center of Catholic activity in the Pascagoula area. The 1725 census gives him 3 children, and the 1726 census only two. He seems, too, to have had a great deal to do with the conduct of the concession granted to his aunt, Mme. de Chaumont, although her concession seems to have been a little further up the Pascagoula River than the so-called Old Spanish Fort, which he built with Indian labor and crushed oyster shells (see the chapter on Krebs). In fact, my story about the fort should be in this chapter instead of the Krebs chapter, but the Pascagoula Historical society emphasizes the Krebs name more than the LaPointe name.

I find a very interesting document in the St. Louis Cathedral. I will not give it to you entirely in French, because some of the words, and all of the construction are archaic to the extent that I cannot make them all out. But I can read enough of it to give you the sense in modern English, as follows:

> "In the year 1723, the 13th day of June, I have received the mutual consent of Mr. Joseph Simon, Sieur de LaPointe, a widower & a resident, and of Catherine Doucin, also a widow, and after the ceremonies of the Church and other formailties were duly observed, I, the undersigned priest, curé of Fort Louis, called the Biloxi, have given to them the Nuptial Benediction in marriage.
> "The Sieur de LaPointe recognizes a little girl about two years old of Catherine Doucin, born after a promise of marriage, whom he has legitimized

by a contract to marry, and whom he legitimizes again through the present ceremony, to the end that she will be treated equally in succession with the other children. Thus done in the presence of Charles Argron, Sieur de LaMothe, Louis L. Vergne, Charles Veillard, Jean Veillard and several other witnesses as well as J. S. LaPointe and some who declared they were unable to sign their names and made their marks. In faith of which I have signed, J. Vorez, Priest."

Now, don't get too badly shocked by the above document. There was a period of eight years that no priest visited Pascagoula or Mobile and it was an approved practice of the Church for a couple to meet with witnesses, sign a contract to marry as soon as a priest was available, and the ceremony was accepted. In fact, after more priests were available, the LaPointe home in Pascagoula was for years the meeting place for baptisms and marriages as well as the saying of Mass.

This document is just a resume of the original contract and church ceremony. The original may still be somewhere in the New Orleans archives, and the Presbytere is about to give the Genealogical Research Society of N. O., of which I am now a trustee, access to the ancient "Black Boxes." These are boxes painted black with ancient documents in them, and which are so old the authorities do not allow anybody to open them. If I find the original document we will know more about this famous man and his ancestors.

MOBILE BAY AND COAST, ABOUT 1732

JOSEPH SIMON, Sieur de LaPOINTE (Concluded)

On the map reproduced on the preceding page, note that LaPointe is the only individual's home identified by the owner's name, although the towns of Mobile and Pensacola are clearly shown.

So, you can truthfully say that several years before the government brought 30 convicts from France to clear the forest to build New Orleans our folks were living, first in Ocean Springs, then on Dauphin Island and finally at Pascagoula. (The convicts were salt bootleggers.)

I have guessed his death to have occurred in the 1740's.

- o O o -

JOSEPHE SIMON de LaPOINTE

This is your great-great-great-great-great-grandmother, from whom you have received 1/128 of your blood.

It would appear from the records (see p. 39) that she was the daughter of LaPointe's first wife, and not the second, the widow Doucin mentioned above. She must have been born about 1715, and thus I am supposing that it may have been on Dauphin Island.

In 1735 she married Hugo Ernestus von Krebs, at Pascagoula, and they had the following children:

Joseph Simon Krebs, born 1741 or 1742, married Marie Louise Dupont.

François Krebs, born 1742 or 1743, married Helene Maurau de Belleisle.

Pierre Krebs, born 1743, our ancestor, see chapter on Krebs.

Marie Josephe, born 1745, married Antoine Narbonne.

Matthias Krebs, Born 1745, died young.

Marie Marguerite, born 1749, married Juan deGradenigo of Venice.

Louis Augustin Krebs, born 1750, married Magdalina Durif.

She died at Pascagoula November 7, 1751.

- o Oo -

And thus, 215 years ago, the name of the first of your ancestors to settle in this country disappears from your genealogy.

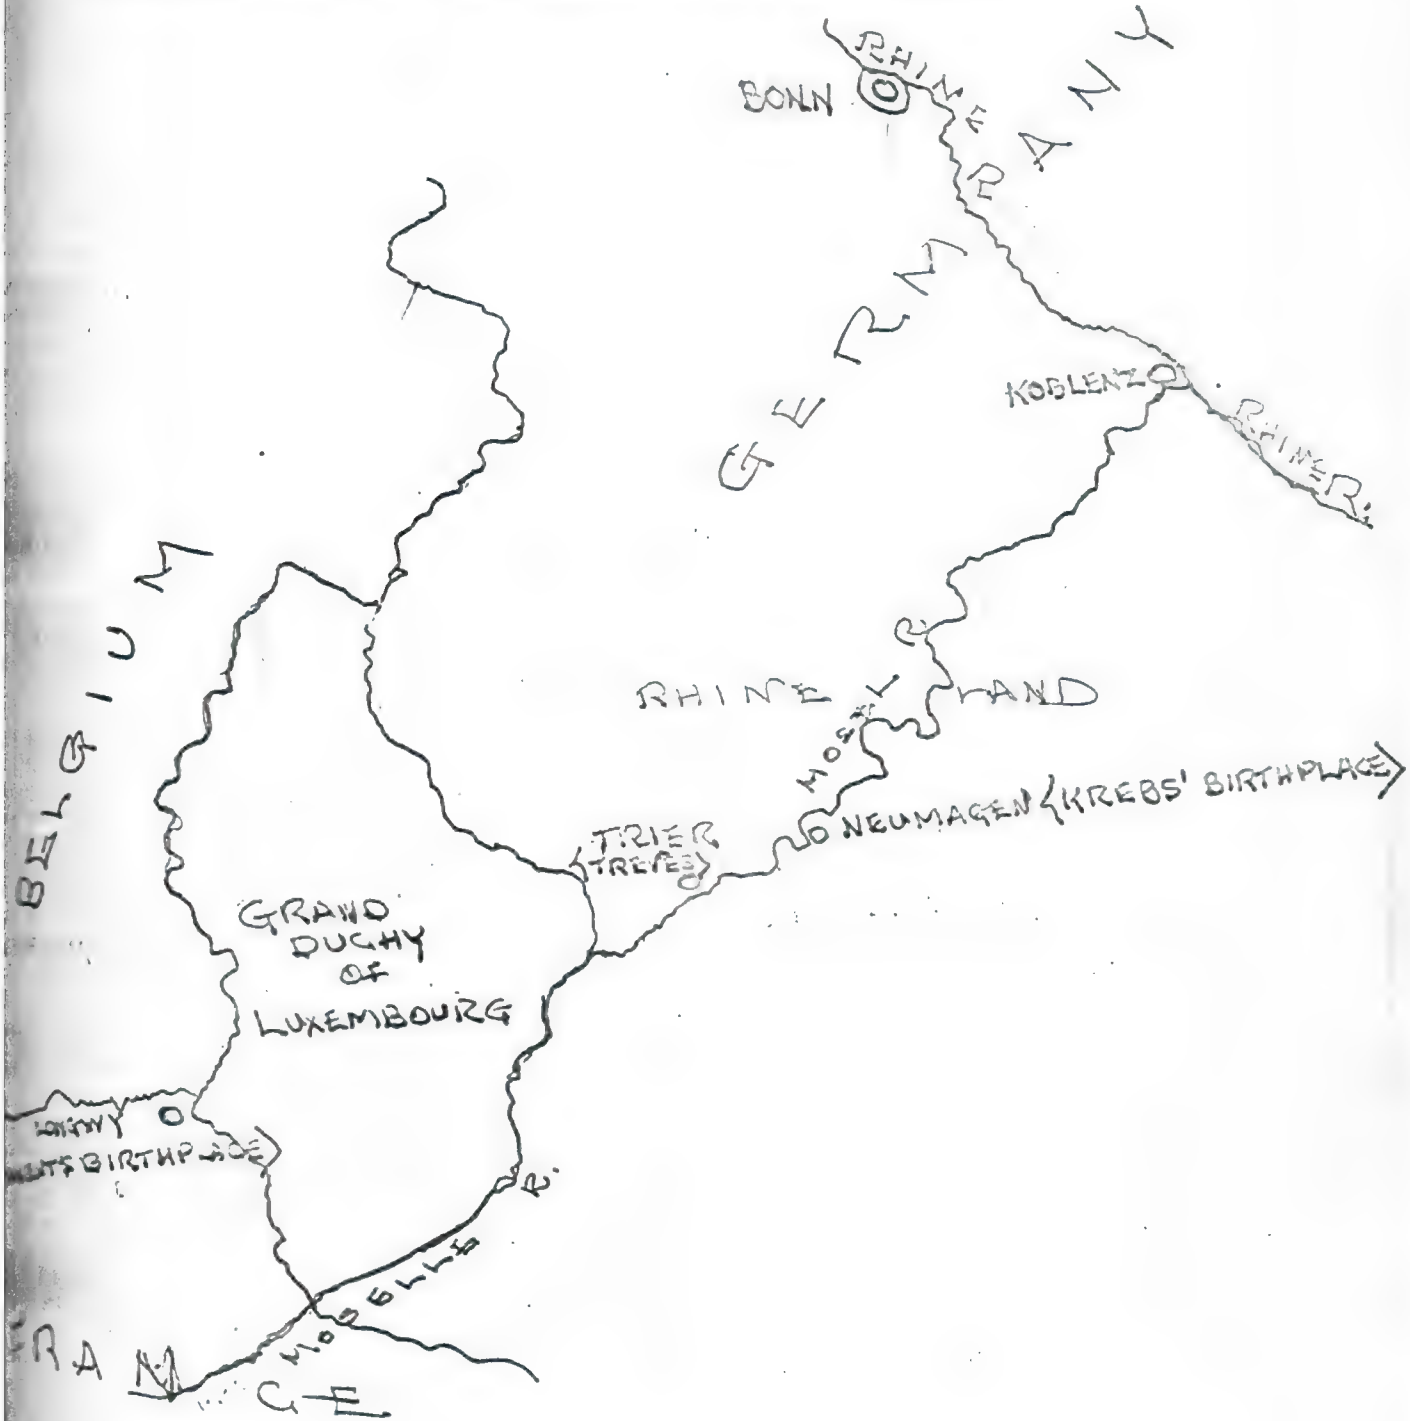
This map should give you a good idea of the birthplaces of both Maxent (Chapter 35, p. 169) and Krebs, (Chapter 27, p. 136).

Note that both Longwy and Neumagen were in Lorraine, and both in the Diocese of Trevès, now called Trier by the Germans. Note also the proximity of both to Bonn, the present capital of West Germany.



CHAPTER 27

- o 0 o -

The origin of our Krebs family is difficult to establish, principally because the Rhineland and its surroundings have passed from German to French jurisdiction and back again, with various sovereignties existing in the interim.

I quote this from a letter from Regina Rapier, who visited the area and did much valuable research while there:

> "The origin of Hugo Ernestus Krebs was in the Rhineland . . . though there were some by that name in the Moselle valley as far south as Alsace who had French titles.
>
> the archdiocese of Trevès is the same district where Nicholas of Cusa, the famous Cardinal-scientist, was born about 1400. His father, Johan Krebs, was a boatbuilder on the Moselle River, and the Cardinal also had a brother, Johan, who may have been the ancestor of our Hugo. . . "

(See preceding page for map showing origin of this family)

- o 0 o -

JOHANN von KREBS

This is your great-great-great-great-great-great-grandfather, from whom you have received 1/256 of your blood.

I have arbitrarily guessed his birth at about 1692 and his death at about 1742. He married Anna Charitas Fritz, and the only child we know of is our ancestor, Hugo Ernestus von Krebs, who came to America.

He and his wife spent their lives at Neumagen-on-Mosel[illegible], in the Diocese of Trier (Trevès) in the Rhineland.

- o 0 o -

HUGO ERNESTUS von KREBS

Son of the above Johann von Krebs, this is your great-great-great-great-great-grandfather, from whom you have received 1/128 of your blood.

I have arbitrarily placed the date of his birth at about 1715. He made at least one trip to Canada, back to Europe and settled in both Pensacola and Pascagoula, finally dying in New Orleans in 1776, the year our Revolutionary War began.

He was married twice, and had many children. We descend from his first wife, Marie Josephe Simon de LaPointe, daughter of Joseph Simon, Sieur de LaPointe of Pascagoula.

Among other things he was a "surgeon", which means "M. D."

You may recall, if you have read this work page by page, that I have previously introduced to you my father's friend, Professor Deiler. If you have not done so, it would be helpful to turn back to Chapter 19, p.99 on the name Engelhardt, to find out who he is.

I will now let Deiler tell you about the "Germans in Pascagoula", but before doing that let me give you two pieces of information:

1.- Deiler uses the French word "engagés"; this means "volunteers". In other words, they were free people who voluntarily came to settle in the new world, as against forced convicts and slaves, of whom there were many.

2.- There is no longer a town called "Scranton". The town was always called Pascagoula, but when the "Barrett Lightning Matinee Train" was merged into the Louisville & Nashville system, the home office thought Pascagoula was too hard to pronounce, and called the station "Scranton". The resentment of the citizens finally induced the railroad to reverse its judgement.

GERMANS IN PASCAGOULA.

In January, 1721, 300 engagés came to the concession of Madame Chaumont in Pascagoula. There were no Germans among them, as the census of 1725 shows, but Pensacola must be mentioned here, as there was a German colony at that place very early, arising, perhaps, on the ruins of this concession or of some other enterprise. The date of the founding of that German settlement is not known; but, in 1772, the English captain Ross found there, on the farm of "Krebs," cotton growing and a roller cotton gin, the invention of Krebs, and, perhaps, the first successful cotton gin in America.[8]

In the same year (1772) we hear of a great storm which raged most furiously "on the farm of Krebs and among the Germans of Pascagoula."

His last will and testament, written in New Orleans in the Spanish language in 1776, gives his full name as "Hugo Ernestus Krebs." He was from Neumagen on the Moselle, Germany, and left fourteen grown children, whose descendants still own the old Krebs farm, which the author visited in August, 1906. It is situated on a slight elevation on the border of "Krebs' Lake" near the mouth of the Pascagoula River, and a mile and a half north of the railroad station of Scranton (now incorporated with East Pascagoula), Mississippi.

[8] Cotton was planted in Louisiana much earlier. Charlevoix saw some in a garden in Natchez in 1721; and Dupratz constructed a machine for extracting the seed; but his machine was a failure.

The Creoles there call the Krebs home "the old fort," and the three front rooms forming the center of the house, the rest consisting of more recent additions, were evidently built with a view of affording protection against the Indians. The walls of this part of the house are eighteen inches thick. The masonry consists of a very hard concrete of lime, unbroken large oyster shells, and clay. The post and sills are of heavy cypress, which, after serving at least 175 years, do not show any signs of decay. The floor is made of concrete similar to that of the walls, but a wooden floor has been laid upon it, taking away about eighteen inches from the original height of the rooms. All the wood work was hewn with the broad axe.

In front of the house lies an old mill stone which once upon a time served to crush the corn.

Near the house is the "Krebs Cemetery," with the tombs of the members of the Krebs family, of whom a great number are buried there. The accompanying pictures were taken on the spot.

According to the family traditions the old fort was built by "Commodore de la Pointe," who is said to have been a brother of Madame Chaumont. Hamilton, in his "Colonial Mobile," page 140, says that Joseph Simon de la Pointe received, on the 12th of November, 1715, from Governor Cadillac, a land concession on Dauphine Island for the purpose of enabling him to raise cattle. As Dauphine Island was practically abandoned, after the great storm of 1717, de la Pointe probably also gave up his concession, and a map, drawn about 1732 ("Colonial Mobile," page 86) shows "Habitation du Sieur Lapointe" [*] on the very spot where the Krebs homestead now stands, near the mouth of the Pascagoula River.

La Pointe's daughter, Marie Simon de la Pointe, became the first wife of Hugo Ernestus Krebs. Thus the old fort came into possession of the Krebs family, where it still remains, the present owner and occupant being Mrs. J. T. Johnson, née Cécile Krebs, an amiable and highly intelligent lady to whom the author's thanks are due. She is the great grand-daughter of Joseph Simon Krebs, the eldest son of Hugo Ernestus Krebs and Marie Simon de la Pointe.

Francesco Krebs, the second son of Hugo Ernestus Krebs and Marie Simon de la Pointe, received Round Island in the Bay of Pascagoula, containing about 110 acres of land, as a grant from the Spanish government, on the 13th of December, 1783, after having occupied it for many years. The family of his wife had received permission to settle there from the French governor Bienville, who left Louisiana in May, 1743.

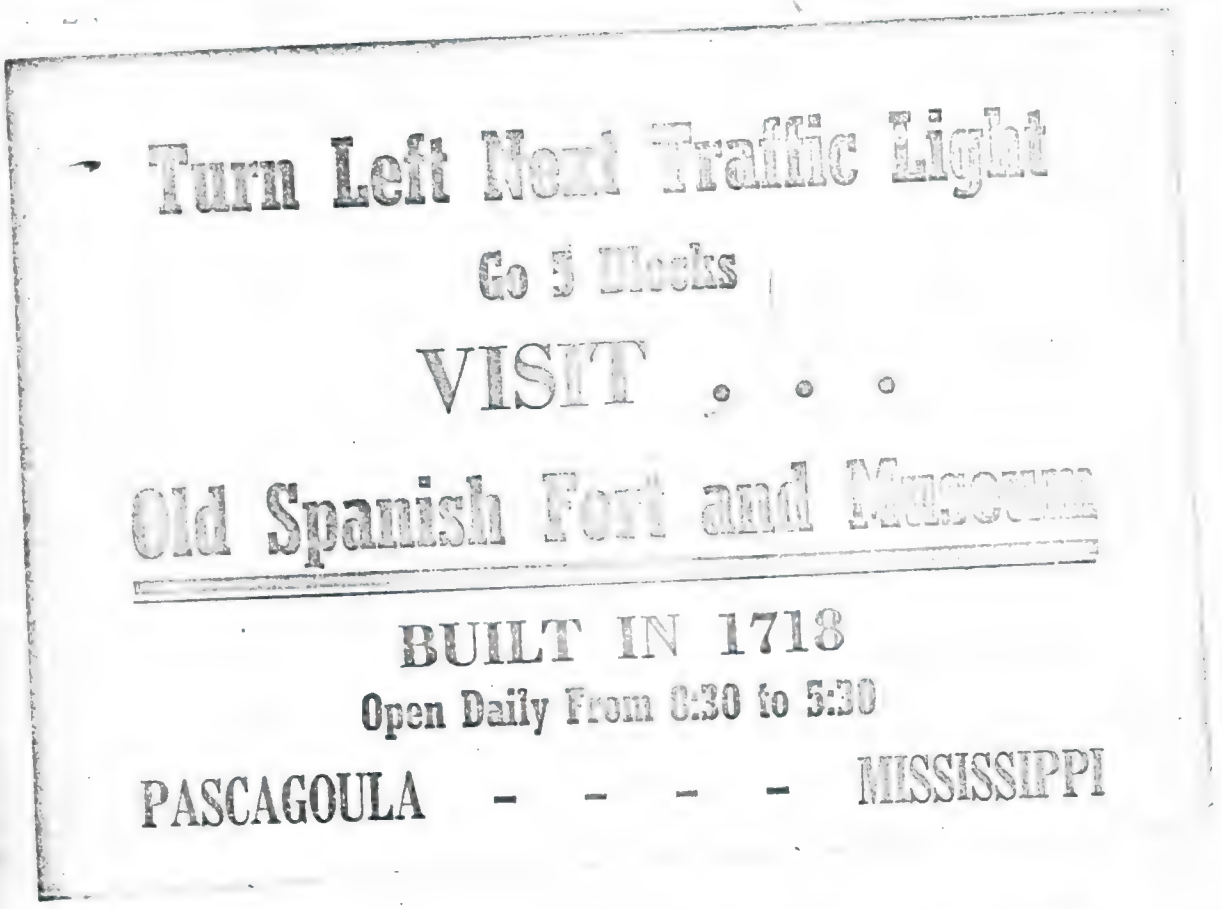
As you drive eastwardly on Highway 90, as you are paying the toll-keeper before crossing the East Pascagoula River, a boy will hand you this hand-bill:



This "Old Spanish Fort and Museum" is the Krebs home that Deiler mentions in the foregoing excerpt from his book. Some day you should go to see it. It is interesting. I am sorry that the pictures appearing in Deiler's book did not reproduce well on the Xerox, but the Pelican Publishing Company is in the process of completely reprinting Deiler's book.

After you pay the toll and take the hand-bill, but before proceeding at normal speed, look South - to your right - beyond the Ingalls Shipyard, and on a clear day you can see Round Island, also mentioned by Deiler.

The Pascagoula Indians were gentle and peace-loving. The Biloxi's were brutal savages. Both tribes were very small, and were probably off-shoots of the Choctaws. Shortly after the Pascagoula settlement, the Biloxis attacked the whites and the Pascagoulas, living harmoniously together. Our settlers placed the women and children on Round Island and went to battle the Biloxis. But the Pascagoulas, rather than face another battle with their savage neighbors, joined hands, men, women and children, and, singing their doleful songs, walked into the river and drowned themselves. Meantime, our menfolk destroyed the Biloxi braves and their tribe moved inland.

of the Pascagoula River, not too far from the highway bridge. If you wait until everything is still and quiet, you can still hear the poor gentle Pascagoulas singing their quaint songs -- the bases and the baritones; the sopranos and the altos; and, above all, the children.

(This man's granddaughter, Agnes Krebs, our ancestor, was born on Round Island during the fight with the Biloxis.)

He had seven children by his first wife, the third, Pierre, being our ancestor. The others will be listed in the chapter on LaPointe, their mother, as is my format.

His second wife was Marie Chauvin de Joyeuse of New Orleans, daughter of a surgeon. The children by the second marriage were: (as listed in his Spanish language will in New Orleans)

In the Shreveport Library I found "The British Development of West Florida" a publication of the University of California. In it a Land Grant Map shows that the British government confirmed the ownership of lot 125 in the town of Pensacola, at the corner of Pitt and Johnston streets in the name of Hugo Krebbs (sic.). The period covered: 1766-1781.

- o O o -

PIERRE
KREBS

Third child and third son of Hugo Ernestus von Krebs and Marie Josephe Simon de LaPointe, this is your great-great-great-great-grandfather, from whom you have inherited 1/64 of your blood.

Born in Pascagoula, in 1743, he married there and died in 1787 -- I suspect in Pensacola, though I am not too sure. He was about 20 years old when the English took West Florida away from Spain and made Baton Rouge the capital. He died just three years after Spain retook West Florida from England and removed the capital to Pensacola.

He was married twice; once to Jeanne Durit (sometimes spelled Duatis) and to Aline Petit. Both marriages seem to have taken place in Pascagoula. We do not know which marriage occurred first. We descend from Aline Petit, and as far as I know he had no children by the other marriage.

Note that it seems to have been Pierre who, together with all others of his generation, completely dropped the 'von' and assumed French first names, although all the official records spelled these first names the Spanish way.

- o O o -

AGNES KREBS

Third child of Pierre Krebs and his wife, Aline Petit, this is your great-great-great-grandmother, from whom you have derived 1/32 of your blood.

She was born on Round Island, in the estuary of the Pascagoula River, during an Indian attack, at or about 1778 (see second paragraph of preceding page.) She was, therefore, born a British subject, because Great Britain dominated West Florida from 1763 to 1783.

After Spain retook Florida and West Florida, in 1783, the Krebs family moved to Pensacola, where she married Pierre Sénac at or about 1800. He was a native of Bayonne, France, and died in 1827.

After the death of her husband, she moved to Mobile with her younger, unmarried children, and became the first housekeeper for Spring Hill College when it was founded in 1830 by Bishop Portier.

She was living in Pensacola in 1814 when General Jackson entered that city, after defeating the Creek Indian Nation at Horseshoe Bend, and on his way to fight the Battle of New Orleans. Jackson didn't know whether he was going to fight the British at Pensacola, Mobile or New Orleans, but he was closest to Pensacola and therefore went there first. The Sénac family held a degree of loyalty to both Spain and France, but none to the United States nor to Great Britain. The Sénacs, therefore, placed all the family silverware at the bottom of their well and fled to the country-side. Jackson won with ease. I owned a teaspoon from this silver as a memento, but I have lost it. It was an antique fiddle-back spoon with an "S" in script.

She died in Mobile June 4, 1848.

These were here children:

Marie Louise Sénac, who married Samuel Fry, secretary to Governor Walton of Florida. The eldest of her four children is the famous Captain Joseph Fry, and he will be presented to you on the next page or two.

Adèle Sénac, who married Richard M. Sands at Pensacola in 1824. It was her daughter, Agnes Sands, who married Captain Joseph Fry (first cousins). She is also the ancestress of our good friend, Joseph Fry Sands, of Mobile.

Evelina Sénac, born in Pensacola in 1810, and who is our ancestress. She will be presented to you in the Sénac chapter.

Félix Sénac, born in Pensacola in 1815, and made himself famous in the Confederate navy. He will be covered on one of the pages immediately following.

Edward Sénac, who died young.

AGNES KREBS, Descendants of

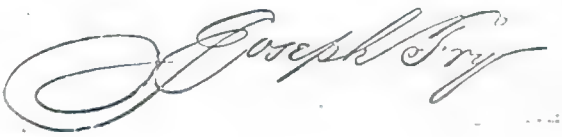
This being the end of the name Krebs, because the surname is lost upon her marriage to Senac, I will now give you what I know about the more important descendants of Agnes Krebs and her husband, Pierre Senac.

- o O o -

Captain JOSEPH FRY

Grandson of Agnes Krebs, this is your first cousin thrice removed. If you are sufficiently interested, I will let you read my copy of "Life of Capt. Joseph Fry, The Cuban Martyr", by Jeanie Mort Walker of New Orleans, (1875).

This is a reproduction of his signature, which appears under a steel engraving of his bust as appears in the above mentioned biography.



Captain Fry entered the United States Navy as a Midshipman, by taking the bull by the horns and going directly to Washington and securing an interview with President Tyler.

He was Captain of the U. S. S. Plymouth, under Commodore Matthew C. Perry when that fleet was ordered to force Japan to open her ports to U. S. merchant ships in 1853.

Tiring of sea duty, he found himself in charge of lighthouse service and stationed at New Orleans when Louisiana seceded from the union. The word reached him while he was sitting at his desk, writing a report. He immediately put down his pen, removed his insignia and offered his services to the Confederacy. His service was outstanding, and the New Orleans Picayune in 1861 gives him credit, as commander of the C. S. Ivy, for having driven, from Southwest Pass, the U. S. South Carolina and a gunboat on October 17, 1861. This was when Farragut was entering the Mississippi.

Fry remained in the C. S. Navy until the end, even fighting in the Battle of Mobile Bay.

After the Civil War he tried various civilian enterprises, but he had been at sea so long he couldn't remain "on the beach". At that time, too, there was a tremendous sympathy for the Cubans and many Americans were anxious to help free that Island from Spain. Many a plot to free Cuba was hatched in New Orleans, and Captain Fry entered the hazardous career of smuggling arms and ammunition to the Cubans.

He was captain of the S. S. Virginius, with a cargo of arms and ammunition for the Cuban rebels, was overtaken at sea by the Spanish navy, and he and his crew were executed by a firing squad in Santiago, Cuba, November 7, 1873, in violation of all international law.

Up to the time the communist Castro took over that poor island, all school children were taught to revere Captain Fry and the Virginius.

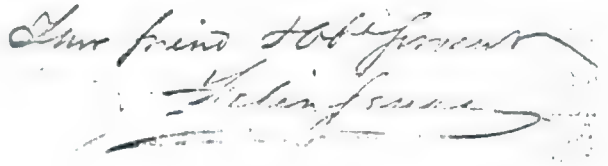
FÉLIX SÉNAC

Félix Sénac is your great-great-grand-uncle. He was the only son of Agnes Krebs to reach maturity. And, since he only had one daughter, you can see how impossible it is for us to be related to the many Sénacs in and around West Florida and the Isle of Orleans.

This is his signature on a letter written to your great-great-grandfather, his brother-in-law, Thomas ~~G.~~ Rapier (the 1st) and I feel it is quite interesting and shows the politeness of the times. It reads: "Your friend & obt. servant".



Let me first tell you of his romantic marriage. Living in Mobile, he met Mary Louisa Hollinger, daughter of the owner of Hollinger's Island. This is not an island in the ordinary sense, although it is in a way surrounded by water: Dog River to the North, Mobile Bay to the East, Fowl River to the South and the Isle Aux Oies River to the West. The road to Dauphin Island from Mobile traverses Hollinger's Island, and it is less than ten miles from the city.

Mr. Hollinger is reputed to have had a terrible temper, so the young couple were afraid to ask his permission to marry. They just drove up to the cathedral, got married and drove back. When they got back to the bride's home, she was afraid to let her new husband in the house. She went in alone and simply told her father about it. When the old man saw he could do nothing, he ordered his slaves to prepare one of the grandest receptions, on the spot, that had ever been held in those parts.

Before leaving Mr. Hollinger, let me tell you a strange thing about him. He was, of course, too old to take up arms, but he was not too old to be an ardent Confederate. He was also very wealthy. As the war progressed and the people began selling their chattels to live, the price of slaves dropped steadily. But Mr. Hollinger had so much confidence in a Southern victory that he invested everything he could in slaves. He acquired so many that he had to build a stockade and house them in makeshift cabins. Of course, at the end of the war, he was broke.

Regina Rapier, who has done much research on the subject, has written me concerning Félix Sénac's brilliant war record, and I will give it to you as she wrote me without change:

"I have been through all the official U. S. Navy records and the log of the U.S.S. Susquehannah, on which he was Paymaster when the Civil War broke out. He sent a letter of resignation April 1, 1861, from Spezio, Italy, but no action was taken as he was told he had to settle his accounts before he could resign. . . . . .

"Sénac was with the Susquehannah at Boston when thirteen officers, including its captain, George Hollins, resigned to join the Confederacy. The news story in the Boston Post of that date (about June 12th) included Félix Sénac in the list, and says that all left the ship in civilian clothes. However, the ship's log shows several entries by Sénac after that date until he turned the ship's accounts over to the new paymaster.

"Then he went to Washington to settle his accounts, was granted a 60-day extension of his dismissal (all the resigned officers were "dismissed" instead) and somehow slipped down to Richmond to pick up his commission in the Confederate navy, dated July 22, 1861, thus holding two commissions at once, since his U. S. commission did not terminate until August 10.

"Meanwhile, his old captain, George Hollins, was engaged in a hair-raising venture with several other of the Susquehannah crew on the Chesapeake Bay, where they slipped aboard river steamers as passengers and commandeered them for the Confederate navy . . . "

He was then sent to New Orleans to handle the finances for the construction of the giant ironclad Mississippi, which the Tift Brothers were building.

After the fall of New Orleans, his services were considered too valuable for ordinary military duty, and he was sent to Paris, largely because of his fluent knowledge of French and partly because of his ability in what we now call "Supplies and Accounts" in the U. S. navy.

He never did return to America from Europe. After the end of the Civil War he settled in Wiesbaden, Germany, where he died January 27, 1866.

I am thankful to Regina Rapier for having sent me photocopy of a death certificate she recently secured from Wiesbaden. It is reproduced on the next page, but I will give you the translation below:

RUBY SÉNAC and her husband, HENRY HOTZE

Ruby Sénac was the daughter of the above Félix Sénac and his wife, Mary Louisa Hollinger - their only child. But I am bringing Cousin Ruby into this work principally because of her husband.

Our own famous, talented Charles L. "Pie"Dufour, in his column "Pie a la Mode" of Sunday, September 3, 1961, devoted the entire column to the praise of Henry Hotze. I will not quote it in its entirety, but these are the highlights:

Mr. Dufour begins "One of the truly forgotten men of the Confederacy was a Swiss-born Mobile newspaper man who was the propaganda agent for the South in England." President Davis sent him to England to keep the government advised of the tone of the English press and the current of public sentiment. Dufour goes on to say that the real worth of Hotze was comparatively unknown until the Confederate diplomatic correspondence was published in 1922 as Vol. III of Series II of the Official Records of the Union and Confederate Navies in the War of the Rebellion.

Within a month of his arrival in London, Hotze had written an article on recognition of the Confederacy for Lord Palmerston's "London Post". He later started a paper of his own (with our government's money, of course) known as the "Index". Of course, his efforts were fruitless because we were so badly outnumbered, and a cautious government will not ordinarily give diplomatic recognition except where there is reasonable expectation of a victory.

During at least part of this time in Europe they lived on the Place d'Etoile, facing the Arc de Triomphe in Paris.

When the Franco-Prussian war broke out (1870) they spent several months in England as refugees. Hotze then spent some time in Constantinople (now called Istanbul) and your "first-cousin-thrice-removed," whom we called Cousin Ruby, accompanied her husband. I have her photograph, dressed as a Moslem, with veil over her entire face except the eyes, and the back of the photo is inscribed in Turkish and in French :

Abdullah Frères
Photographes
de S Mile Sultan Constantinople

When Mr. Hotze became too ill to work, they went to stay with his brother in Zug, Switzerland, near Zurich, where he died. Cousin Ruby and her mother then returned to the United States, where Cousin Ruby secured a position with the newly created Weather Bureau, and she spent the rest of her life in Washington.

I can only remember seeing her once. She visited us on Baronne street, before we moved to Covington for Father's health. She brought presents to all the children, and, of all things, she brought me a tiny bobsled! Born in Mobile, she had spent so much time in colder climates, including the Alps, she did not realize how warm our winters are. But shortly afterwards we moved to the banks of the Bogue Falaya, and I got a great deal of pleasure pouring water on the clay slope alongside the gully near the river and sliding down.

- o O o -

Thus ends the story of the Krebs family, as it relates to you.

Let me add a footnote about my belief that the original Hugo Ernestus von Krebs may really have been a Frenchman. The daughters of the above Agnes Krebs, as well as her son, spoke French fluently, and at least one, Mrs. Fry, mother of Captain Fry above, never did learn the English language. Her children would speak to her in English, and she would answer in French. She could read and understand English, but never did learn to speak or write it.

PITTMAN - THE PRESENT STATE OF THE EUROPEAN SETTLEMENTS ON THE MISSISSIPPI

men went together to the governor's house, but, remarked Pittman, "I could read in Mons. D'Abbadie's countenance the moment I entered that he never designed I shou'd be there." Pittman would have departed, but D'Abbadie called him back and seated him at his right hand, just beyond Aubry. "This was rather inconvenient," Pittman continued, "for being deaf with my left ear I cou'd not hear perfectly. . . . Mons. D'Abbadie spoke very low to the [Indian] Interpreter which was again another very great inconvenience, for I was obliged as often as modesty wou'd permit me to desire Mons. Aubry to repeat to me what passed." In spite of these difficulties, Pittman heard quite clearly the governor's assurances to the Arkansas of continuing French attachment and concern for their welfare. D'Abbadie's remarks surprised Pittman, for he knew most certainly that Spanish authority would soon replace that of France in Louisiana. Letters recently received from Paris and Madrid had made the coming change of government a matter of common gossip in New Orleans. The governor's solicitude for the redskins and his stubborn rejection of the new imperial alignment in the Mississippi Valley could only be understood as part of a devious scheme to encourage the hostility of the Indians and keep the British from reaching the Illinois.[20]

Ten days later Pittman was again present at meetings of D'Abbadie, a bellicose band of those Tonica warriors who had turned back the Loftus expedition, and a party of Choctaws. On both of these occasions the governor made it amply clear that the British officer was his friend; he assured the Indians, who all shook hands with Pittman, that the English as well as the French would be their good friends. On the eighteenth, when the Tonicas received their annual gifts from the governor, D'Abbadie allowed Pittman to make a formal talk to the chieftains and to distribute wine, brandy, and a few presents.[21]

Determined to execute Farmar's orders and reach Fort Chartres in spite of D'Abbadie's warnings and procrastination, Pittman proposed about the middle of July to leave New Orleans, accompanied by one servant and an Indian interpreter, under the pretense of returning to Mobile. Instead, he planned to go to Pascagoula where he hoped to persuade Joseph Krebs, a local planter, to loan him a pirogue and three or four Negroes so that he might paddle up the Pascagoula River to Chickasawhays and the Choctaw villages. From there, with a local escort, he would go into Cherokee territory and engage a dozen or so warriors of that tribe to guide him down the Tennessee River to the Illinois country. Pittman imagined that the Cherokee could simply carry "white colors" as a sign of their peaceful intent, "by which sanction my Person will

June 15, 1792 [34]

Governor and Intendant General: Joseph Krebs, resident of Pascagoulas, in the name of all the inhabitants from that river to the Bay Saint Louis: With all due respect to Your Lordship, they state and say that the continued presence of the Indian nations along this coast in their journeys to and from that capital results in considerable damage to them, not only in the crops which they raise for the maintenance of themselves and their poor families, but also in the cattle belonging to them which the Indians kill and wound; for it happens that when there are a number of head of cattle together at the time when they try to kill one to eat, they do not take the slightest precaution to select just one, but injure others with the shots of the guns they use. Consequently the loss is much greater for this reason.

In view of the above fact, the inhabitants humbly beg Your Lordship to take under consideration the dire situation in which they find themselves on account of the large number of their families and the slight recourse they have for their support by raising the animals, and provide the best measures, in accordance with your usual justice. They beg you to keep them from experiencing in the future the injuries named above, a favor which they hope to receive from Your Lordship's good judgment.

SEÑOR GOVERNOR: It is true that the inhabitants of Pascagoula suffer all the injuries and damage from the Indians which they report in this petition presented to Your Lordship. Upon leaving that town for their villages, the Indians are given three days' provision for the journey which they often use up before they set out on the march. Then, since the route to most of their villages is by way of the Pascagoula River they encounter the cattle there and kill them, as has been reported. This damage cannot be remedied except by depriving the Indians of the use of this route and by presenting them with gifts here or in Pensacola instead of at that capital. Only by these means can the inhabitants be assured that the Indians will not pass. Your Lordship will take such measures as may seem best to you.

DE VILLE
Prairie des Pins au Bayou Nez Piqué

30 November 1993

Dear Robert and Tommy,

I appreciated y'all's acknowledgement of the rough notes I sent earlier.

Now, a remarkable coincidence: This morning, I began going through a huge stack of what I think of as "junk notes," stuff collected over the years, but of little or no use to me at the time. I almost couldn't believe it when the enclosed popped up!

I have here only an inadequate map, and I've clean forgotten where Fish River is, but given such a large land-grant and the vagaries of geographical descriptions and distances during that very early period (1715), I wonder if this could possibly be the "Old Spanish Fort" original grant? Even if not, I figure it is a choice bagatelle in the history of that site's founder.

When I mention "vagaries," among other things, I refer, for example to the second paragraph, third-to-last line of the translation: "Grand Bay" might well not refer to the bay by that name, but merely to a "big bay." And on the second page, middle, "Cedar Place" may not be an actual place-name, but a description of a place where cedar-trees grew. Also, unless Fish River is located on Dauphine Island (which, as I recall, it isn't), I think it is clear that the grant refers to mainland property.

The translation is quite poor, and it is not my translation – I haven't a clue how or why I have this item.

As you can see, the attached photo-copy is only what appears to be the last page of the original. The point of my entire harangue, however, is that, even if this is not the grant for "our" subject-site, the original of it is, apparently, or should be in the French Superior Council records in New Orleans. And that means that the original grant at Pascagoula should be there also.

At our excellent genealogical research library in Alexandria, we have microfilm of all those Superior Council records, so I'll certainly check when I am next there and let y'all know poste-haste. As I recall, we don't know even in what year the Pascagoula grant was made to Simon dit La Pointe, which is too bad, as that would facilitate an otherwise onerous task.

Living on the far frontier as I do, there is nothing resembling a xerox machine, so would appreciate your making copies of enclosed for your files and returning mine at your earliest convenience. I've made some notes from it, should I get to Alexandria sooner than I expect. Caveat: Under no circumstance should this translation be used for anything of serious nature - it serves merely as a clue to the original, and otherwise of practically no value.

Cheers,
Chuck D.V.

PS: Upon reflection, I seem to recall that today's Fish River is on the east-side of Mobile Bay, maybe just south of Bay Minette. Was there, however, possibly a "Fish River" close by Pascagoula in 1715? (A rhetorical question - I don't know.)

If you know the earliest year-date by which La Pointe was in ~~Partition~~ Possession of the Pascagoula property, please let me know —

Thanks,

NOTES ON THE CENSUS OF 1726

The census of 1726 is probably the most complete for the period, including as it does all of French Louisiana. As is indicated in this census, this included the entire Mississippi valley, and the French villages along the gulf coast.

The January, 1726 census gives totals as follows:

French citizens (Masters)	1952 persons
Servants of european origin (Engagees)	276 persons
Negro slaves	1540 persons
Indian slaves	229 persons

These are numbered in the following pages in the right hand columns by masters, servants, negro slaves, and indian slaves. No number in a column or a zero indicates no one in that household of that classification.

The original of this census also shows number of cattle and amount of land under cultivation.

The copy of the census is signed by de Chavannes, who was at the time secretary to the superior council in Louisiana.

In October, 1726 the citizens requested through the superior council that the Company supply 1863 negroes for the future development of the colony. Although most of the citizens requested five or six, there were a few concessionaires who requested 30, 50, and even 100 negroes. Although the number of negroes requested appear in the original, these numbers were not copied in this record. There is no indication that the request was granted, or the number of negroes requested agree with the number granted. The request includes notes by the council showing the reason for the request and the councils recommendation.

This record is a census in itself, albeit a census of those people in the colony who were considered important enough to receive special considerations from the company.

Note: The streets of New Orleans as above named were not of necessity the same position wise as the streets bearing the same name today. Maps of the period show the bulk of the village between the river front and present day Dauphine (then called Conty), and between present day Iberville (then called Rue d'Anguin) to present day Ursulines (then called Rue d'Arcenal, and on some maps, Rue st. Adrien.) As is shown in the above census, some of these streets had few residents, having just been laid out, and subject to future expansion. Further information is available from the booklet " The Vieux Carre, New Orleans, its Plan, its Growth, its Architecture", by Samuel Wilson, Jr. published by the Bureau of Governmental Research for the City of New Orleans, December 1968.

NOTES ON THE CENSUS FOR ILLINOIS, JANUARY 1732

Illinois was under the juristiction of Louisiana with government from New Orleans in the 1720's and 1730's. The census of the fort included Fort Chartres, Cascassias, Cahoquias, and the mines of M. Renault.

The census includes the following:

men		159
women		39
legitimate children	(LC)	170
natural children and orphans	(UC)	20
negroes and negresses belonging to the Company of the Indies	(NS)	81
Negro children, both sexes	(NC)	64
Indian slaves, both sexes	(IS)	119
Total of european descent			388
Total others			264

The original of this census also includes totals and ownership of cattle, bulls and cows, horses, pigs, houses, mills, and stables. It also gives the number of arpents of land assigned to each family.

The original is unsigned, but initialled by N.S., probably I. Salmon, who was ordinator for Louisiana when this census was taken.

My Journal
In The Kings
Province of Louisiana

By

Pierre Drillant

Began from recollections of mine on November 11, 1723 at the village of St. Louis de la Apalach-e near Fort Conde de la Mobile.

Although I am not a educated man I feel that I should write down what I can remember of my life in Louisiana since my arrival on the ship the Pelican at Fort Louis de la Mobile in September 1704. I pray that my memory will prove to be good and correct.

The first thing I recall was the women that landed with me. My rememberance of them was mared that year because of the great number of people who died from the great fever. I lost many new friends.

It was the following year that my friends the Apalaches came to Fort Louis. They came seeking that M. de Bienville to ask him for a place to live. They had led Spanish territory toward St. Augustine. We settled them near the Tomez.

In 1702 (1707?) we began to improve our settlement at Dauphine Island. M. de Moyant a commander arrived at Massacre with three ships. Later in that year a merchant ship named St. Antoine ran a shore off the island.

The following year M. Diron, a great friend came to Mobile. He was very interested in peace with all of indians. To aid in keeping peace with them he sent M. d'Eraque to the Illinois to talk peace with them. As a matter of fact however two of the tribes were to go to war. These the Alibamons and the Mobiliens.

In 1709 M. La Vigne Voisin built a good fort on Dauphine Island. Later that year we saw more trouble when a small number of the Chactacs clashed with atleast fifty Alibamons. The (?) was a great disappointment to M. Diron. A new friend I was to meet that year, Nicolas Bodin.

In 1710 the Mobile River overflowed and left most of the fort under water for the most of a month. We decided that we would have to move the colony elsewhere.

As the new year 1711 started we moved the settlement south to within a league of the mouth of the Mobile River. Shortly more aid was to come viz: the arrival of the Kings Ship La Renommee, and its captain M. Remonville.

The year 1712 brought us a change. M. de la Mothe de Cadillac was made Governor of Louisiana. He a rived in early summer with his family and M. Duclos, the commisary-general on the ship Le Baron de la Fozze, of which M. de la Jonzuiere was the captain. During that year M. de St. Denis traveled to ascend the Rouge River and reach the Nasaitoches Indians.

In 1713 M. de la Loire came to Mobile to help as a merchandise clerk. He was to arrest an English (man?) called Hughes. He had been trying to win the Natchez friendship away from us to the English. M. de la Loire brought him to M. de Bienville. During this year there was much trouble between my friend M. De Bienville and M. de la Mothe.

In 1714 the Natchez murdered five of our men but we proved to get our revenge. In February the La Dauphine arrived, M. Rogeon the new director.

During this year at the reguest of M. de Bienville at least a dozen of us went to the Apalache village of St. Louis a league above Mobile to enforce the small eleven man garrison we had there.

In the year 1715 M. de la Mothe granted my friend S. La Pointe a tract of land on the east shore of Mobile Bay. During the year we built a new fort among the Natchez. We named it Rosalie. M. de St. Denys returned from a trip from Mexico to marry Captain Pedro de Vilesca's daughter. Afterwards he wnet beyong the Mississip i and built a fort which he named Fort Nassitoches.

In 1716 I saw fit to marry the one I loved, Maria of the Apalachee nation. This I will never regret dispite the disapproval of many. We made home with her people are at St. Louis. Her people are simple lot. They have since before leaving Florida celebrated with reat gaiety St. Louis Day. They are a very religious group despite the fact that they are considered to be savages by the majority of us.

In the y ar 1717 a new governor came to replace M. de la Mothe. His name was M. de l'Epinet. With him came many new officers. Governor M. de l'Epinet, like M. Biron was very interested in peace with the indians. At Dauphine Island he smoked the peace pipe with at least two dozen tribes.

M. Diron was very interested in peace with the indians. At Dauphine Island he smoked the peace pipe with at-least two dozen tribes. During the year we built a fort at New Biloxi not knowing that within a few years this was to replace Fort Louis as our capital.

In the year 1718 we started a settlement thirty leagues up the Mississippi from its mouth. We called it New Orleans. In August a great storm wrecked the coast. It all but destroyed the harbor at Dauphine Island doing great damage to all concerned. The storm was so great that the harbor there was blocked with sand.

During the year 1718 I was able to plant my first large garden with the help of my friends the Apalachees. We planted it on the east side of our village. Our village is composed of 16 buildings, a small log dirt stockade, and a small brick chapel below the village on the bayou.

(Sketch of the village site.)

The year of 1719 brought what I thought was bad news. In January M. de Serigny arrived at Dauphine Island with the news that war had been declared between us and the Spanish. M. de Serigny brought three ships with a great number of soldiers, many workmen, and at least three hundred negroes. A few days after the arrival of M. de Serigny we launched an attack against Pensacola. M. de Bienville marched overland with an army to attack the Spanish while M. de Serigny sailed with five ships. The Spanish surrendered the day of the attack.

Within two weeks 1,500 seized Spanish returned and seized Pensacola.

Soon after the Spanish siezed Pensacola they attacked Isle Dauphine and the near by mainland. They did a great deal of pillaging but were soon driven off by a party of our beloved Mobiliens. A large number of the Spanish were killed while fifteen were captured.

Commodore de Chamelin came to Isle Dauphine with five great warships and organized an attack on Pensacola. After only a siege of a few hours Pensacola surrendered to M. M. de Serigny, M. de Chamelin, and M. de Bienville.

After the surrender we took all we wanted that was at Pensacola and then destroyed the town and fort.

Late in the same year came the first number of aliens to our colony. Aboard the ship Les Deux Freres were a great number of German men and women. They brought a great deal of supplies and personal affects with them. They landed at New Biloxi.

They were not the only ones to go to Biloxi because during the same year many of the inhabitants of Isle Dauphine moved to Biloxi. It was a sad day when M. de Bienville and all of his officers left to set up a new capital at New Biloxi.

The year 1720's activities were mainly centered around Biloxi. Probably the most important happening during the year was the arrival of seven ships from France. Aboard were many new colonists including sixty young girls to marry.

A great number of land grants were issued during this year.

Concessions were issued to M. Laur, M. Colis, Count de Artagnan, M. Le Blanc, the Marquis d' Anceny, Duke de Charost, M. Dartaquet, M. de Villemont, M. de Mezieres, Madame de Chaumont, and many others. M. de Bienville said that over 3,000 persons in Louisiana had concessions by this time.

In March 1721 the ship La Baleine came to Biloxi with M. de Chateaugue aboard. Aboard were ninety girls from Paris who were to marry the colonists. Shortly Le Marechal de 'Estrees arrived. On it came nearly 200 slaves. Most of these were destined for the inhabitants of New Orleans. All during the year ships came and left. Among these were La Durance, Le St. Andre Le Marechal d'Estrees and Le St. Catherine. On board Le St. Andre were a great deal of supplies and one-hundred settlers for the Mississippi above New Orleans. All of these were from Germany.

1721 saw one-hundred colonists settle at Madame Chaumonts plantation on the Pascagoula.

By 1722 it was declared that Louisiana was to be divided into districts and be called New Orleans, New Biloxi, Mobile, Alibama, Yazoo, Natchitoches, Arkansas, and Illinois.

Chevalier D'Arensbourg came to Mobile along with M. Marigny de Mandeville. Again financial problems compelled much of the garrisons of Mobile and Biloxi to go to the indians. Conditions reached such a point during the year that much of the garrison at Fort Toulouse de la Alibamons mutineyed. These were soon captured.

A great hurricane hit the coast during the fall and did great damage.

This year has seen M. de Bienville give Pensacola back to the Spanish.

In this year I wonder and am deeply worried about certain feelings that M. de Bienville has made known to me. I should have known something by now. Perhaps this is why M. de la Mothe didn't want his daughter near him. I pray that God will for give and lift from his heart the abomination of this unholy sin against nature that plagues him.

Our village continues to grow in this its twelfth year. In April a delagation composed of M. de Mandeville,

M. de Villemont, M. de D'Aemsbourg, the Swede, Frere Claude and myself where in New Orleans to meet with members of the Superior Council. On the thirteenth we attended a ball commerating the fifth anniversary of the capital. It is miraculous the improvements and growth that has taken place since it was founded. The city now has over 300 inhabitants and is growing at a rapid rate.

In the twelefth year of St. Louis de la Apalachees our village contains the following inhabitants.

Dear Betty:

I spent the Fall in Ireland and was very pleased to receive your letter when I returned. I had ordered the book Old Mobile and have read it. I find it all so interesting. I do have some research on La Pointe that I can shape with you.

In the book Mobile: Fact and Tradition (not fact at all, I think), I found a story about the Krebs family which mentions Lapointe. It said that his wife was Jeanne Puluot of Canada. I looked this up in the wonderful Quebec records and found that there was such a marriage. But, it listed many children born in Canada. He died before our guy. So, I think this is not the same man. This is on a fiche at the Mormon Library in Tucson, but it was of bad quality, so I didn't copy it.

Some of the Quebec genealogy lists him as the son of Hubert and Marie, and some don't. I have included a copy of each for your. The better copy lists his siblings who I shall refer to by number. #1 - Marie-Anne - married Louis Lavergne in 1675. I didn't know that they lived in Pascagoula until you mentioned it. #5 Jacque - on the 1704-1705 map of old Mobile, he is around the corner from Joseph on Rue Saint-Joseph. #10 Ignace - he is listed as a Canadian on the Biloxi census of May 25, 1700 with Joseph.

Could Joseph have been adopted. It does state that he was confirmed on 26-05-1681 in Quebec. There should be a record of that.

Another interesting brother is #12 Augustin who married the lady with the long name. Another of my ancestors is Charles Rochon whose wife was the daughter of Jean Colon and his Indian wife. She was from Kaskaskia in Illinois. An Augustin Lapointe is listed in church records in Kaskaskia. In 1710 his child was baptised and in 1720 he was a godfather to Marie Colon's child. I see you are descended from them also. By the way, on your pedigree you left out a generation after Charles and Henriette.

At the Mormon library computer, I found that they had no records of Catholics (church records). They only had protestant records. I don't know how to go about getting those.

It was an interesting story of Friquet. I wonder if it is another word (poor handwriting).

I talked with Bob Krebs about the Krebs family book. I told him that my husband and I are probably coming to Pascagoula in the Spring. He said he would take us out to the "Old Spanish Fort". Apparently Krebs is a mystery too.

I am going to research Jean Colon dit LaViolette. So far, I have found the following statement in Francis Parkman's LaSalle And The Great West: "1680 Fort Crevecœur" (LaSalle leaving for Niagara) Besides the Mohegan, four Frenchmen were to accompany him: Hunaut, La Violette, Collin, and Dautray. His parting with Tonty was an anxious one, for each well knew the risks that environed both." As you may know Tonty was godfather to Henriette Colon. Later it said "When La Salle was at Niagara, in April, he had ordered Dautray, the best of the men who had accompanied him to Illinois, to return thither as soon as he was able."

Lapointe photos on display; descendant of 1699 explorer

OCEAN SPRINGS — A man whose ancestor landed in Ocean Springs in 1699 has his photographs on exhibit at the Ocean Springs Library.

Laurent Audet dit Lapointe has worked and exhibited his photographs for the past 45 years. He is a native of Quebec, Canada, as were LeMoyne and his company of exploring Canadians.

Lapointe's ancestor that was part of that famous group of explorers was Col. Joseph Simone dit Lapointe.

The photographs are on display at the libr[illegible] Ave., through April 30. Also on display are the wooden carvings by Francis "Nick" Caillavet, an exhibiting member of the Craftsmen's Guild of Mississippi.

Nicolas Audet,

Une centaine de personnes étaient invitées à une visite surprise sur les traces de leur aïeul parti en Nouvelle France.

A l'entrée de la petite

DANS la petite église de Maulais, une centaine de personnes écoutent, impatientes, les discours des maires de Maulais et Taizé sur les origines de la famille Audet (ou La Pointe, c'est le surnom de l'ancêtre) dont l'un des membres, Nicolas, s'est établi en Nouvelle France au XVIIe siècle. Depuis le début de cette journée du 4 octobre, le public va de surprises en surprises. Et certains sont venus de loin pour connaître le nom du mystérieux pionnier parti au Québec au XVIIe siècle. D'autant plus que cet Audet, dit Lapointe, a eu douze enfants qui sont représentés par au moins dix mille descendants en Amérique et au Canada ! Pour cette journée généalogique, les visiteurs sont venus d'Angoulême, Châpersonnes du Québec, Michelin et sa fille.

Passionnée de généalogie les autres invités de cette jour cheline Roche voit enfin la fin c parcours sur les traces de ses « Depuis 1979 je fais des re sur les origines de ma famille. que le pionnier de la famille France. Dans les archives can on indique des Audet à St-F Maillé. » Il est vrai que l commune de la Vienne rev quemment dans les archives au Canada. « Alors je suis v première fois dans la région, on m'a raconté un vrai roman mais je n'ai rien trouvé de concret, commente la Québécoise. Je suis revenue en août dernier continuer mes recherches et là on m'a dit que le 4 octobre prochain il y aurait une assemblée générale à Châtellerault et une visite surprise sur les origines de la famille Audet. »

Pour la centaine de personnes présente à cette journée organisée par les associations Falaise-Acadie-Québec et Touraine-Canada, la visite débute par des surprises : la carte n'indique pas Maulais pour garder le mystère intact... Ensuite, rendez-vous au moulin de Maranzais car le grand-père du pionnier de la famille était meunier dans la commune.

Enfin, c'est une réunion dans l'église de Maulais où le mystère s'estompe : Nicolas Audet, pionnier de la famille en Nouvelle France, est le fils de Innocent Audet et Vincende Roy. Il a été baptisé le 12 juillet 1637 à Maulais (ou Molay en vieux français).

Après tant de recherches, Micheline Roche et les autres visiteurs sont enfin récompensés. Et pour marquer l'événement, une plaque est dévoilée par la représentante québécoise à l'entrée de l'église.

« Maintenant, les Canadiens qui viendront dans la région chercher des informations sur la famille Audet auront une réponse concrète grâce à cette plaque et cela va être signalé au Canada », indique Jean-Marie Germe l'un des organisateurs. Maulais devient un haut-lieu historique pour les Canadiens en mal de généalogie.

NICOLAS AUDET DIT LAPOINTE

LA CURIEUSE ORIGINE D' UN SURNOM

ET L' HONNEUR D' ETRE

LE PORTIER DE MONSEIGNEUR

Le surnom de Lapointe ne serait pas canadien, mais français d' origine Trois familles Audet, paraît-il, étaient disposées en forme de triangle dans la paroisse où elles résidaient. Naturellement, il y en avait une au sommet du triangle, c' est-à-dire à la pointe. On allait donc à "la pointe", lorsqu' on visitait cette famille, qu' on finit - en réunissant les deux mots - par surnommer Lapointe. Or, c' est précisément l' un de ses membres qui émigra au Canada, et c' est pourquoi la famille Audet porte le surnom de Lapointe. L' explication est plus que vraisemblable si la terre de cette famille Audet était réellement triangulaire. Mais on ne peut nier que les terres peuvent être triangulaires aussi bien que rectangulaires ou carrées. Ainsi la paroisse de Charlesbourg compte deux villages entiers dont toutes les terres ont la forme triangulaire. Quant aux variations du nom Audet, elles sont peu nombreuses. On trouve: Audet, Audette, Odet et Odette.

On sait que Nicolas Audet fut "confirmé" par Mgr de Laval à Québec le 23 mars 1664 et qu' il occupa alors l' emploi fort honorable de portier au palais épiscopal de Mgr de Laval.

Dear Mrs Rodgers

I received your letter and information yesterday. I am forwarding you information I have in reference to the Audet dit Lapointe family. I have been having difficulty locating the children of all of the names that are listed in the family tree.

Information and corrections of the Arbe Genealogique:

A. The name of Armand Lapointe is my uncle and Marc Lapointe is my cousin. Armand Lapointe should be Arthur Lapointe, the name of my father. The name of Marc Lapointe should be Raymond L. Lapointe. My name. I have three sons (1) Arthur L. Lapointe a Catptain with Delta Air Lines, living in Marietta, Georgia. He may be going to your city prior to the 300 anniversary My other sons live in Oakland, California and I have 3 grandchildren.

B. Innocent Audet. Stated that he was married at St Pierre de Maille de Poitiers. Poitou. Poitou is the name of county in France. The french for county is Vienne.

I am enclosing a copy stating how the name was changed. It was copied out of a book I was able to locate at the Mormon Genealogical Library in Salt Lake City, Utah. The Coat of Arms at the top left left of the page is not the Lapointe coat of arms. This appears on every page of this book. At the top of the page is the page number 1365 and the name Audet at the top right of the page. Innocent Audet worked at the Episcopal Palais of Mgr de Laval. Nicholas Audet was Married in St. Famille, P.Q. 15 Sept 1670. The Laval University in Montreal was named after Father Laval.

Enclosed are 2 maps. One showing the way to St. Pierre de Maille. This was a mistake in translation. The other map shows Maulais. Innocent Audet was married in the Church of St. Pierre in Maulais. Both of these places are not abled to be reached by commercial transportation. I had to rent a car. With the price of gasoline and rental in France, The cost was very expensive. We were faced with another problem. The banks, government offices including their version of City Hall close for 2 hours each day beginning at 12:00 Noon. Then they close for the day at either 4:30 or 5:00 PM.

I am enclosing a copy of an article which appeared in the local print at the entry of the church in Maulais. This article states that the descendants of Nicolas Audet number over 10,000.

I am enclosing a copy of a pamphlet showing routes that families left France for the New World. With this I have the names of some of the ships that left France with manifest. This is all I could locate at the time. The pictures are of the area near St. Pierre de Maille, This area is called by the local people of France as the History Acadienne.

Finally I am enclosing three pictures of the area of Maulais. We had trouble locating the City Hall or as it is called in this section of France, Marie. I was informed by a lady in Maulais that people by the name of Audet have not lived in this area for 8 years prior to my visit. Many have moved to areas north of Poitiers and in-between Poitiers and Maulais. We were running out of time for that day and we had to go to a place called Taize which has the records. We arrived there almost at closing time for the day and the people there did not want to take time to talk with us. We also had very little time left in France. We are returning to France in the middle of April and will again stay for a month in order to do a more complete search. We will not be devoting the complete month for this becaujse we plan to visit other countries after our search in France is completed.

The cost of hotel is very expensive for the time we will be there. It is a lot less expensive when we rent an apartment and our sons are able to come over for about 8 to 10 days at a time. With the apartment, we save a lot of money on restaurants. The area we stay is very pleasant. We are in the Latin Quarters which is also the area where the Universities are located.

On our next visit we will be taking pictures of a lot of places in Maulais. The cemetery with any tombstones of family names. I will forward to you any additional information I may be able to find. The pictures were taken because they show a lot of the structures built during the Roman Empire. The other part of the village is a maintained a little better but be certain that it was built during the days of the Romans.

I would be very happy to receive a letter from you stating if my findings were of any help and if you wish additional information that I may be able to find on my next visit to France.

God willing I would like to visit in 1999. Is this celebration going to last all year or is there a month that would be more appropriate?

Sincerely.

QUELQUES DATES DE L'HISTOIRE ACADIENNE

1604 : Première tentative d'implantation française au Canada Pierre du Gua de Monts et Samuel Champlain s'installent dans l'Ile Sainte Croix, puis fondent Port Royal.

1671 : Le premier recensement des familles établies en Acadie fait apparaître l'existence d'une soixantaine de familles autour de Port Royal et de la Hève.

1713 : Traité d'Utrecht : l'Acadie longtemps disputée entre la France et l'Angleterre devient colonie anglaise et prend le nom de Nouvelle Ecosse. Seules restent françaises l'Ile Saint Jean et l'Ile Royale. Les acadiens refusent de prêter le serment d'allégeance à la couronne britannique. Ils se déclarent "Français neutres" mais gardent leurs terres et leur religion.

1756 : La guerre reprend entre la France et l'Angleterre.

1758 : Déportation en France des Acadiens de l'Ile Saint Jean et de l'Ile Royale.

1763 : Traité de Paris : fin de la guerre de 7 ans. La France perd toutes ses colonies d'Amérique du Nord. 4397 Acadiens sont encore retenus captifs dans les colonies anglaises ; 2000 ont pu gagner le Quebec ; 2000 autres sont parvenus en Louisiane ; 1500 ont été déportés en Angleterre ; 2500 ont pu rejoindre la France. Début de la réinstallation des Acadiens sur les terres de France. Au fur et à mesure de leur arrivée dans les ports de France les Acadiens recoivent du gouvernement de Louis XV une solde de 6 sols par jour et par tête.

1766 : 18 familles, soit 400 personnes, sont transférées à Belle Ile.

1773-74 : Arrivée à Chatellerault de 362 familles, soit 1472 personnes. Participation des Acadiens aux multiples travaux de l'établissement agricole. Construction de 58 maisons, sur les 150 prévues à l'origine : leurs murs sont montés en bousillis, murs faits par coffrages avec un mélange de terre sablo-argileuse, le "bornais", et de brande hachée. Chaque famille doit recevoir une ferme, d'un seul bâtiment, composée d'une pièce d'habitation, d'une étable et d'une grange, un puits, deux paires de boeufs, deux vaches, une charrette et 30 arpents de terre à défricher (17 hectares environ).

1793 : Les Acadiens obtiennent leurs titres de propriétés définitifs qui font d'eux des agriculteurs aisés.

navian Reference Section, turned up a Finnish side of the family nobody had known about. Meanwhile, thousands of other people were engaged in similar odysseys. Occasionally the silence that filled the library's public stacks and reading rooms would be broken by a muffled gasp from somebody who had made a breakthrough, but I witnessed no outbursts, although shortly before my arrival a woman hot on the trail of her antecedents had apparently kicked the shin of a reference consultant who wouldn't surrender a restricted record she needed. For its first fifty years the Genealogical Society had been a membership society. Then, in 1944, it had opened its archives to the public. Patrons of the library had been required to sign a register, but with the doubling of patronage after Roots, this policy created such a bottleneck at the entrance that it was abandoned. "There are all kinds of people in here," Fudge told me, frowning, "and we have no idea what they're up to." Security guards watch for anything out of the ordinary, and an electric eye at the exits, programmed to detect a metal strip inserted in the bindings, picks up any of the library's books that are being walked off with.

(In an aisle of the French section, I struck up a conversation with Raymond La Pointe, an "imported Californian" who worked as a medical technician for the Department of Corrections in Vacaville and was trying to cross the water from Quebec to France. Three families named Audet had immigrated to Quebec in the seventeenth century, he told me, and their three homesteads had formed a triangle. His ancestors had lived at the apex of the triangle, and to distinguish them from the others they became known as the Audets de la Pointe; in 1670 the Audet had been dropped altogether.)

A little later I sat down at a reading table next to a man named Frank Czito, who was in seventh heaven. In one day he, his wife, and their two children, working as a team, had gone back a hundred and forty years. Czito had emigrated from Hungary eight years earlier and was still struggling with English.

"We come from Santa Monica," he told me. "We heard there is big library in Utah where you can find everything about Hungary. We would like find our old family—what from and what kind of class. In Hungary," he said, pressing to his breast a military book called Magyaroroszag tiszti es Nevtara, in which he had discovered that one of his grandfathers had attained the rank of

Lawrence A. Lapointe is a descendant of Nicholas Audet-Lapointe, a man of importance in Canada in the early 1700's. Nicholas Audet, born 1670, and Hubert Simon Lapointe, born 1626, came to the New world at abount the same time from France ~~and may be related.~~

Hubert's son, Joseph Simon Lapointe, was among hte men who came to the Gulf Coast with Pierre LeMoyne Sieur d'Iberville. Joseph lived in Mobile, but later headed westward to present day Pascagoula, where he had a land grant from Madame de Chaumont. The Old Spanish Fort is a vestige of the Lapointe settlement of 1721.

In the meanwhile, Nicholas Audet was working as assistant for Msgr. de Laval, the first French Bishop in America.
Nicholas married Madeleine Depres and among their children was Joseph Lapointe, born in 1703, who married Jeanne Pouliot.

Their son, Joseph Antoine, born in 1732, married M. Josephte Pepin.

Their son, Louis Lapointe, born in Yamachiche in 1770, married Theresa Langlois. Jean Lapointe, born in 1829, married Seraphine Pothier.

Their son, Hilaire Lapointe, was born in 1860. He married Elise Gagnon and their son was Adelard Lapointe, the grandfather of Larry Lapointe. Adelard, born in Yamachiche in 1888, married Euphemie Rivard.

Their son was Joseph A. Lapointe, born in 1895, who married Alice Derocher, also born in 1895. They were the parents of Lawrence A. Lapointe, who was born in Trois Rivieres, Quebec, Canada on April 8, 1915 and christened Laurent Audet dit Lapointe. He was naturalized as an American citizen after coming to Watertown, N.Y. in the early 1920's and took the name Lawrence Anthony Lapointe.

He married Rita Coseo, a native of Watertown, and they had six children.
Yvonne Marie, born June 15, 1939, who married Richard L. Behiel, lives in Pleasanton, Calif. They have four children: Scott, Arthur, David and Nanette.

Joseph, born March 23, 1942, married Ellen Canton. Their children are Christine, Ronald, James and Janette. They live in Newcomb, N.Y.

Mary Alice, who married Joseph Perrielo, was born on Aug. 19, 1945. Their children are Bradley and Benjamin Coseo.
They live in Weston, Mass.

David G., born on May 8, 1949, who lives in Ocean Springs, was first married to Janice Smith and second to Belynda Merritt. David's children are David Audet dit Lapointe, Aaron and Rachel Audet dit Lapointe.

Stephen, who lives in Cali, Columbia, South America, married Erica Polakoff. He was born on Oct. 17, 1953.

The youngest child is Jane Irene, born March 13, 1959, who lives in Waltham, Mass.

Nicolas Audet

Chapter 3

Nicolas Audet
dit
Lapointe

Nicolas Audet, born about 1641, was the son of Innocent Audet and Vincente Riene (Roy), of Saint-Pierre-Maille, in the Diocese of Poitiers. We know that he came to Canada before 1664 because there is a record of his confirmation at Quebec on 23 March of that year.(1)

Poitiers is a town in Poitou; that beautiful and bountiful province of France where wheat is grown, the vine is cultivated and many varieties of fruit are raised. It is wooded country, yet covered by excellent pastureland; in this province Charles Martel repulsed the Saracins and Clovis battled the Goths.

Just about all of the colonists who came from France in the 17th century started in one of three ways: by working for the government, by working for a religious order, or by working for one of the more prosperous landowners. Nicolas seems to have been taken under the wing of Monseigneur Francois de Laval, Bishop of Quebec. In the census of 1666 we find him working on the farm owned by the Bishop, at Saint-Joachim nearby Cape Tourmente. (2) Two years later, he was still working for the Bishop as a porter in the lordly Chateau of Quebec. Confirmation of this comes through an act of the Notary Pierre Duquet, (3) dated 13 October 1668, which records: "Today, at the entrance gate of the estate, Sieur Jean Madry rang a little bell, in response to which he was met by Nicolas Audet, porter of the Chateau. After admitting him, Audet went to inform his master, the Bishop."

For more than four years Nicolas worked in service for others, earning his way. In preparing for his future he was counting more on savings than on credit.

THE SETTLER

Nicolas Audet, the porter, decided to become a settler on the Ile d'Orleans, just opposite the Beaupre coast. On 22 June 1667, he received a concession from his Bishop, "of three arpents of land fronting on the Saint Lawrence River and running southward . . ." His grant was in the parish of Sainte-Famille, from which the parish of Saint-Jean was later formed. His neighbors were Guy Boivin and Robert Boulay. He hired them "to help him build a house to be finished within one year from this day."

Each year, on the Feast of Saint Martin, the 11th of November, he was required to give 20 sols in seigneurial rent for each arpent of river frontage, 12 deniers for "cens" and 3 capons chosen by the Seigneur. It is worth noting that the signatures on the contract for the land, other than that of the Notary Paul Vachon, are those of: Jean Crete, Master Cartwright; of Paul de Rainville, Sheriff of Beauport and, of the Bishop of Quebec himself. Nicolas Audet appears to have been well connected! (4)

As soon as he could, Nicolas busied himself building his house with the help of his neighbors. The census of 1681 tells us that by then he had cleared 15 arpents of land and had acquired 6 animals. (5)

A KING OF THE HEARTH

Having built a house, Nicolas sought to make it a home. To this end, he courted Magdeleine Despres, a young girl of fourteen years. These two betrothed appeared before the Notary Romain Becquet at Quebec, 30 August 1670, to arrange a contract of marriage. (6) The future bride was sponsored by "Dame Anne Gagnier, widow of the late Master Jean Bourdon and by Madamoiselle Elizabeth Etienne." In accordance with the custom of the time, Magdeleine would bring Nicolas a dowry, a considerable one it seems. She had saved or acquired 200 livres, but also she would receive "the sum of 50 livres given her by His Majesty, in consideration of her marriage." In short, these two were hardly poor in material goods. This help given Magdeleine by the King signifies that she was alone in Canada, most likely an orphan. We know that she could write; she penned herself as the daughter of Francois Despres and of Magdeleine Le Grand from the Parish of Saint-Sauveur in Paris. This young lady, born about 1656, was one of many generous girls who came to Canada under the protection of the King of France.

At Sainte-Famille the following September 15th, the missionary priest Father Thomas Morel, blessed their union in the presence of the witnesses Pierre Rondeau and Mathurin Dube. When Pierre and Mathurin were married the year before, each in turn had asked Nicolas to stand up for him, now the favor was being returned. (7)

This marriage brought forth twelve children: 9 boys and 3 girls, but the elder two died young. All were born in the Parish of Sainte-Famille except the youngest three who were born at Saint-Jean. These ten children founded the family line: they were all married on the Island except Marguerite. She married Louis-Emery Coderre at Boucherville on 26 August 1722. It is believed that she followed her brother Joachim there, after the death of her parents, when he married Louise Roberge. (8)

In 1689 old Nicolas fell gravely ill, a situation from which he never fully recovered. He was hospitalized for 19 consecutive days in the heat of the August summer and in September he spent 26 more days under the care of the nursing sisters at the Hotel-Dieu in Quebec. Heretofore he had always worked his farm with a stubborn tenacity, but no more would he be active.

He had seen to the marriage of three of his children: Nicolas, Pierre and Madeleine, but that still left seven children at home, to be cared for by the strong arms of his wife alone. But he could still plan ahead and, on 9 July 1696, he acquired yet another concession. This grant of land was of 3 arpents in river frontage some distance to the west of his own place. On 2 August 1698, he gave this land to his son Jean-Baptiste. (9)

There were so many things yet to be done, but the bell tolled for Nicolas when he was 59 years old. He was buried on 10 December 1700 in the cemetery at Sain-Jean, where his headstone bore the surname Lapointe. His widow passed on her inheritance by donation to her son Joseph on 1 October 1703. (10) An inventory of the belongings of old Nicolas was made by Notary Etienne Jacob on 27 September 1706. It recorded 75 arpents of usable land, a nearly new house measuring 18 × 24 feet, a shed and a stable. (11)

Magdeleine Despres survived her husband for twelve years and at her death children Joachim and Madeleine were still unmarried. She was buried beside him, on 19 December 1712, at the age of 56. (12)

POSTHUMOUS GLORIES

The Audet's truly could be called a religious family. For 150 years they gave hundreds of priests and other religious, to the Roman Catholic Church of Canada. One example is that of His Excellency Monseigneur Lionel Audet, son of Louis Audet, cartwright, and Eugenie Turcotte. The Monseigneur was born at Saint-Marie de Beauce, laureated a Doctor of Theology, then consecrated a Bishop on 1 May 1952. He is still the Auxilliary Bishop of Quebec a quarter-century later.

The first French-Canadian to be appointed to the Court of the Exchequer was the Honorable Judge Arthur Audette. As of 4 April 1972, he was the youngest Judge so appointed.

The legendary Alexis "Le Trotteur," was born on 4 June 1860 at La Malbaie. His parents were Francois Audet dit Lapointe and Delphine Tremblay. He, too, was a descendant of the Old Ancestor Nicolas Audet. (13)

The following variations of the family name have sprung from descendants of Our Ancestor: Audette, Bailleul de Pierre-Cot, Hode, Lapointe, Odet and Simon. (14)

promesas de ayuda y en la paga anual de 2.000 dólares, que Miró quedaba autorizado a aumentar si las circunstancias lo exigían. La paz de los creeks con los Estados Unidos no duró mucho. El gobernador de Luisiana, Carondelet, que había aprisionado a Bowles a petición de McGillivray (cuyas oficinas de la firma Panton había saqueado el 16 de enero de 1792 en St. Mark), convocó en Nueva Orleáns al jefe indio, con el que firmó, el 6 de julio de 1792, el Tratado de Nueva Orleáns por el que McGillivray se comprometía a declarar la guerra a los Estados Unidos para recuperar el territorio perteneciente a los crees, en tiempos ingleses, y España prometía el adecuado suministro de armas, la garantía de aquellos límites fronterizos y la pensión anual de 3.500 dólares (61).

La prevista invasión llevada a cabo por los creeks, cherokees y chickamaugas se realizó en septiembre. El último objetivo era Nashville, sobre la que convergerían tres columnas: la primera, al mando de "Doublehead"; la segunda, bajo "Middlestriker", y la tercera, con Watts. No pudo participar McGillivray, retenido en cama por fatal enfermedad; su ausencia se echó de menos, por las disputas que cerca de Nashville surgieron entre los jefes, y que producirían el final desastroso de la expedición (62). La muerte de McGillivray, el 17 de febrero de 1793, supondría un duro golpe para la supervivencia de sus planes políticos y de la nación creek; los negocios de Panton, Leslie and Co. continuarían, sin embargo, y en el jardín de la casa de éste, en Pensacola, hallarían eterno reposo los restos mortales del guerrero (63).

NOMBRES ESPAÑOLES

En la superficie de Alabama se conservan, además, una serie de nombres españoles. Así, el De Soto State Park, en el condado DeKalb, y el Monte Sano State Park, en el condado de Madison, y las localidades de Almería, Andalusia, Galera, Columbia, Columbiana, Cordova, Cuba, Docena, Gordo, Verbena, Madrid, Manila, Magnolia, Fleta, Ardilla, Alta, Alma, Bexar, Angel, Francisco, Valhermoso Sprs, Lavaca, Vida, Delta y Triana.

MISSISSIPPI, el Estado Magnolia

Mississippi es el Estado más pobre de la Unión, con el más bajo ingreso "per capita"; es el más radicalmente segregacionista (recordemos los disturbios provocados hace años por la integración en la Universidad de Mississippi, en Oxford, que con la Mississippi State University representa a la enseñanza superior en el Estado), quizá por la plétora de negros entre sus habitantes, que le convierten en el Estado más oscuro (casi superan el 50 por 100). Esta circunstancia se explica por su economía declaradamente rural, viviendo del campo el 90 por 100 de la población. Aunque la industrialización está entrando poco a poco y las perspectivas petrolíferas son buenas, el algodón es la base de la economía de la región, y de aquí el origen de la abundancia de la antigua mano de obra esclava (64). Ni que decir tiene que se alineó sin titubeos en las filas de la Confederación y en sus tierras se libró mayor número de fratricidas batallas que en ningún otro lugar, con excepción de Virginia. Como en los demás Estados del Sur, el "Spanish moss" cuelga de los árboles y da a su paisaje una apariencia de decoración teatral. Es el escenario de las andanzas de Tom Sawyer y Huckleberry Finn, los personajes de Mark Twain, émulos de Don Quijote y Sancho (65). Es la patria chica de William Faulkner (quien, por cierto, incluye a la familia apellidada Spain entre las de solera en la región (66).

El Estado del Mississippi tiene por apodo oficial el de "Magnolia", aparte de otros cuantos, y su capital es Jackson, ciudad no grande, situada más o menos en el centro de la comarca. Otras urbes notables son Natchez y Vicksburg, en las márgenes del Mississippi, ligadas a la Historia española (en esta última se emplazó el fuerte Nogales), Columbus, en el sector Noroeste, con fiestas como el "Annual Pilgrimage", en el mes de abril (la propaganda anunciadora presenta al descubridor acompañado de soldados españoles y enarbolando el pendón de Isabel y Fernando), y Biloxi, en la breve franja costera.

FRANJA COSTERA. PASCAGOULA

El distrito de Mobile, al que pertenecía la franja costera del Estado de Mississippi, no quedó incluido en la República de Florida Occidental, por lo que permaneció en manos españolas. Pasaría a poder de los Estados Unidos cuando aquellas tropas abandonaran Mobile, el 13 de abril de 1813, como consecuencia de la previa ocupación de la ciudad por los 600 hombres del general Wilkinson, de Florida Occidental hasta el río Perdido (67).

En dicha costa, las modernas ciudades de Biloxi y Gulfport cuentan con muy buenas playas e instalaciones para hacer grata una temporada de recreo y descanso. En la cercanía de los límites con el Estado de Alabama, la localidad de Pascagoula nos muestra la pervivencia de un antiguo fuerte español, en el que los turistas pueden contemplar la reconstitución de sucesos acaecidos entre sus paredes y en la región. Fundado en el 1721 por Joseph de la Pointe, su nieta casó con el capitán de los ejércitos españoles D. Enrique de Grimarest. Se trata del edificio más antiguo del área, construido a base de madera, conchas de ostras, barro y musgo. España lo poseyó desde 1780 a 1810 (68).

Existe la tradición de que el río Pascagoula canta al anochecer en recuerdo de los indígenas que voluntariamente se ahogaron en sus aguas, en expiación a haber traicionado el culto a una sirena como consecuencia de las prédicas de un misionero católico español (otra leyenda atribuye al canto fluvial a la inmolación de unos Romeo y Julieta nativos). (69). En sus contornos se encontraba –¿se encuentra?– el mayor magnolio del país: más de 4 metros mide su tronco de circunferencia, altura, 17 metros, y extensión de sus ramas, 31 metros.

En Pascagoula procede dedicar un recuerdo a Jorge Farragut –el menorquín, padre del almirante–, quien a raíz del fallecimiento de su esposa en Nueva Orleáns, se trasladó, en 1809, a vivir con sus hijos en el lugar denominado Point Plaquet, desde entonces "Farragut's Point". ¿Qué impresión sentiría al habitar de nuevos territorios españoles? Físicamente agotado, murió en Pascagoula, el 4 de junio de 1817, y en su cementerio yace (70).

La región del Mississippi, explorada también en primer término por España, recibió la atención como lugar de establecimiento por parte de Francia (tanto en la costa como en el interior) y pasó a manos de Inglatera en 1763, cuando Francia le cedió todos los dominios extendidos en la orilla este del Mississippi. En los años subsiguientes al estallido de la revolución, fue objeto de reclamación por parte de España, como consecuencia de las acciones militares y de ocupación llevadas a cabo. Los Estados Unidos no aceptaron estas pretensiones, originándose las fricciones que ya hemos visto (71).

Con la firma del Tratado de San Lorenzo en 1795, España renunció a las comarcas comprendidas al septentrión del paralelo 31°, latitud Norte, por lo que en el 1798 se creó el territorio de Mississippi, al que se añadieron algunas franjas cedidas por Georgia y Carolina del Sur. Abarcaba los Estados de Alabama y Mississippi, con la excepción de la franja costera al sur del paralelo 31°, que España perdió definitivamente en 1813. El sector occidental consiguió su admisión como Estado, con el nombre que hoy lleva, el 10 de diciembre de 1817; el territorio de Alabama lo sería en 1819 (72).

PRESENCIA ESPAÑOLA

Su nombre

Lleva este Estado el nombre del "Padre de las Aguas", que es lo que significa Mississippi. Corresponde a Alonso Alvarez de Pineda el título de haber sido el primer español que divisara el río, en 1519, y comprobara la potabilidad de su caudal en su amplia desembocadura. Lo bautizó con el nombre de Espíritu Santo (73). Le siguieron en sus contactos Pánfilo de Narváez y sus desfallecidos compañeros, quienes en el otoño de 1528 surcaron, primero, el lago Borgne, procedentes de Mobile, y más tarde, viraron hacia el Chandeleur Sound, avistando las islas del mismo nombre y pisando, por fin, un trozo de tierra firme que formaba una de las márgenes del río (74). Más arriba, Hernando de Soto, lo atravesaría en mayo de 1513, denominándolo "el Río Grande de la Florida" (75).

Hernando de Soto hace justicia

Hacia mediados del mes de diciembre de 1540 pisaría Hernando de Soto con sus hombres las tierras del Estado del Mississippi, en las que, por encontrar abundante fruta y otros alimentos, decidió pasar el invierno. Durante su estancia se originó un incidente que puso en evidencia su recto y justiciero proceder: unos indios robaron varios cerdos, siendo dos muertos en el intento y otro condenado a perder sus manos; al poco tiempo, cuatro españoles cometieron algunas raterías en tiendas de indios: don Hernando condenó a muerte a dos de ellos y confiscó las propiedades de los otros dos (76).

Llegado el mes de marzo de 1541, y necesitando de indios que transportaran cargas al considerar la partida hacia el Oeste, Soto los solicitó a los jefes chickasaws, que se negaron e incendiaron el campamento durante la noche. A pesar de la confusión que tan inopinado acto introdujo entre los españoles durmientes, el orden pudo restablecerse después de haber muerto 11 soldados (Soto fue derribado de su caballo) y 50 caballos, y teniendo muchos españoles que luchar contra el frío, por haberse quedado desnudos y sus ropas quemadas. Reanudada la marcha, arribaron, en mayo, al gran río Mississippi, en el lugar que muchos historiadores sitúan en el actual Sunflower Landing y otros en el cercano Memphis (77). ¿Es este el lugar en que el escritor Simms encontró una ruda cruz –señal de la tumba de algún soldado de Soto–, y cuya emocionada contemplación le animaría a componer su extensa novela "Pelayo" (1835) y parte de su continuación, "El Conde Julián" (1845)? (78).

Mateo del Saúz hace paz

Otro grupo de españoles atravesó el territorio de Este a Oeste y viceversa en el año 1560. Se trataba de dos capitanes, 50 infantes y algunos caballeros –además del padre de la Anunciación–, que Mateo del Saúz, lugarteniente de Tristán de Luna en Coosa, estimó procedente facilitar a los indios coosa en su expedición contra sus enemigos, los indios natchez. Tras una espectacular despedida, se pusieron en marcha los expedicionarios, juntamente con 300 guerreros indígenas. Al llegar a un gran río (quizá el Pearl), en la vecindad de un gran poblado, el jefe indio pidió a los españoles omitieran sus acostumbrados toques de trompeta en el momento del Angelus, de forma de poder lograr la sorpresa pero, para su desilusión, no encontraron a nadie en el pueblo, con la excepción de un indio enemigo enfermo, al que mataron a golpes y al que los españoles trataron de salvar y el padre de la Anunciación, en vano, de convertir. Incendiaron las cabañas y apartaron maíz del encontrado para ser enviado a Saúz. Prosiguieron su marcha las tropas indo-hispanas, sin hallar trazas de contrarios, hasta que al asomarse al Mississippi obtuvieron la sumisión de los natchez, que, atemorizados, se había cruzado a la otra orilla, así como el pago por ellos de un tributo –tres veces al año– consistente en castañas, nueces y otros frutos. Gracias, pues, a los españoles, los antiguos enemigos resolvieron sus diferencias sin apenas derramamiento de sangre (79).

NATCHEZ

Bernardo de Gálvez y la guerra de la Independencia

Los españoles entraron de nuevo en escena cuando los colonos de la costa oriental se sublevaron contra Inglaterra en 1776. Bernardo de Gálvez, gobernador a la sazón en Luisiana, tomó un decidido partido a favor de los patriotas, no obstante la neutralidad de España. Proporcionó una inapreciable ayuda a aquéllos, como ya hemos visto, a través de Oliver Pollock, un irlandés católico, que había puesto su persona y su fortuna a disposición de la revolución, y de James Willing, a quienes suministró armas, municiones y otras provisiones. El 10 de Enero de 1778 partió Willing de Pittsburgh en una barca armada, y por el Ohio y el Mississippi llegó hasta Nueva Orleáns, no sin haber incendiado establecimientos y plantaciones pertenecientes a los ingleses. Gálvez les dejó manos libres para vender al botín obtenido en el viaje e hizo la vista gorda a la captura por Willing de dos embarcaciones británicas. Gálvez no permitió a Willing –dada su irregular conducta– regresar por el territorio español, pero sí autorizó a Ro-

LA CURIEUSE ORIGINE D' UN SURNOM

ET L' HONNEUR D' ETRE

LE PORTIER DE MONSEIGNEUR

Le surnom de Lapointe ne serait pas canadien, mais français d' origine Trois familles Audet, paraît-il, étaient disposées en forme de triangle dans la paroisse où elles résidaient. Naturellement, il y en avait une au sommet du triangle, c' est-à-dire à la pointe. On allait donc à "la pointe", lorsqu' on visitait cette famille, qu' on finit - en réunissant les deux mots - par surnommer Lapointe. Or, c' est précisément l' un de ses membres qui émigra au Canada, et c' est pourquoi la famille Audet porte le surnom de Lapointe. L' explication est plus que vraisemblable si la terre de cette famille Audet était réellement triangulaire. Mais on ne peut nier que les terres peuvent être triangulaires aussi bien que rectangulaires ou carrées. Ainsi la paroisse de Charlesbourg compte deux villages entiers dont toutes les terres ont la forme triangulaire. Quant aux variations du nom Audet, elles sont peu nombreuses. On trouve: Audet, Audette, Odet et Odette.

On sait que Nicolas Audet fut "confirmé" par Mgr de Laval à Québec le 23 mars 1664 et qu' il occupa alors l' emploi fort honorable de portier au palais épiscopal de Mgr de Laval.

Dear Betty:

Here is a translation of the exchange between François Krebs and James White.

> At Pascagoulas, 9 December 1805, Agreement to buy and contract made today between François Krebs and James White, residents of this district, for the exchange of Round Island, with all its animals, for the Negro Dick and 150 piastres [dollars; Frenchspeakers in Louisiana still use the word piastre for dollar] on a credit arrangement for the period of time as herein set out. To wit: the said White will divest himself of possession and proprietorship of the said Negro Dick which he [White] will properly record in favor of the said Krebs and his heirs, and the said Krebs divests himself of possession of Round Island by this act, and the animals that are there, and he [Krebs] obligates himself to remit the appropriate deeds which are actually in the city [this could have been Mobile, but probably was New Orleans, especially if the island was a Spanish land grant to Krebs]. and the said Krebs will pass a valid bill of sale to the Island in favor of White and his heirs. And for the part of the sale amounting to 150 piastres, as above set out, he [White] will pay two young cows and their calves during the next spring at a value of 10 piastres for each cow and her calf, and after that he shall buy two cows and their calves every six months until the sum of 150 piastres shall be paid, but the full amount will be paid in two years, either in animals or in money. To this contract we obligate ourselves and our heirs. Done and signed by the contracting parties at the time and place above stated and sealed by the contracting parties in the presence of witnesses.

Well, there you have it. White was positioning himself nicely at the mouth of the Pascagoula River and on the offshore islands fully expecting that West Florida would fall like a ripened plum into the hands of the United States. If that happened, his investment in land at such an important location would certainly pay off.

If I can be of furtherr assistance, please contact me.

Sincerely,

Glenn R. Cornad,
Director

CITY OF LEGENDS—

Pascagoula, Mississippi

story and paintings by F. Wenderoth Saunders

PASCAGOULA, MISSISSIPPI is a city of legends, Indian burial mounds, colonial forts, antebellum houses, live oaks and shrimp and oyster boats "returning at sunset."

The name Pascagoula is arresting, a word you can wrap your tongue around and enjoy for its rich musical flavor. Before you reach the town it becomes a rhythmical refrain that blends with the surge of horsepower along U.S. 90.

Pascagoula, on U.S. 90, runs north and south along the river of the same name as it empties into the Gulf of Mexico. The town is thin at the waist where the highway cinches it. Before we knew it we had slipped through and reached the river, but we turned back quickly to go exploring.

At first glance, Pascagoula is modern and strictly business, but soon you sense among its citizens a romantic undercurrent that delights in restoring a landmark, staging a pageant or arranging a garden pilgrimage; it is a place where the bank manager is as interested in telling you about the legend of the origin of Spanish moss as he is about current assets.

←Longfellow House—an antebellum summer home.

(directions posted on Route 90) for here began one of the South's first settlements. The fort is the oldest building now standing in the Mississippi valley. In 1718 its architect, French naval officer Simon de la Pointe, erected the long, one-story, thick-walled garrison house despite Indian attempts to hold up his building permit. Prudently he caused a secret escape tunnel to be dug, its exit hidden at the edge of the bayou.

Today the interior of the fort contains a museum crammed with historical objects. In the adjacent cemetery, grave markers in French hint at some of the early tragedies in the settlement.

In 1730 there was a peaceful Teutonic invasion from the banks of the Rhine, when Franz von Krebs won the hand of one of the La Pointe daughters and settled near the fort. His inventive genius produced a successful cotton gin at a time when Eli Whitney had hardly learned his alphabet.

Three industrial booms have hit the town: lumbering in the early 1800's; government shipbuilding in World War I; and the World War II successor, the great Ingalls Yard with ten ways, each capable of turning out vessels six hundred feet long. This is Pascagoula's source of continuing prosperity.

Smaller yards along the river launch the finest shrimp and oyster boats. And chances are if you go duck hunting, your decoys came from the Pascagoula Decoy Company.

Follow the river bank from the main highway, pause at Lover's Oak and wait for the music of the Singing River. Pascagoula took its name from a handsome tribe of Indians that were greatly reduced in number when white colonization began. Legend tells of an Indian brave who met a maiden of the fierce Biloxi tribe and persuaded her to run away from her intended husband, the Biloxi chief. War followed and great losses were suffered. Rather than submit to serfdom, the main body of the tribe committed suicide. It was here that the Pascagoulas went chanting to their death. In yet another version of the legend Indian braves hidden in the Oak's branches serenaded their lady loves and the listening river learned to sing.

Mrs. Jack S. Addison
3236 Tallship Lane
Pensacola, FL 32526-2509

Dear Mrs. Addison:

Per our conversation, I enclose an inventory of the materials donated by Mrs. Ellen Foster. This collection (accession 86-04) is titled the Ellen Foster Collection and includes materials she donated in 1986 and 1992.

While our policy is not to duplicate entire collections to be placed in other libraries, I have indicated to you a willingness to provide photocopies of some items to you. I would appreciate your looking over the list to select those items that you consider most pertinent. It may be that you should share this inventory with the museum at Biloxi so they also have an idea of what research materials are available here.

Once you have decided what you wish photocopied, please give me a call. — don't think we need copies of newspaper clips

Sincerely yours,

Dean DeBolt

Sudden Death Comes To Mrs. Eugene Gautier

Mrs. Palmyre Elizabeth White Gautier, member of one of Pascagoula's oldest families and widely connected in this section, died suddenly Thursday morning of a heart ailment.

Mrs. Gautier, who would have been 80 years old on November 13, was the widow of Eugene Gautier and the mother of Harold W. Gautier, prominent Pascagoula attorney. She resided at 507 North Willow street.

Her death came as a particular shock in that she had apparently been in good health. She had complained of indigestion the night before and Thursday morning had laid down on her bed where she was found at 11:30 a. m.

Mrs. Gautier was born in New Orleans, one of the children of the late Denis P. and Jeanne Mercier White and granddaughter of the late Dr. Armand Mercier of that city. She was graduated from Dominican Academy on St. Charles avenue. The family came from New Orleans to Pascagoula in 1886 where the following year her father was drowned when caught in a squall while sailing in the Sound off the mouth of the Pascagoula river. She was married to Eugene Gautier in 1890 and they lived in Gautier at the "Old Place" for two years and then in their home between the Old Place and the Walter Gautier home until they built a new home and moved to the address on North Willow street where they had lived since.

In addition to her son, she is survived by five grandchildren, Harold W. Gautier, Jr., Mrs. D. E. Mahaffey of Atlanta, Ga., Mrs. T. A. Wilkerson of Columbus, O., Mrs. Warren L. Richardson of Alexandria, Va., and Bernard Gautier of Pascagoula; five great grandchildren; two brothers, G. W. White of Pascagoula and D. P. White of Le Mesa, Calif., and two sisters, Mrs. Jesse Higginbotham, Sr., of Pascagoula and Mrs. W. C. Hill of Moss Point. Her sisters, Mrs. F. J. Johnson, Sr., and Mrs. Martin Turnbull, died in Pascagoula some years ago. She is also survived by numerous nieces and nephews and cousins, both in Jackson county and New Orleans.

She was an active life long member of the Roman Catholic church and was active to the time of her death in church, society and civic affairs. She took an active part in the Altar Society of the church, was an active member of the National Council of Catholic Women, the local Red Cross chapter, the old Pascagoula Civic League and the auxiliaries of the American Legoin and 40 and 8, in which groups she held various offices.

Mr. Gautier preceded his wife in death, having died in 1944. He was in the lumber mill business and agent of the Standard Oil Company here and later served 12 years as City Commissioner of Public Works.

The funeral will be held Saturday but details had not been arranged as this paper went to press. The funeral will be conducted from Fails Funeral Home.

October 27, 1948.

Death of Mrs. Justine C. Krebs.

Mrs. Justine Sarrazin Krebs, widow of the late Armand Krebs, died in this city last Saturday afternoon, at the residence of her son-in-law, Mr. James A. Pelham, in Belfast Avenue, at the age of 63 years, 1 month and 17 days, after an illness of some months, brought on by a stroke of paralysis.

The funeral took place on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, from her late residence, conducted by Rev. Father O'Reilly, pastor of the Catholic church, interment being in the Catholic Cemetery in South Pascagoula.

Mrs. Krebs was born in New Orleans in 1854, and had lived in Pascagoula for 32 years. She was a devout member of the Catholic church, and had a large circle of friends who unite with the family in mourning her death. She was the mother of Mrs. J. A. Pelham of this city, and leaves two other daughters and one son, namely: Madames N. F. Miller and Nelo Ros, of El Paso, Texas, and Mr. Tom Krebs, of this city. She leaves two sisters and one brother, all living in New Orleans, Madames John Macheca and Chas. Sarrazin, and Mr. F. L. Sarrazin. Besides brothers and sisters she leaves nine grand children and numerous other relatives in this city and elsewhere.

DEATH OF A YOUTH.

Aristide Alexander Sward Lofwenadler, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. S. Lofwenadler, aged 12 years, 3 months and 16 days, died in this city last Wednesday night, Jan. 27th, at 11:30 o'clock, after a short illness. The funeral took place Thursday from the residence of his parents on Cedar street at 3 o'clock p. m., proceeding to the Church of Our Lady of Victories, thence to Krebs cemetery for interment, Rev. Father B. O'Reilly conducting the ceremonies. The Central High School scholars attended the funeral in a body and carried many beautiful floral offerings to the grave. To the bereaved parents we extend sincere sympathy in this hour of affliction.

DEATH OF MRS. SALLIE S. VALVERDE.

Died, at her home in East Side on Saturday morning, Jan. 30, at 8 o'clock, Mrs. Sallie Statum Valverde, aged 48 years, 3 months and 28 days. Mrs. Valverde was the widow of the late Charles W. Valverde, who was killed in his place of business at East Side about eighteen months ago. The funeral took place on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, interment being made in Machpelah cemetery, Rev. John Chipman, rector of St. John's Episcopal church, conducting the last sad rites of burial. She is survived by two children, a son and daughter, to whom the sympathy of the community is extended in this their hour of sorrow. Mrs. Valverde died possessed of considerable property in this city and at Rayne, La.

DEATH OF MRS. EUGENE BAPTISTE.

Died, in this city on Sunday night, Jan. 31, at 8:50 o'clock, Mrs. Eugene Krebs Baptiste, aged 92 years, 8 months and 24 days. The funeral took place on Monday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock from the family residence on Market street, and was attended by a large and representative body of citizens, who had enjoyed the acquaintance and friendship of this venerable woman for many long years. Rev. Father B. O'Reilly of the Church of Our Lady of Victories conducted the ceremonies, both at the house and grave, the interment being made in Pascagoula cemetery. Mrs. Baptiste was a native of this place, having been born at Old Pascagoula on the beach, and was connected with many of the first settlers in this county. Four children, Vincent Baptiste, Mrs. Catherine L. Clark and Mrs. Willie Krebs, of this city, and Mrs. T. F. Finch, of Howell, besides a number of grandchildren, survive her. To the family we extend sympathy in their hour of affliction.

INSCRIPTIONS (IN FRENCH) ON TOMBS IN KREBS CEMETERY ------(HARD BY THE OLD SPANISH FORT)

1. Rene' Krebs, Born February 6, 1790. Died December 6, 1851. Tomb erected by his brother

2. Here reposes Edward Krebs, son of Rene' and Marie, nee Dupont. His wife died November 29, 1849 at the age of 34. He is deeply regretted by his mother who was his only consolation in his moments of adversity. He leaves an orphan girl to cherish his memory.

3. Here reposes Nema Turpin, born in New Orleans, April 3, 1813. Died in Pascagoula October 23, 1836. Age 25½ years. His father cries his son struck down in his spring, and on whom rested his hopes for his old age, on a child cherished by his mother who pours tears. For you who are pouring those tears they have some chance but henceforth at peace and protected by the adored one.

4. Here reposes seven of the children of Rene' Krebs and of Marie born to his wife. All died in tender age.

5. Here reposes Catherine Krebs, wife of Bayile Krebs, died May 24, 1831. Age 33. Born 1798. She has bowed to the almighty decree. A good wife, a good mother. The foundation of her faith in dying she blessed by her saintly hands the children that were around her and asked for her tenderness.

Translated by Mr. Raoul DeMarcia: French Army Officer (retired) who visited the Fort March 16, 1953.

Mr. and Mrs. DeMarcia spent two hours exploring the Fort Museum and Cemetery. Was impressed by the preservation of the building which is similar to many old buildings still standing in France.

CEMETERIES

CEMETERY RECORDS

The cemetery records herewith presented are the source materials for many of the dates in family outlines. Some of the cemetery records are complete, but since it is obviously impossible for a book of this kind to include all the tombstone inscriptions in Jackson and George Counties, even if they were collected, selections have been made to complete or confirm family outlines. Also, since tombstone inscriptions on the graves of children do not materially help in genealogical research, in almost all cases they have been omitted.

Another omission, reluctantly made, is to leave out all sentimental verses or statements not relative to age, or family ties, or place of birth or death, or to military organizations.

However, as an introduction, the French inscriptions in the Krebs cemetery at the Old French Fort are given in their entirety together with the English translations. It should be said as a matter of explanation that many of the tombstones of the early English settlers in the Carolinas had just as elaborate inscriptions as are on these French markers but so far none of these have been found in this area.

RESIDENTS OF THE PASCAGOULAS DURING THE ENGLISH PERIOD

As Interpreted from Maps by George Gauld, 1768

Records are scarce for this period in Gulf Coast history. We must rely almost entirely on Catholic Church records and land records to create our family histories and genealogies. One source is that of George Gauld, surveyor and cartographer for the British government in the reign of King George III. The governors of both the provinces of Florida instructed that he[1]

"explore and investigate, with great Care and attention, the hitherto unknown Coast of that extensive Country, and to procure accurate Charts and Surveys of the said Coast, and of the principal Rivers and Harbours fit for Navigation...."

After the long journey along the lands bordering the Gulf of Mexico, he concentrated on the seacoast beyond the great bays of Mobile and Pensacola. He moored his ship, the Sir Edward Hawke neqr Dauphin Island and after being delayed for six days with squalls and moderate winds, he set out in the cutter with a crew of sixteen men to resume his work. He surveyed and drafted on his field sheets the coastline as far as the west arm of the river known then as now by the name Pascagoula. He ascended the east branch of the river some eight miles to "Pt. De l'auvergue" [the confluence of the Cedar River, [now Escatawpa River] at present-day Moss Point and the west branch about an equal distance. [2]

He moved back eastward along the shoreline to Bay de Baros [Bayou la Batre] then back to Pointe aux Chenes Bay [east Jackson county], and briefly examined part of the "Bay de Coussot".[3] [Bayou Casotte] Because there were so few people, I am sure that he was glad to find a place to refresh his supplies and talk with the residents, which could account for the extra attention in the Pascagoula Rivers area. After leaving Bayou Casotte and noting the beach front occupations, he passed Pascagoula Bluff and finally made his way into the west arm of the river. He then proceeded through a navigable cutoff to the east branch and thence back east toward the East Pascagoula River. He sounded over 10 feet of water in this east-west bayou, which was considerably more than the depth of the East Pascagoula River.

He then recorded his visit to the plantation of Hugo Krebs, near the south entrance to "a grand Baye" later called Krebs Lake. Gauld said that he "enjoyed the hospitality of the most prominent planter on the coast."[4] There were five lots drawn out, showing a division of the Krebs property. Perhaps the lots represented homesites of his families. By the time of Gauld's survey, Krebs's first wife Marie Joseph was deceased and he had remarried to Marie Anne Chauvin of New Orleans. Since the Krebs house is mentioned in many Church records of the Mobile Diocese, it was no doubt a center of the route between Mobile and New Orleans.

[1] George Gauld: Surveyor and Cartographer of the Gulf Coast, by John D. Ware, revised and completed by Robert R. Rea. 1982, Introduction, page xx. University Presses of Florida, Gainesville, FL.

[3] It is interesting to note that Bayou Casotte was one of the few bayous named by Gauld and still carries the name, being a major industrial port of Pascagoula.

[4] George Gauld: Surveyor and Cartographer of the Gulf Coast [as above noted.]

One of the marked lots probably accounts for the family cemetery, which is most likely the resting place of his father-in-law, Joseph Simon dit La Pointe and his wife, Catherine Doucin. La Pointe is credited with building the original part of the historic landmark known as the "Old Spanish Fort" which is the oldest residence in the Mississippi Valley. No doubt there were other family members and least a few sailors and other travelers buried in the old cemetery also.

Gauld's attention to detailing the entire river basin in his survey and notes indicated that he must have spent some extended time at the Krebs plantation. In describing the Pascagoula River, Gauld noted that it emptied through several mouths and that it was "navigable for upwards of 50 leagues to the heart of the Choctaw Nation". About twenty miles above its mouth the river divided into two branches, which descended southward about five or six miles apart. While the eastern branch of the Pascagoula River was not navigable or charted, today its deeply dredged channel accommodates ships to the modern facilities of the port of Pascagoula and lines up with the natural deep water channel by the west end of Petit Bois Island which Gauld first charted.

There were good plantations on the east side of the river, but the Indians, particularly the Choctaws, molested the inhabitants and killed their cattle. Some of these plantation owners noted further in this article obviously did not stay because there were no settlements or close neighbors to help fend off the Indians. The French had settled along the coast and got along with the Indians, but these settlers were moving into their territory, taking their hunting grounds and interfering with their access to the Pascagoula River and their initial rights to oyster beds in the coastal waters.

Further surveys and notes included Round Island, then westward noting the mouth of Graveline Bayou and Bellefontaine Point and on to the entrance to the Bay of Biloxi, Bay St. Louis, and the other islands.

Along the beach front, just east of the East Pascagoula River, Gauld drew a small square indicating a house, which may have been that of Hugo Krebs's son Francois Krebs. Francois was noted in later Spanish documents as having a part in the Spanish garrison at the Pascagoula Post. Another small square was drawn at the easternmost point of the mouth of the East river. Several early French families were living in the area in the 1720's that had moved on to New Orleans and other places by this time.

On Round Island, at the mouth of the East Pascagoula River, is noted an old house. Judging from later land records this must have been the house of one Moreau, whose widow married one of the Krebs sons.

Across the West Pascagoula, near the mouth, is "P'r Paquet ruin." Pierre Paquet I and and his wife Magdelaine most likely had a house there when they were first married, before their move to Mobile. In 1772, after Marie Martha Paquet married Jacob Henkle at Point Coupee, their first child was born in the Mobile Diocese district and it could be that they relocated to the "Paquet ruins" at that time. Further, Jacob Henkle's petition was granted in 1772. This property is located just above present-day Highway 90 at Gautier.

Two houses are noted at the mouth of the West river. Gauld's perspective seems to be off target somewhat, and Madame Catherine Baudreau's house sits near the point on a bank. The house to the northeast could have been one of her children, or perhaps a dairy barn. It is more likely that it was the house of her son Jean Baptiste Baudreau III and his wife, Marie Louise LaLancette [dit Fayard]. This family is included in a previous special French period edition of MCHGS. Their daughter Marguerite was to marry Edwin Lewis, who built the plantation house known as Oldfields; and another daughter, Angelique married Jacob Bang II. Catherine Baudreau was on the Pascagoula River to stay, having moved from New Orleans with her children after the separation from her husband in the late 1750's. She had bought the property from a man named Duvernay.

Catherine was still managing her affairs and was the head of the Baudreau families who were living on the coast during the English dominion. She was born in France, married Jean Baptiste Baudreau II at the house of La Pointe [now Krebs] during the French period; lived in New Orleans and had moved back to the Pascagoula River and was living under English rule. She was to live on and would die under the flag of Spain.
